16,000 patients lose Medi-Cal care

By DICK HOWLAND

The State Department of Health mailed letters Saturday telling 16,000 Medi-Cal recipients to find new sources of medical care in Long Beach, Compton and Orange County, because a pre-paid health program's Medi-Cal contract will not be renewed when it expires Tuesday.

Bob Nance, press secretary for the health department, said the contract of the Family Health Program (FHP), with headquarters in Long Beach, was not renewed because of "unresolved problems between FHP and the state attorney general's office" over FHP's non-profit status. FHP's involvement in a U.S. Senate subcommittee investigation was another factor, he said.

Medi-Cal recipients who have received pre-paid care for as long as seven years at FHP will now have to go to county hospitals or find private doctors who will accept Medi-Cal patients.

But Dr. Robert Gumbiner, executive director of FHP, said the program's former patients, mostly lower-income elderly and minority persons, will suffer hardships trying to find care elsewhere.

"Local physicians are not available or will not treat Medi-Cal patients because of the excessive paperwork, and county facilities are already overcrowded or too far away from patients who have no transportation," he said.

Gumbiner said FHP will file a court action for a restraining order against the state to prevent the discontinuance of care for Medi-Cal recipients, who "will be without realisticly accessible medical services" on "such short notice."

On Monday, FHP will seek a temporary injunction compelling "an orderly attempt to secure alternate sources of care for these people," Gumbiner said.

Nance responded that Los Angeles and Orange counties have "the West Coast's largest concentration of medical facilities, with adequate facilities to absorb FHP's Medi-Cal recipients."

And he said there is little legal grounds for a restraining order against the state. "There is no provision in the contract requiring that it be renewed," he said. "It's a two-party contract from which either party can legally withdraw when it expires."

Nance said FHP lost the contract because of the health program's dispute with Attorney General Evelle Younger, whose office filed a civil suit Feb. 18 in Los Angeles Superior Court against FHP.

'Sludge' sticky L.A. dilemma

By BRAD ALTMAN
Staff Writer

Off the coast of Palos Verdes, where deep ocean canyons yawn miles from shore, a long pipe ends.

There, in the length of a day, 350 million gallons of a gummy mixture — organic and industrial waste — flow from the pipe into the marine environment.

This sewage residue is called "sludge," a substance some say is hazardous to marine life. It is blamed for the erosion of fins on a fish called Dover sole, according to studies by the Coastal Water Research Project of El Segundo.

With concern for such delicate ocean ecosystems, the federal government's Environmental Protection Agency was established to administer the National Clean Water Act of 1971, which prohibits sludge dumping — everywhere, from the Redwood isles' brooks to Gulf Stream waters.

But in spite of the Clean Water Act, the sludge has continued to pour out because local bureaucrats collected $3.4 million and formed LA/OMA, an acronym for the Los Angeles-Orange County Metropolitan Area, "to study sewage problems."

As time ticked onward from 1971, the city of Los Angeles has continued filtering 80 per cent of its total sewage through the Hyperion Treatment Plant in Playa del Rey. From there, the stuff goes into the pipe.

Now, the State Water Resources Control Board, with EPA's blessing and authority, has told Los Angeles ocean-dumping must finally stop.

Sansinena probed for sabotage

Suspicious hole found in tanker

Coast Guard officials and federal bomb experts Saturday were examining a suspicious hole in the hull of the oil tanker Sansinena which may indicate the Liberian ship was sabotaged.

Officials said bomb technicians from the Treasury Department were examining a perforated hull remnant of the tanker which exploded Dec. 17 at the Union Oil Co. bulk loading pier. Nine men died from the unexplained blast and one is still missing.

Capt. James Atkinson, a member of the Long Beach-based Coast Guard panel which investigated the blast, said the experts were called "on the off-chance an external force caused the hole."

THE ABRUPT new line of investigation was prompted by discovery of a jagged hole about 10 feet in diameter in a portion of the tanker's hull which was below the water line of a forward cargo tank, investigators said.

Investigators said metal surrounding the hole appeared to have been bent inward, indicating the possibility of something other than an internal explosion.

"What we're trying to do is determine what caused that and we don't want anyone making any snap decisions," said Larry Cornelison, a Treasury Dept. investigator.

THE BOW of the wreckage was raised last week and taken to a San Pedro dock where the hole was discovered, investigators said.

After 10 days of testimony in Long Beach and San Diego, which spanned more than two months, a formal Coast Guard board of inquiry speculated the blast was caused by an unknown spark igniting a gas vapor cloud in the ship.

The board's findings have been forwarded to the Coast Guard commandant in Washington, D.C., for a final ruling.

Refugee tells massacre by Amin

By ALFRED ARAUJO

NAIROBI, Kenya (AP) — A Ugandan refugee was quoted Saturday as saying hundreds of tribesmen suspected of plotting against Uganda's President Idi Amin were strangled and clubbed to death Feb. 18 at that country's military police headquarters.

Geoffrey Mugabi said in an interview with the Daily Nation newspaper that he was in the prison the night of the slaughter, and the next day he and other prisoners spent six hours loading the mangled and crushed bodies into trucks.

"All the heads had been smashed in, and the floor was littered with eyes and teeth," Mugabi was quoted saying. "During the previous night we did not hear any shots— only some thudding noises from the adjoining rooms.

"We heard short cries and then sudden silence. I think the victims were strangled and then had their heads smashed."

Mugabi, a craftsman, said he was seized by Amin's security forces Feb. 17 and thrown in a cell at the Makindye military police headquarters in the capital city of Kampala because he once had been a supporter of the party led by former President Milton Obote, whom Amin overthrew in January 1971.

He said he was freed three days later.

Mugabi's story was the latest in a swelling flow of unconfirmed reports from Uganda that thousands of people, primarily members of the northern Langi and Acholi tribes, have been slaughtered since Amin claimed he uncovered and crushed a plot to overthrow him two weeks ago.

According to the Ugandan strongman, the plot was masterminded by Obote and centered among the predominantly Christian Langis and Acholis.

The reports, and particularly the death of Anglican Archbishop Janani Luwum in what the government said was an auto accident, have drawn cries of outrage from around the world.

Amid the mounting tension, Amin on Friday ordered all the Americans in Uganda — about 240 persons, many of them missionaries — not to leave the country

Vance says Uganda 'no crisis'

WASHINGTON (AP) — Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance said Saturday the 240 Americans in Uganda are safe and that he does not believe the situation will develop into a crisis.

Vance made the assessment following a meeting at the State Department with U.N. Secretary General Kurt Waldheim.

Ugandan President Idi Amin has called for a meeting Monday in Kampala with the 240 Americans living in the East African country. He has refused to allow any of them to leave prior to the meeting, but Ugandan officials say the Americans are not being held hostage and that they will be free to stay or leave after the meeting.

Both President Carter and the State Department appeared to be seeking to downplay the situation. When asked to characterize the Uganda problem, Vance responded: "I do not believe it will be a crisis situation, I certainly hope not."

The White House released a statement Saturday saying it welcomed "assurances that the government of Uganda intends no harm to Americans there."

The statement expressed continued concern about the welfare of Americans in Uganda and said the United States "looks to Ugandan authorities to insure that Americans and other foreigners within that country are protected as is customary under international law."

White House Deputy Press Secretary Rex Granum said the statement stemmed from the Ugandan radio broadcast Friday evening thanking U.S. citizens in the east African nation for their work there and stating that there is no cause for alarm about the meeting that Amin called for Monday.

MEETING POSTPONED

NAIROBI, Kenya (AP) — Ugandan President Idi Amin has postponed his meeting with some 240 Americans living in Uganda from Monday until Wednesday, Uganda Radio announced today. The government-controlled radio said the postponement was made after the Americans, mostly missionaries scattered in small groups across the East African nation, asked for more time to prepare for the meeting in Kampala. The radio also quoted Amin as thanking the American missionaries for the work they are doing in Uganda.

Who is this man Field Marshal Idi Amin, who dares do the things he does and say the things he says?

"I am a pure son of Africa," says Idi Amin.

"The greatest brute an African mother has ever brought to life," says Milton Obote, whom Amin ousted as Uganda's president on Jan. 25, 1971.

"An incredible person (who) certainly isn't mad . . . very shrewd, very cunning and a born leader. . . . If he was to be murdered in 10 days, I would not be surprised. If he lasted 10 years, I would not be surprised," said Maj. Iain Grahame, Amin's former commander in the British army, after a visit to Uganda in 1975.

Amin's years of absolute power—he is president for life—have been marked by accusations of terrible brutality and buffoonery, leaving in the minds of many outside Uganda the image of a tragi-comic national leader.

It is said Idi Amin's Uganda is a nation living in terror—a place where, it has been charged, 50,000 to 300,000 persons have been massacred in the last six years. But these charges have never been fully documented and many times have come from foreign leaders or others who are politically opposed to Amin. News is rigidly censored in Uganda, and travel there by Western correspondents is sharply restricted.

Last week Idi Amin—humiliated by last July's Israeli commando raid on Entebbe to rescue hostages of a hijacked Air France jetliner—was again making headlines around the world.

It began with his charges that a plot was afoot in Uganda to overthrow him. Anglican Archbishop Janini Luwum of Uganda and two government officials were accused on taking part in the plot, and shortly afterward the Ugandan government radio announced they were killed in an automobile crash while trying to overpower the driver. Amin called it "a punishment of God." But other sources chargded that the three men were deliberately killed. A Tanzanian government newspaper said Amin himself shot the archbishop. He denied this.

Amin then charged that the United States, Britain or Israel—he did not specify which one—planned to send paratroopers into Uganda from an aircraft carrier to kill leading officials and to seize several towns. He also charged that an invasion force had been mounted by neighboring Tanzania.

Then on Friday, after President Carter told reporters in Washington that events in Uganda "disgusted the entire civilized world," Amin barred the 240 or so Americans the State Department says are living in Uganda from leaving his country

After 20 years, investigator still hunts clues about boy

For 20 years Remington Bristow has been trying to learn the name of the boy in the box.

On Saturday, as he has for two decades, the retired investigator for the Philadelpha medical examiner's office said a prayer at the child's grave, and this year, because it has been 20 years, a clergyman joined him.

About 50 persons, including film crews from local television stations, attended the ceremony.

"Maybe the mother or father will watch one of these programs and know that somebody still cares, and they can come forward and say: 'Yes, this is my boy'," Bristow said.

The dead child, a white boy about 4 years old, was found in 1957 in a cardboard box. Bristow was assigned to the case.

Bristow became obsessed with finding the youngster's identity. He traveled all over the country, offering $1,000 of his own money as a reward for information. All in vain.

"The boy was undernourished, meaning that he came fom a poor family and probably an uneducated family. When he died — how, we do not know — he was bathed, his hair was cut, his nails were cleaned and he was laid gently in a box covered with a blanket," Bristow said.

"He was taken to a religious area where the parents probably were going to bury him, but they became frightened and fled," he theorized.

Will Bristow ever accept the fact that the boy's identity may never be known?

"Everybody has hopes," he said. "The parents could still come forth. This has become part of my life."

Hope lingers a year after kidnap

Combined News Services

A full year after leftists abducted Ohio executive William F. Niehous in Caracas, Venezuela, his family, his company and the Venezuelan government are still waiting for word of his fate.

Niehous, 45, managed Venezuelan operations of Owens-Illinois Inc., the multinational container company from Toledo, Ohio. A group of men took Niehous from his spacious home in suburban Caracas last Feb. 27 as he and his wife, Donna, dressed for a party.

NOTHING HAS been heard from him since last June, when a Roman Catholic priest delivered the last of a series of letters his kidnapers had let him write.

"I'm in OK health, but very sad and depressed mentally," Niehous wrote.

Venezuelan police say all those responsible for the kidnaping have either been arrested or identified.

Two Venezuelan congressmen and two students are being held in a military prison on charges of kidnaping and military rebellion. An undetermined number of people are still being hunted. Fourteen other people arrested earlier have been quietly released.

THE KIDNAPERS issued a flurry of communiques in the three months after Niehous was abducted, then fell silent after warning they were prepared to hold him "a long time" until their demands were met.

The government banned publication of the communiques, but Owens-Illinois defied the order and arranged for the printing of a political manifesto of the kidnapers in three foreign newspapers. It also paid a $116 bonus to each of its Venezuelan employes.

Other demands, including distribution of food to the poor and payment of a $3.5 million ransom, have not been met.

"You get up every morning thinking today may be the day," Donna Niehous told reporters in Toledo, Ohio, this past week. "I don't have any positive assurances but I'm very optimistic. I can't tell you exactly why."

Niehous' mother Ruth says she, too, is optimistic.

"I HAVE had no feeling that anything tragic has happened to him," she said.

Donna Niehous has offered to pay $485,000 for information but has gotten nowhere.

"I can't even begin to imagine why they are still holding him," she says. "But I don't know why they took him in the first place."

The center-left government, which ordered Owens-Illinois to sell all its Venezuelan holdings for defying the publicity ban, says it is still doing all it can to locate Niehous.

The kidnapers identified themselves as members of a previously unknown extremist group opposing multinational corporations and capitalism. They said they had kidnaped Niehous because he and Owens-Illinois had meddled in Venezuelan political and economic affairs.

He also wrote three columns each week.

TOKYO — China charged Saturday that the Soviet navy was "stretching (its) tentacles to the South Pacific," posing a grave threat to the region, according to a Peking broadcast monitored here.

The broadcast quoted the official Chinese newspaper People's Daily as saying a number of nations including Australia have warned against the Soviet Union's "aggressive ambitions" and are strengthening their defenses.

"The fast-growing Soviet naval strength prompted the new czars in the Kremlin to make a frantic attempt to realize the old czars' long-cherished dream of grabbing ice-free ports on the southern oceans," the paper said.

Election protest

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador — About 40,000 antigovernment demonstrators remained encamped downtown Saturday night despite a tense moment earlier in the day when riot police fired into the air to scatter charging protesters. Thousands of demonstrators, led by El Salvador's center-left political opposition, have occupied a plaza since Thursday, demanding that the results of last Sunday's presidential election be thrown out. They contend that the ruling National Conciliation Party used massive fraud to win the presidency for another five years.

Accord in Lebanon

BEIRUT, Lebanon — Palestinian guerrillas have agreed to pull back from south Lebanese border regions abutting Israel to avert a showdown with right-wing Christians that could rekindle Lebanon's civil war, government sources said Saturday. In return, the sources said, Syria agreed that the Syrian-dominated Arab League peacekeeping army would not storm tank-ringed Palestinian refugee camps in Beirut to disarm guerrillas by force.

Cyprus peace hope

LONDON — U.S. presidential envoy Clark Clifford flew in from Cyprus on Saturday and said his talks with Cypriot, Greek and Turkish leaders gave him "a very real hope" for a settlement on the divided island by the end of 1977. The 70-year-old lawyer told an airport news conference that Greek and Turkish Cypriots both said they were "prepared to get down to constructive negotiating" in talks scheduled for March 31 in Vienna.

Fuel joblessness declines

NATIONAL

WASHINGTON — The more than 1.2 million job losses caused by fuel shortages early this month were down to 218,000 last week as plants and businesses continued to reopen, the Commerce Department said Saturday. The number of people thrown out of work by shutdowns forced by fuel shortages could drop below 200,000 early this week if present trends continue, the department said. It said the only states still reporting fuel-shortage unemployment of 30,000 persons or more are Alabama, Ohio and West Virginia.

Chemical loss suit

CADILLAC, Mich. — A Michigan farm family, complaining it lost more than 100 cows and calves to contamination of livestock feed from the chemical known as PBB, is asking for more than $1 million in damages from the chemical manufacturer and the feed packager in a suit scheduled for trial Monday.

Small busing march

LOUISVILLE, Ky. — Waving placards and shouting slogans, about 200 persons marched through the streets of downtown Louisville Saturday to protest a court-ordered desegregation order issued in 1975. Protesters carried Confederate and American flags. The familiar chant, "Hell no, we won't bus" echoed again in the streets, but not as loudly as in the past.

Free food stamps

BUFFALO, N.Y. — The great food stamp giveaway ended Saturday with an estimated 525,000 persons, nearly half the county's population, getting $23 million worth of free food stamps, officials said.

Under the program, anyone who lost at least one day's income because of storm-related problems was eligible for stamps, regardless of his income or amount of savings.

Sanity tests ordered

SYRACUSE, N.Y. — A judge on Saturday ordered a psychiatric examination for an unemployed construction worker accused of holding a pregnant teen-ager and her baby hostage after shooting a man to death in an argument over a pack of cigarettes. Leroy Cotton, 30, was held without bail after arraignment before City Court Judge James J. Fahey on one count of second-degree murder and various lesser counts.

'Tap' turned off

CINCINNATI — City officials ordered intake valves to Cincinnati's drinking water supply closed Saturday as a second carbon tetrachloride spill in a week moved down the Ohio River. The city has a three-day supply of water from other sources.

Sugar ruling put off

WASHINGTON — Carter administration officials postponed a decision Saturday on steps to aid the nation's ailing sugar industry, including possible tightened import quotas that would raise prices for consumers. The Economic Policy Board decided that no recommendations should be sent to the White House until the U.S. International Trade Commission completes a parallel study on the domestic impact of sugar imports.

After 20 years, investigator still hunts clues about boy

For 20 years Remington Bristow has been trying to learn the name of the boy in the box.

On Saturday, as he has for two decades, the retired investigator for the Philadelpha medical examiner's office said a prayer at the child's grave, and this year, because it has been 20 years, a clergyman joined him.

About 50 persons, including film crews from local television stations, attended the ceremony.

"Maybe the mother or father will watch one of these programs and know that somebody still cares, and they can come forward and say: 'Yes, this is my boy'," Bristow said.

The dead child, a white boy about 4 years old, was found in 1957 in a cardboard box. Bristow was assigned to the case.

Bristow became obsessed with finding the youngster's identity. He traveled all over the country, offering $1,000 of his own money as a reward for information. All in vain.

"The boy was undernourished, meaning that he came fom a poor family and probably an uneducated family. When he died — how, we do not know — he was bathed, his hair was cut, his nails were cleaned and he was laid gently in a box covered with a blanket," Bristow said.

"He was taken to a religious area where the parents probably were going to bury him, but they became frightened and fled," he theorized.

Will Bristow ever accept the fact that the boy's identity may never be known?

"Everybody has hopes," he said. "The parents could still come forth. This has become part of my life."

Hope lingers a year after kidnap

Combined News Services

A full year after leftists abducted Ohio executive William F. Niehous in Caracas, Venezuela, his family, his company and the Venezuelan government are still waiting for word of his fate.

Niehous, 45, managed Venezuelan operations of Owens-Illinois Inc., the multinational container company from Toledo, Ohio. A group of men took Niehous from his spacious home in suburban Caracas last Feb. 27 as he and his wife, Donna, dressed for a party.

NOTHING HAS been heard from him since last June, when a Roman Catholic priest delivered the last of a series of letters his kidnapers had let him write.

"I'm in OK health, but very sad and depressed mentally," Niehous wrote.

Venezuelan police say all those responsible for the kidnaping have either been arrested or identified.

Two Venezuelan congressmen and two students are being held in a military prison on charges of kidnaping and military rebellion. An undetermined number of people are still being hunted. Fourteen other people arrested earlier have been quietly released.

THE KIDNAPERS issued a flurry of communiques in the three months after Niehous was abducted, then fell silent after warning they were prepared to hold him "a long time" until their demands were met.

The government banned publication of the communiques, but Owens-Illinois defied the order and arranged for the printing of a political manifesto of the kidnapers in three foreign newspapers. It also paid a $116 bonus to each of its Venezuelan employes.

Other demands, including distribution of food to the poor and payment of a $3.5 million ransom, have not been met.

"You get up every morning thinking today may be the day," Donna Niehous told reporters in Toledo, Ohio, this past week. "I don't have any positive assurances but I'm very optimistic. I can't tell you exactly why."

Niehous' mother Ruth says she, too, is optimistic.

"I HAVE had no feeling that anything tragic has happened to him," she said.

Donna Niehous has offered to pay $465,000 for information but has gotten nowhere.

"I can't even begin to imagine why they are still holding him," she says. "But I don't know why they took him in the first place."

The center-left government, which ordered Owens-Illinois to sell all its Venezuelan holdings for defying the publicity ban, says it is still doing all it can to locate Niehous.

The kidnapers identified themselves as members of a previously unknown extremist group opposing multinational corporations and capitalism. They said they had kidnaped Niehous because he and Owens-Illinois had meddled in Venezuelan political and economic affairs.

Television's Johnny Carson and wife Joanna held a press conference prior to his receiving a Man of the Year award from Harvard's Hasty Pudding Club Friday. Carson said he welcomed the election of President Carter because it provided fresh comedy material. Example: "I'm glad they found a school for Amy. Now they're looking for one for Billy."

Syndicated columnist and humorist Bill Vaughan died in Kansas City Saturday of lung cancer at age 61. He also wrote three columns each week.

Suicide attempt

Rudolf Hess' son confirmed Saturday that his father, former top deputy of Adolf Hitler, attempted suicide in West Berlin's Spandau Prison this week. The 82-year-old Hess, since 1966 the sole inmate at Spandau, tried to slash his wrists with a knife but was stopped at the last minute, his son said. The son did not say whether Hess had actually injured himself.

MOSCOW — Soviet authorities refused Saturday to release figures on the number of killed and injured in Friday night's hotel fire, but unofficial medical sources said there were more than 20 dead.

Fire, police, ambulance and hospital officials refused to give any comprehensive information on casualties from the blaze, which raged for six hours through the Hotel Rossiya near the Kremlin.

A spokesman for the U.S. Embassy said that no Americans had been reported among the dead, and no Americans had been listed as missing. Three were hospitalized for smoke inhalation.

Manager's comp

I own a fourplex and rent one unit to a couple at a reduced rate in exchange for yard work and other light maintenance. Although I carry liability insurance, I am told that now I also need workers' compensation, which will cost $300 a year and will require a rent increase of $6.25 a month per unit. My managers have agreed to sign an affidavit absolving me of any responsibility where this coverage would apply. Would this be legal? A.J.C., Lakewood.

No. Neither they nor your tenants can exempt you from the law, according to a legal adviser for the Workers' Compensation Appeals Board in Los Angeles. However, he acknowledged that if you do not carry the insurance and your managers never file a claim against you, no one will know you are technically violating the law. But such a course leaves you highly vulnerable. If an employe was injured on the job and decided to file for workers' compensation, your failure to comply would be brought to light. There has been much confusion lately over workers' compensation, since legislation which went into effect Jan. 1 extends the benefits to both full-time and part-time household employes. This means that persons employing even babysitters or gardeners on a permanent basis must pay workers' compensation premiums for them. Urgency legislation to delay for at least one year the implementation of this new law was introduced by Assemblyman Richard Robinson, D-Santa Ana, and has passed the State Assembly. The bill, AB133, now is in the Senate Industrial Relations Committee and could be referred to still another committee before it is voted on by the Senate, an aide for Robinson told Action Line. This law doesn't affect your situation, however. You are obligated to carry the insurance, since your managers technically are working for you in your business.

Black lung

My husband worked in the coal mines for about 40 years and now has black lung disease. We have been trying to get him special benefits for this since 1974 through the U.S. Labor Department, but can't get anywhere with them. He is very ill with the disease and we need some help. Mrs. W.G.H., Paramount.

Your husband has been given several series of respiratory tests and chest X rays and has been judged by the Department of Labor's division of coal mine workers' compensation not to be totally disabled by pneumoconiosis, or black lung. These benefits are awarded only to those victims of the disease who suffer from complicated, not simple, black lung and who are considered totally disabled. Government officials feel your husband's disabilities are not caused entirely by pneumoconiosis. The government's methods of examination and diagnosis of the disease have been criticized by some doctors, who say X rays of black lung spots are extremely difficult to read even for the most skilled radiologists. Some physicians believe many miners suffering serious ill effects from the disease have been denied benefits because diagnostic methods may not have been thorough enough.

Burned up

Last October there was a fire at Fravell Meat Co. in Torrance, where I rented a frozen food locker. I had 12 14-pound salmon, 40 quarts of fresh frozen berries, plus a lot of meat, which was destroyed in the fire. I keep calling the insurance company to find out when I will get reimbursed for my loss, but just get the run-around. Can you help me on this? R.S., Long Beach.

You eventually will receive a settlement, but it may take several more months, said a spokesman for Employers Casualty Insurance Co. in Pasadena. He explained that Fravell Meat Co. had $30,000 coverage for customer goods and rented out 500 lockers. The rental agreement stipulated that the contents of each locker were insured against fire for not more than $100. The insurance company first considered dividing the $30,000 equally among the locker holders, until they realized that some lockers were practically empty at the time of the fire, while others contained very valuable meat. "To send $60 to the guy with one albacore in his locker would be very unfair to the guy who lost four venison," he said, "so we tendered the $30,000 in trust to Los Angeles County Superior Court, case No. C184482, to let them decide how the money should be disbursed." Charles L. Fonarow, of the law firm Yusim, Cassidy, Stein & Hanger, 8383 Wilshire Blvd., Beverly Hills, is the attorney for Employers Casualty. His secretary told Action Line she is notifying all the customers this month of the legal action being taken.

We have been trying to get him special benefits for this since 1974 through the U.S. Labor Department, but can't get anywhere with them. He is very ill with the disease and we need some help. Mrs. W.G.H., Paramount.

Your husband has been given several series of respiratory tests and chest X rays and has been judged by the Department of Labor's division of coal mine workers' compensation not to be totally disabled by pneumoconiosis, or black lung. These benefits are awarded only to those victims of the disease who suffer from complicated, not simple, black lung and who are considered totally disabled. Government officials feel your husband's disabilities are not caused entirely by pneumoconiosis. The government's methods of examination and diagnosis of the disease have been criticized by some doctors, who say X rays of black lung spots are extremely difficult to read even for the most skilled radiologists. Some physicians believe many miners suffering serious ill effects from the disease have been denied benefits because diagnostic methods may not have been thorough enough.

Burned up

Last October there was a fire at Fravell Meat Co. in Torrance, where I rented a frozen food locker. I had 12 14-pound salmon, 40 quarts of fresh frozen berries, plus a lot of meat, which was destroyed in the fire. I keep calling the insurance company to find out when I will get reimbursed for my loss, but just get the run-around. Can you help me on this? R.S., Long Beach.

You eventually will receive a settlement, but it may take several more months, said a spokesman for Employers Casualty Insurance Co. in Pasadena. He explained that Fravell Meat Co. had $30,000 coverage for customer goods and rented out 500 lockers. The rental agreement stipulated that the contents of each locker were insured against fire for not more than $100. The insurance company first considered dividing the $30,000 equally among the locker holders, until they realized that some lockers were practically empty at the time of the fire, while others contained very valuable meat. "To send $60 to the guy with one albacore in his locker would be very unfair to the guy who lost four venison," he said, "so we tendered the $30,000 in trust to Los Angeles County Superior Court, case No. C184482, to let them decide how the money should be disbursed." Charles L. Fonarow, of the law firm Yusim, Cassidy, Stein & Hanger, 8383 Wilshire Blvd., Beverly Hills, is the attorney for Employers Casualty. His secretary told Action Line she is notifying all the customers this month of the legal action being taken.

By MARGARET GENTRY
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — At George's age, any other kid might be tinkering with a car, cramming for exams, going out with girls, agonizing over what to make of the many years of life stretching ahead.

George is doing none of those things. He sits on Death Row waiting for the state to kill him. He is 17 years old.

George, Rodney and Sammy and perhaps a dozen others have killed, and now the state insists that they, too, shall die.

They are children in the eyes of society because they have not passed through the rites of adulthood, finished school, taken a steady job, established a home of their own, started a family. They have not staked a claim as a grownup in the community.

By the calendar, too, they are children. George is the youngest, 15 at the time he slammed a rock into Pamela's head and killed her. Rodney was 16 when he shot and killed Tom. Sammy was 17 when Joan died by his hand.

BUT THEY committed a very adult crime — murder. Under today's laws, and with statistics showing an increase in violent juvenile crime, the children will not be spared by the juries.

"I guess there is something particularly heinous about the crime that they feel the person, despite his age, is a monster and should be destroyed," said E. Barrett Prettyman, a Washington lawyer and foe of the death penalty.

The children are among 358 prisoners on Death Rows in 20 states awaiting execution in the electric chair or the gas chamber, by hanging or before a firing squad. Just how many children is difficult to say because of the paucity of research onthe subject and because of confusion about the legal status of capital punishment laws in several states.

"Thou shalt give life for life, eye for eye . . . wound for wound." — Exodus 21:23-25, The Old Testament.

The shots that rang out in Utah, cutting down Gary Gilmore last month, ended a 10-year hiatus on capital punishment in the United States, but only the capital punishment laws of three states — Texas, Georgia and Florida — specifically have been ruled acceptable by the U.S. Supreme Court.

Florida is where George waits. Georgia is where Sammy waits.

RODNEY waits in Nebraska, where earlier this month that state's death penalty was upheld by the Nebraska Supreme Court. The decision is expected to be appealed to the nation's high court.

Lawyers and judges on both sides of the death penalty debate agree that it's inevitable that some youngsters convicted of brutal murders will be executed if the public continues to accept capital punishment. "I think there's no question about that," said U.S. Circuit Judge J. Skelly Wright of the District of Columbia.

It may be repulsive to a society that dotes on its children, but it is nothing new.

From data compiled by the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, foe of the death penalty:

This country has executed 126 persons who were 18 or younger, and 94 of them were black. The youngest was 14-year-old George Stinney Jr., a black electrocuted in South Carolina in 1944 for murder. The youngest girl was Virginia Christian, also black, 17 when she was electrocuted in Virginia in 1912 for murder.

The first on record was Henry Welcome, race unknown, 18 when executed in Vermont in 1971 for murder. The most recent was Joe Henry Johnson, black, 17 when executed in 1961 in Alabama for murder.

Arkansas lawyer Jimmie Wilson speaking about one teen-ager, Henry Lee Giles (Giles was 18 when he was arrested for killing a woman during a shoe store robbery): "I tried to explain to him what electrocution meant, but he just couldn't understand me. Finally he understood when someone at the prison told him he was going to be made into barbecued chicken." Giles is black and, Wilson says, mentally retarded.

THE STATE laws upheld by the Supreme Court last July require that certain mitigating circumstances, including a defendant's youth, must be taken into account in imposing a sentence of death.

A survey of 32 state statutes on the books at the time of the high court's ruling turned up only seven which absolutely forbade executing persons under a certain age. Defendants under 18 at the time of the crime could not be executed in Colorado, Connecticut, Maryland, New York and New Mexico.

AP ILLUSTRATION BY DEAN WAITE

That also was the minimum age in California, but a state court recently struck down the death penalty law for reasons unrelated to age. New Hampshire set the minimum age at 17.

Though a number of states include youth as a mitigating factor, the legislation suggests that age has not been an important issue in the death penalty debates across the country.

One reason is that most states allow children to be tried in juvenile court, where the death penalty cannot be imposed.

But the National Council on Crime and Delinquency reports a trend among the states to lower the juvenile court age and send more teen-agers into adult court.

THAT HAS followed an apparent increase in youth crime — usually vandalism, purse-snatching and mugging, but sometimes murder. The FBI found a 28 per cent increase in the number of persons under 18 arrested for murder from 1970 through 1975. The number of adults arrested for murder during the period rose 22 per cent.

"Justice for the child means exactly that, and there can be no justice in executing a child, any child, anywhere." — Report of a University of Chicago conference of judges, lawyers, teachers, social workers about 17 years ago.

The case histories of George and Rodney and Sammy sound like so many other dramas of death. There are the victims. There are the survivors, finding no comfort in the notion that a mere stripling hurled such grief upon them.

As Omaha lawyer John Fahey told it, Rodney Stewart "was a 16-year-old high school junior, kind of introverted, shy, and he stammered." A black youth, he lived with his family in the predominantly black section of town. He had never been in trouble with the law.

THEN HE fell in with "two kids from the west side of town, the wealthy area," Fahey continued. Thomas Ehlers, 18, and Daniel Evans, 19, were white, they were older, and they had a deal for Rodney. The deal was pushing marijuana, and "Rodney was getting the short end of it," said Fahey, who represented him at the trial.

One thing led to another, and the three got into a fight. With his father's pistol, Rodney shot Ehlers in the head and killed him, sprayed gasoline on the white youths' van and set it on fire. Evans escaped and testified against Rodney.

"Our contention," said Fahey, "was that this was a life and death situation for Rodney."

But Rodney was convicted, and Judge Theodore Richling sentenced him to death. So in the summer of 1975, Nebraska faced the prospect of its first execution in 17 years.

According to prosecutor Joseph Briley, Sammy Gibson "was just a run of the mill 17-year-old" when he killed and raped Joan Bryan in her Gray, Ga., home while her 5-year-old daughter Stacey watched. Gibson is black, Mrs. Bryan was white.

Mayors miffed at Carter's budget

By JONATHAN WOLMAN
AP Urban Affairs Writer

WASHINGTON — President Carter's first federal spending plan reveals increased aid to financially strapped American cities, but an influential mayors' group says Carter "has ignored the need for new social initiatives," such as health insurance or welfare reform.

Carter's budget would increase funds in areas such as public works and community development, but Carter seeks cutbacks in programs to battle urban crime, and he seeks no increase in job opportunities for teen-agers in the central cities.

Many mayors had hoped Carter would seek to put into effect the initial steps of a national health insurance program and a welfare reform package. However, Carter seeks funds only to conduct studies for such sweeping changes.

The U.S. Conference of Mayors, in a budget analysis released Saturday, said: "In many budget areas, important urban programs have been cut below fiscal 1977 levels or their growth restrained to rates of increase well below the inflation rate."

City officials say Carter may have deliberately short-changed the domestic programs, believing Congress would seek higher spending in these areas no matter what levels he set. In fact, Congress is expected to double Carter's request for $2 billion in public works jobs aid.

THE MAYORS' conference praised increases in community development and antirecession aid, but said the Carter budget is inadequate for mass-transit and youth-employment needs.

Another urban lobby group, the larger and more conservative National League of Cities, expressed dismay at cuts in crime-fighting funds.

With summer approaching, city officials are afraid that continued high unemployment among city teen-agers could lead to trouble in the streets.

"No new funds are proposed for either the Title I jobs training program or the summer youth program," noted the League of Cities. "... There is no recognition of the impact of inflation."

Big-city mayors who met with Carter during December came away with the impression "that he was extremely sensitive to the needs of the cities," says John Gunther, director of the Conference of Mayors. "... Perhaps we were encouraged beyond reality."

The first budget by a Democratic president in eight years is based largely on the one submitted by his predecessor, Republican Gerald Ford. Gunther called the Ford budget plan "vindictive to the cities" and complained that Carter built his budget around the Ford proposal, "a document that contained far too little money for the cities.

"Now I know people will say we're painting a bleak picture because the mayors always want more money, but I can't paint the picture any worse than it really is," Gunther said. "The clock is ticking in our cities, and the time for reversing these declines is getting shorter."

UNEMPLOYMENT remains well above average in many large and small cities throughout the nation, and some cities are rapidly decaying because recent financial troubles leave little taxpayer money to pay for maintenance of municipal facilities and services.

"The relief which the cities expected from President Carter is still more promise than reality," according to the conference's budget analysis. The League of Cities concluded that "the cities will gain much" from the Carter budget compared to Ford's, but said, "The Carter revisions are more intimation than declaration."

By that, the league was noting that Carter committed himself to no new urban programs, either for the coming 18 months — through the 1978 fiscal year — or beyond. Though Carter made no promises, urban advocates had hoped he would make a major effort to arrest urban decline similar to the "New Frontier" and "Great Society" initiatives of his Democratic predecessors.

Carter's budget would restore millions of dollars that Ford had proposed to cut from urban programs, but it retains cuts in key areas such as the Economic Development Administration, the Community Services Administration and the Law Enforcement Assistance Administration.

"This reduction in funds for cities' economic development programs is in direct contradiction to President Carter's commitment to a strategy of substantial economic stimulus," said the mayors' conference.

Despite dissatisfaction with the budget, Gunther said the mayors' conference continues to have high hopes that Carter will develop a strong national urban policy.

To add clout — so no more "studies" could postpone its order — a deadline was announced. The pipe must be shut off by April 1, 1980 or the city will be fined $31,000 a day.

Chances are court litigation will push that date into the next decade. But the city of Los Angeles sooner or later will face an unenviable dilemma: What can it do with its daily millions of gallons of unsightly and odorous globs?

(Long Beach has an inland sanitation treatment plant that drys sludge and carts it to the city of Carson, where it's changed into fertilizer.)

Burn it? Out of the question. Even backyard incinerators were outlawed in 1957.

One answer is through the courts. Two weeks ago Los Angeles City Councilman Zev Yaroslavsky and three other councilmembers filed a complicated, 46-page lawsuit against the federal government. The suit claims the EPA didn't comply with the law when it ordered Los Angeles to stop dumping sludge into the ocean.

The youthful councilman told a visitor to his Fifth District office in Los Angeles recently that what bothers him, "is the federal government's arrogance."

"Let's assume sludge is harmful to fish — although the best scientific evidence I've heard is that sludge is more beneficial than harmful.

"I mean, who do we care more about — fish or humans?"

Another possible answer to the dilemma is to dump the sludge at a land site, known as the Palos Verdes sanitary landfill, situated on county-owned land adjacent to the 8,400 residents of Rolling Hills Estates at 26301 S. Crenshaw Blvd — 10 miles west of downtown Long Beach.

A 20-year-old landfill, the 172-acre site will be filled to capacity (with trash depths of up to 200 feet) by 1980. Nevertheless, the city of Los Angeles is eyeing the site as a good place to dump sludge — and Rolling Hills Estates' response is an emphatic "No."

For one thing, officials say, Los Angeles already has a dump of its own in West Los Angeles. But the dump is presently closed.

If Los Angeles doesn't open it, all that trash from the West Los Angeles area very likely would be shipped to Palos Verdes landfill. And although that would shorten the dump's life — and get the ground seeded and converted into a park and municipal golf course that much sooner — residents don't want the added traffic congestion that the business would bring.

ONCE Palos Verdes closes, there will only be five county-owned dumps left in the Southland. They are now operated by County Sanitation Districts, which provide sewage treatment and disposal needs for two-thirds of the county's 72 cities with their seven million residents. There are also 10 private dumps.

Although the sanitation districts have a governing board composed of city mayors and the five-member County Board of Supervisors, local cities issue conditional use permits for periods of time that, in effect, tell the board how the dump will be operated.

The local jurisdiction ruling over the Palos Verdes landfill is the city of Rolling Hills Estates.

Harry Peacock, Rolling Hills city manager, whose office window looks out at a picture-postcard scene of a grassy, landscaped park, says his city council doesn't want Los Angeles' sludge. A half-mile away, visible from the same window, a flat ridge of earth, the landfill, looms up from the horizon like a dirty-brown unfrosted cake.

Peacock leans forward in his chair, to emphasize his point: "Our geological consultants indicate a possible massive landslide on the north side of the Palos Verdes Peninsula is possible if sludge is put in the dump."

TO DETER Los Angeles from thinking too seriously about using the Palos Verdes site as a sludge deposit, city officials are thinking about placing restrictions on Los Angeles' conditional use permit, Peacock says.

The plan would prohibit any city with a population of more than 500,000 — meaning Los Angeles — from using the Palos Verdes fill.

A public hearing on the subject is scheduled for March 22 at the city hall, 4045 Palo Verde Drive North.

"The city of Los Angeles has kicked mud in our faces," Peacock said.

Even more mud may be kicked around this Thursday when the Los Angeles City Council considers whether to reopen the landfill it owns at Mission Canyon. The landfill has not been used in 12 years. It is situated west of the 405 Interstate in the Santa Monica Mountains, between West Los Angeles and the San Fernando Valley.

The Los Angeles City Council is being asked to keep the landfill closed by a group of 150 persons who purchased homes above it in the past six years. They say they thought the site was closed permanently.

THE FACT is, the sanitation districts always planned to reopen it. The reason it has been closed is that another landfill — located two miles further south— was "loaned" to the sanitation districts by a developer called Barclay-Hollander. It is almost filled and will be closed by August.

On Thursday, the 15-member Los Angeles City Council will make a final decision on the future of Mission Canyon.

Wallace Edgerton, a Long Beach City Councilmember who also sits on the sanitation districts' board of directors, says, "I'm convinced the Los Angeles County Sanitation Districts — as well as Rolling Hills Estates — would be on pretty firm grounds legally" if they go to court to prohibit the city of Los Angeles from using county dump sites.

Meanwhile, the trash — some 30,000 tons a day — keeps piling up.

UNEMPLOYMENT remains well above average in many large and small cities throughout the nation, and some cities are rapidly decaying because recent financial troubles leave little taxpayer money to pay for maintenance of municipal facilities and services.

"The relief which the cities expected from President Carter is still more promise than reality," according to the conference's budget analysis. The League of Cities concluded that "the cities will gain much" from the Carter budget compared to Ford's, but said, "The Carter revisions are more intimation than declaration."

By that, the league was noting that Carter committed himself to no new urban programs, either for the coming 18 months — through the 1978 fiscal year — or beyond. Though Carter made no promises, urban advocates had hoped he would make a major effort to arrest urban decline similar to the "New Frontier" and "Great Society" initiatives of his Democratic predecessors.

Carter's budget would restore millions of dollars that Ford had proposed to cut from urban programs, but it retains cuts in key areas such as the Economic Development Administration, the Community Services Administration and the Law Enforcement Assistance Administration.

"This reduction in funds for cities' economic development programs is in direct contradiction to President Carter's commitment to a strategy of substantial economic stimulus," said the mayors' conference.

Despite dissatisfaction with the budget, Gunther said the mayors' conference continues to have high hopes that Carter will develop a strong national urban policy.

'Sludge' sanitation dilemma for L.A.

To add clout — so no more "studies" could postpone its order — a deadline was announced. The pipe must be shut off by April 1, 1980 or the city will be fined $31,000 a day.

Chances are court litigation will push that date into the next decade. But the city of Los Angeles sooner or later will face an unenviable dilemma: What can it do with its daily millions of gallons of unsightly and odorous globs?

(Long Beach has an inland sanitation treatment plant that drys sludge and carts it to the city of Carson, where it's changed into fertilizer.)

Burn it? Out of the question. Even backyard incinerators were outlawed in 1957.

One answer is through the courts. Two weeks ago Los Angeles City Councilman Zev Yaroslavsky and three other councilmembers filed a complicated, 46-page lawsuit against the federal government. The suit claims the EPA didn't comply with the law when it ordered Los Angeles to stop dumping sludge into the ocean.

The youthful councilman told a visitor to his Fifth District office in Los Angeles recently that what bothers him, "is the federal government's arrogance."

"Let's assume sludge is harmful to fish — although the best scientific evidence I've heard is that sludge is more beneficial than harmful.

"I mean, who do we care more about — fish or humans?"

Another possible answer to the dilemma is to dump the sludge at a land site, known as the Palos Verdes sanitary landfill, situated on county-owned land adjacent to the 8,400 residents of Rolling Hills Estates at 26301 S. Crenshaw Blvd — 10 miles west of downtown Long Beach.

A 20-year-old landfill, the 172-acre site will be filled to capacity (with trash depths of up to 200 feet) by 1980. Nevertheless, the city of Los Angeles is eyeing the site as a good place to dump sludge — and Rolling Hills Estates' response is an emphatic "No."

For one thing, officials say, Los Angeles already has a dump of its own in West Los Angeles. But the dump is presently closed.

If Los Angeles doesn't open it, all that trash from the West Los Angeles area very likely would be shipped to Palos Verdes landfill. And although that would shorten the dump's life — and get the ground seeded and converted into a park and municipal golf course that much sooner — residents don't want the added traffic congestion that the business would bring:

ONCE Palos Verdes closes, there will only be five county-owned dumps left in the Southland. They are now operated by County Sanitation Districts, which provide sewage treatment and disposal needs for two-thirds of the county's 72 cities with their seven million residents. There are also 10 private dumps.

Although the sanitation districts have a governing board composed of city mayors and the five-member County Board of Supervisors, local cities issue conditional use permits for periods of time that, in effect, tell the board how the dump will be operated.

The local jurisdiction ruling over the Palos Verdes landfill is the city of Rolling Hills Estates.

Harry Peacock, Rolling Hills' city manager, whose office window looks out at a picture-postcard scene of a grassy, landscaped park, says his city council doesn't want Los Angeles' sludge. A half-mile away, visible from the same window, a flat ridge of earth, the landfill, looms up from the horizon like a dirty-brown unfrosted cake.

Peacock leans forward in his chair, to emphasize his point: "Our geological consultants indicate a possible massive landslide on the north side of the Palos Verdes Peninsula is possible if sludge is put in the dump."

TO DETER Los Angeles from thinking too seriously about using the Palos Verdes site as a sludge deposit, city officials are thinking about placing restrictions on Los Angeles' conditional use permit, Peacock says.

The plan would prohibit any city with a population of more than 500,000 — meaning Los Angeles — from using the Palos Verdes fill.

A public hearing on the subject is scheduled for March 22 at the city hall, 4045 Palo Verde Drive North.

"The city of Los Angeles has kicked mud in our faces," Peacock said.

Even more mud may be kicked around this Thursday when the Los Angeles City Council considers whether to reopen the landfill it owns at Mission Canyon. The landfill has not been used in 12 years. It is situated west of the 405 Interstate in the Santa Monica Mountains, between West Los Angeles and the San Fernando Valley.

The Los Angeles City Council is being asked to keep the landfill closed by a group of 150 persons who purchased homes above it in the past six years. They say they thought the site was closed permanently.

THE FACT is, the sanitation districts always planned to reopen it. The reason it has been closed is that another landfill — located two miles further south — was "loaned" to the sanitation districts by a developer called Barclay-Hollander. It is almost filled and will be closed by August.

On Thursday, the 15-member Los Angeles City Council will make a final decision on the future of Mission Canyon.

Wallace Edgerton, a Long Beach City Councilmember who also sits on the sanitation districts' board of directors, says, "I'm convinced the Los Angeles County Sanitation Districts — as well as Rolling Hills Estates — would be on pretty firm grounds legally" if they go to court to prohibit the city of Los Angeles from using county dump sites.

Meanwhile, the trash — some 30,000 tons a day — keeps piling up.

'5 million kids abused at home'

DENVER (AP) — For more than 5 million American children, punishment at home has meant being shot, stabbed, kicked, beaten and bitten by their parents, a new nationwide survey shows.

Richard J. Gelles of the University of Rhode Island told a meeting of the American Association for the Advancement of Science on Friday that the study showed three of every 100 parents, an estimated 1.2 million parents nationwide, have used knives and guns on their youngsters.

Another 1.2 million have threatened to harm their children with the weapons, he added.

And more than 80 per cent of the 1,146 parents surveyed said they sometimes spank or slap their children, said Gelles, leader of the team that took the survey.

The survey was designed to find out what leads to violence in the family and how it can be stopped, Gelles said. It included families of differing social and economic background and was among the first on a national level on violence toward children in the home.

Gelles said he drew no formal conclusions from the survey but plans to use information gathered in it to help determine causes and cures for family violence. He did not say over what period the survey was conducted or how recently it was made.

He said there is no accurate count of the number of children who die as a result of home violence each year, but he estimated there are about 700 such deaths nationwide. The U.S. Census Bureau's latest figures show 48.3 million Americans under age 14.

The survey indicated that from 3.2 million to 3.9 million children between 3 and 17 have been kicked, bitten or punched by their parents, Gelles said. An additional 1.6 million to 2.2 million have been "beaten up" during childhood, he said.

While parents often express concern about violence on television, Gelles said many of them might better be worried about how violence in the home affects their youngsters.

"While television may reinforce some of this behavior, what the child experiences in the home is much more important," he said.

And violence in the home is not limited to attacks on children by parents, said Murray Straus of the University of New Hampshire and Suzanne L. Steinmetz of the University of Delaware. Both were involved in studies of home violence with Gelles.

Straus said he examined relationships between 2,143 husbands and wives in a separate survey. Twenty-eight per cent of the couples admitted having slapped or hit each other, he said.

Straus also reported that one in 100 husbands and wives had shot, stabbed or severely beaten their partners. He estimated 1.7 million of the 47 million married couples in the United States have dealt with extreme violence between the partners at one time or another.

In another study of children in 1,224 families, Dr. Steinmetz said, it was found that 18 per cent of the youngsters questioned had used a knife or gun on a brother or sister.

Deaths from heart disease declining

By PEGGY RADER
Knight News Service

Heart disease is the number one killer in the United States but the percentage of deaths attributable to heart disease is actually declining, according to the president of the American Heart Association.

"For reasons we don't quite understand, a decline is taking place," said Dr. W. Gerald Austen. "Part of the reason may well be that the American public is much more aware of how their bodies work. They notice symptoms more readily and get them checked out."

Dr. Austen is chief of surgical services at Massachusetts General Hospital in Boston and teaches at Harvard Medical School.

He said he hoped that medical and biochemical research and surgical breakthroughs during the last decade were added reasons for fewer heart-related deaths.

Coronary artery bypass surgery was "a very important breakthrough," Dr. Austen said. It was first tried in Cleveland nine years ago and usually involves bypassing faulty arteries in the heart with vessels removed from the patient's legs.

"Physicians, quite correctly, were a little skeptical of the bypass when it was first introduced," he said. "Various other open heart operations prior to bypass had been discredited as being of little significance to the patient. They weren't worth the risk."

Bypass operations turned out to be worth the risk, the surgeon said.

"After successful bypass surgery, there is improvement in the heart muscle," he said. "You get better immediately and you stay better. Only occasionally does a bypass become blocked."

Dr. Austen guessed that close to 100,000 bypass operations are done annually in the U.S. His hospital will probably do 700 bypass operations this year, he said. He has done many himself.

On other heart-related issues, Dr. Austen:

— Said smoking is probably the biggest cause of heart disease. Other major causes are obesity, heredity and high blood pressure.

— Warned parents that "fat" babies should not be considered healthy babies. Babies' diets should not be overloaded with cholesterol any more than adults' diets should. Letting your baby get fat is "probably the worst thing you can do to assure the baby's ill health in the future."

— Said that although the mechanics of artificial hearts were not difficult, only time would prove their usefulness.

"We can make an artificial heart easy. The problem is, you put the thing in and six months later the damn thing clots. Percentagewise, they last a very short time, no more than three or four years."

'Profiteering' hit at nursing homes

By ROBERT A. DOBKIN
AP Labor Writer

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. — Charging that older Americans living in nursing homes face widespread "patterns of abuse," the AFL-CIO called on Saturday for an end to profit-making nursing homes.

"Profit must be eliminated from the industry if its problems are to be corrected," the labor organization said in a report on a year-long study. The AFL-CIO suggested the gradual replacement of profit-making homes with non-profit or government-run homes.

"The facts are that nonprofit nursing homes spend more on patient care and more on staffing than profit-making institutions and the results are evidenced in better care for nursing home residents," the report said.

The 14 million-member federation said inspections of nursing homes by its state affiliates, along with official government reports, showed negligence leading to death and injury, unsanitary conditions, improper medical care, inadequate control of drugs, reprisals against those who complain and widescale profiteering.

The study said that most of the problems were found in profit-making institutions.

THE findings, in a 39-page report to the AFL-CIO executive council meeting, also "revealed much that should be commended in terms of humane, compassionate treatment found throughout the industry."

But the study declared that "the case for broad-scale governmental action is compelling."

While federal standards exist for nursing homes, the report said enforcement is left almost entirely to the states, which have varying degrees of commitment.

In Michigan, for example, the report said "standards for pet stores are more stringently enforced than those for nursing homes.

"Although statutes provide that nursing homes failing to comply with standards are subject to non-renewal, suspension or revocation of licenses, this is rarely the outcome," the report said.

"Repeated citations for violations gather dust and facilities are allowed to remain in business because of timid law enforcement, a complicated and unnecessarily cumbersome revocation process and an unwarranted emphasis on the 'rights' of nursing home operators to the detriment of the rights of patients."

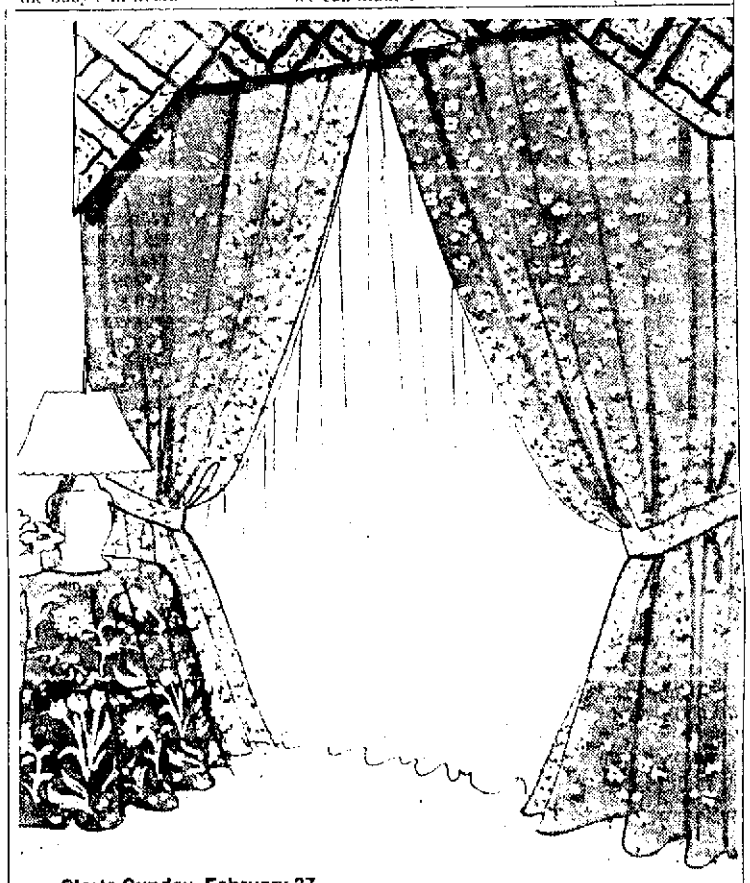

THE report recommended:

—Comprehensive revision of federal standards that emphasize patient care. The answer is not in more regulations, but in making existing regulations clear and enforcing them swiftly, it said.

—Federal inspections for Medicaid certification, a procedure now left to the states.

—Legislation making abuse, neglect or mistreatment of a Medicare or Medicaid patient resulting in injury or death a federal criminal offense.

—Legislation barring nursing home operators from receivng federal funds if convicted of neglect, mistreatment or abuse of a Medicare or Medicaid patient.

Philosophers dig rock, computers

By ROBERT H. REID
Associated Press

NEW YORK — To a young philosophy professor at the College of William and Mary, rock musicians and songwriters don't just make noise. Some discuss existential philosophy.

To a philosopher at the University of Toledo, the computer isn't just a device to snarl credit card accounts. It's a tool for teaching symbolic logic.

Scores of colleges across the country are offering courses such as "Philosophy and Sex" or "The Philosophy of Aging" and using tools such as television and the computer to introduce students to the discipline.

Supporters of such methods concede that, as with other liberal arts, the percentage of undergraduates taking philosophy probably has declined in the last five years. They say classroom innovations are important in reaching the student who might take only one or two philosophy courses.

Skeptics in the academic community wonder whether in some cases fad has not replaced scholarship.

"First thing— the teaching of philosophy certainly is in need of improvement," said Dr. Sidney Hook, philosopher, author and fellow at the Hoover Institution for War, Revolution and Peace at Stanford University.

"But there is only one method of teaching which is warranted by the nature of philosophy, and that is the Socratic method, in which the teacher does not proclaim truths but makes the student think and question. Anything else is edification but not philosophy."

New directions in teaching philosphy were taken in the early 1970s and, according to several philosophers, were offshoots of the student activist movement.

"The student movement of the 1960s demanded that intellectuals be more relevant to their world," said Dr. Terrell Bynam, professor of philosophy at Dutchess Community College in Poughkeepsie, N.Y., and director of the National Resource Center for the Teaching of Philosophy.

"For the past 50 or 60 years philosophy was turning inward, examining its own nature," he said. "We've reached a point where philosophy was ready to turn outward to the whole world."

At William and Mary in Williamsburg, Va., Prof. James Harris has turned to rock music to illustrate philosophic principles. Although Harris says he's glad "my whole philosophic reputation doesn't rest on this," he has found modern music "really useful in reaching some students."

"I began using music in a series of 20- or 30-minute programs I was doing around campus for various social clubs. The response was so incredibly favorable that I began using it in class.

"I admit a lot of Top 40 stuff is trash. But there are some really intelligent and sensitive observers of the human situation who are writing and performing rock music.

"For example, there's a lot that can be done with alienation in rock music, the kind of alienation a lot of existential philosophy is talking about, particularly Leon Russell's 'Stranger in a Strange Land' or Moody Blues' 'In a Lost World.'"

At the University of Toledo, Prof. Richard Wright uses minicomputers to teach students how to work proofs in symbolic logic.

"The computer program gives him hints in solving the problems and tests his work," Wright said. "One important advantage is that the computer terminals are available 24 hours a day. Another is that many students are embarrassed to ask too many questions, but with the computer they can go back and work the problems as many times as they please."

In other departments, professors have applied principles of traditional philosophy to 20th century American life.

At the University of Delaware, Dr. Sandra Harding uses philosophers as diverse as Plato and Karl Marx to examine the status of women in contemporary society.

"We look at feminist theory as critical of the concepts that have shaped society," she said. "We examine theoretical proposals to change the status of women and study various explanations for the oppression of women. Freud and Marx, for example, focused on the oppression of women but had very different ideas on why this happened and how to change it."

Dr. Harding said her course, "Philosophic Aspects of Feminism," has attracted several men during the four years it has been offered.

Although the course is relatively new, Dr. Harding scoffs at the notion that it's a fad:

"Since Plato and Aristotle, the leading thinkers of Western thought have been examining the questions of women and the nature of the family. This kind of criticism comes from ignorance."

In addition to her teaching, Dr. Harding says, she has been preparing sample course materials for several hundred colleges — including some Catholic men's schools — interested in adding feminism to their curricula.

"I think that as far as philosophy and women are concerned, we're on the threshold of a vast explosion of interest," she said.

The thoughts of Western philosophers also are being applied to the problems of sexuality.

At the University of Maryland, Dr. Frederick Suppe teaches a course on philosophy and homosexuality. He says he uses the principles of philosophy to show the homosexual student "how to incorporate his homosexuality into an overall life style so that one has a rewarding life."

Suppe also teaches a similar course for heterosexual students. But he says the problem of homosexuality is particularly challenging because "most philosophers and theologians have condemned any homosexual activity as immoral."

The course, which he has taught for only two semesters, centers on lectures and readings in modern literature, theology and traditional philosophy, including the works of St. Thomas Aquinas and the 1975 Vatican statement condemning homosexuality.

"The focus is on the students discovering who they are sexually and how they feel about their sexual roles," Suppe said. "The underlying premise is that most people have variously deceived themselves on what they want out of their sex lives and what their sexual desires are."

He said nearly 95 per cent of his students in both the homosexual and heterosexual classes are majoring in fields other than philosophy.

Dr. Harry Moody, who teaches philosophy to continuing education students at New York's Hunter College, said philosophy can help "fill the vacuum of meaning" and help the elderly prepare for death.

"Our readings begin with the death of Socrates as an example of an old man willing to sacrifice his life for a cause," said Moody. "We raise questions of the meaning of life. Then we read Montaigne for his views on the nature of suffering and John Stuart Mills' autobiography to find what is the point of telling a life story."

Moody, 31, says his age is no problem in teaching students old enough to be his parents.

"I tell them that I know something about academics and they know something from the school of life," he said. "They enjoy that, and I learn from them."

Although he has reservations about a few of the trends, which he would not identify, Dr. Norman Bowie, executive secretary of the American Philosophical Association, said the APA welcomed efforts to enliven the teaching of philosophy.

"I don't see that we've overthrown the classical courses at all," Bowie said. "All the traditional core courses are there. First you've got to introduce people to basic philosophy; then you apply it to medicine, science or politics."

But one philosophy professor, who asked not to be identified, had another opinion: "This I would call the vulgarization of philosophy."

Hallelujah! for gold rush

But praise the Lord, pass the ammunition

By JULES LOH
AP Special Correspondent

OCTAVE, Ariz. — On the wall of the house trailer parked near the old gold mine is a sign: "By my spirit sayeth the Lord. Hallelujah!" On the counter beneath are two boxes of rifle bullets.

Praise the Lord and pass the ammunition.

"When we armed ourselves," said Brother Jack, wrestling an antique truck up a mountain road so rugged his pistol almost bounced off the dashboard, "that old devil and his army stopped being as obnoxious with their guns."

"That old devil" is a miner named C.O. Carlson, who isn't talking these days, not to strangers, and especially not to Brother Jack. Carlson's army consists of three hired guns, one of them called locally "the fat frog."

Brother Jack is the Rev. Jack Oliphant, shepherd of a flock of renovated miscreants known as the Hallelujah People. By leading them to Jesus, said one of them, a former junkie, Brother Jack shows the path "from the guttermost to the uttermost."

The feud is over a gold mine — sort of.

It is as bizarre a story as anything out of Zane Grey, who also might have selected the setting.

Octave, a mining camp where prospectors once picked up nuggets as big as turkey eggs, and spilled blood over them, is a ghost town. It is 20 miles from a paved road in desert so hostile the upraised arms of the saguaro cactus seem to be pleading for rain.

BUT THE bullets are real, and Brother Jack sure wishes they would cease firing so he can get on with his grand plan. He aims to build a lake out here, pumping water from the old mine shafts, and to plant a vineyard for the Hallelujah People to labor in, and resurrect a city.

"It will become a Holy Ghost town," he said.

Brother Jack is a husky, 53-year-old preacher who came to the ministry late, he said, after a life of evil. He has great bushy eyebrows, a booming voice, wears patched jeans and, at times lately, a pistol holster.

He led his Hallelujah People into the desert here last December. There are 12 of them, plus about a dozen hallelujah dogs, occupying a ramshackle camp of trailers and buses and renovated mine buildings.

They drove here from Tampa, Fla., where they grew oranges and where Brother Jack got hold of 200,000 shares of 50-cent stock, a gift, in a company called the Rhenium Corp., purported owner of the Octave mine, abandoned since 1936.

ON ARRIVING they found Carlson living in a trailer at the entrance to the mine road. Carlson has since barricaded the road, requiring the Hallelujah People to use boulder-strewn alternatives, trails really. Carlson also claims a portion of ownership in the mine, but that apparently isn't the source of the quarrel.

In fact, they were friends at first. Carlson wanted a rock-crushing mill built nearby; Hallelujah Boys hired out their labor.

Meanwhile, Brother Jack met another local homesteader, Al Haynes, a traveling carnival concessionaire out doing a little prospecting in the off season.

Haynes and Brother Jack went partners, rigged up a sluice about a mile away at Weaver Gulch, which is not on the Octave property, and started panning.

Hallelujah. Gold.

"That's what I think is at the root of all this," Brother Jack said. "All of a sudden Carlson wanted us out of here, me, Al, everybody. The gold is the only way I can explain it."

In any event, at Brother Jack's New Year's communion service three men showed up toting guns.

THE MEN later told an Arizona reporter they were hired by Carlson, that they had been shot at, had shot back, had been threatened with dynamite and had caught Hallelujah Boys trying to steal equipment.

The way Brother Jack tells it, all the shooting has been from the Carlson camp. Except once.

"They burned a cross one night on that ridge over there," he said, "and I did rake the ridge with my .22 rifle, yes I did." He also said he threatened to do the same thing when three armed men met him at a turn in the road, which had been blocked.

For that threat, Brother Jack is to be arraigned Monday.

He says he is not worried because God will protect him, being in the right, and wonders why he can't get similar legal action for his own litany of complaints. He has told the sheriff about them, Lord knows.

Las Vegas union leader disappears

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — A national all-points bulletin was issued Saturday in an effort to locate one of the most powerful and influential men in Nevada, union boss Al Bramlet.

Bramlet, 59, the state AFL-CIO president and the sometimes controversial head of the 22,000-member Culinary Workers Local 226 for nearly a quarter of a century, apparently vanished into thin air and has not been seen or heard from since late Thursday.

Lt. Beecher Avants, head of the homicide and robbery division of the Las Vegas Metropolitan Police Department, said the FBI has been called in to investigate along with local authorities. However, the disappearance, which appears similar to that of Teamster leader Jimmy Hoffa, has investigators stymied.

"There's no body but there's one missing," said Avants. "We've talked to the whole family. We've talked to the persons who supposedly talked to him on the phone on the night he came up missing — what can I tell you — and we still can't come up with the guy."

Bramlet has led the culinary workers battles all the way, including last year's much publicized strike against the big resort hotels on the Las Vegas strip. However, he has come under fire in recent months from dissidents in the union.

AVANTS SAID he talked with Bramlet earlier in the week and that Bramlet at that time did not appear to be disturbed about anything. "I didn't get any indication that there was any problem within the union," Avants said. "The fact is, he was quite relaxed when I talked to him and he did not express any fears on anything like that."

Union counsel Renny Ashleman said Bramlet had been in Reno Thursday, and returned to Las Vegas Thursday afternoon.

Ashleman said Bramlet apparently called home to say he would be there shortly, but he never showed up and his car was found Friday at Las Vegas' McCarran International Airport.

"It wasn't until Friday morning that people became disturbed," said Ashleman.

Ashelman said the union has received no ransom calls and there were no leads.

Philosophers dig rock, computers

By ROBERT H. REID
Associated Press

NEW YORK — To a young philosophy professor at the College of William and Mary, rock musicians and songwriters don't just make noise. Some discuss existential philosophy.

To a philosopher at the University of Toledo, the computer isn't just a device to snarl credit card accounts. It's a tool for teaching symbolic logic.

Scores of colleges across the country are offering courses such as "Philosophy and Sex" or "The Philosophy of Aging" and using tools such as television and the computer to introduce students to the discipline.

Supporters of such methods concede that, as with other liberal arts, the percentage of undergraduates taking philosophy probably has declined in the last five years. They say classroom innovations are important in reaching the student who might take only one or two philosophy courses.

Skeptics in the academic community wonder whether in some cases fad has not replaced scholarship.

"First thing— the teaching of philosophy certainly is in need of improvement," said Dr. Sidney Hook, philosopher, author and fellow at the Hoover Institution for War, Revolution and Peace at Stanford University.

"But there is only one method of teaching which is warranted by the nature of philosophy, and that is the Socratic method, in which the teacher does not proclaim truths but makes the student think and question. Anything else is edification but not philosophy."

New directions in teaching philosphy were taken in the early 1970s and, according to several philosophers, were offshoots of the student activist movement.

"The student movement of the 1960s demanded that intellectuals be more relevant to their world," said Dr. Terrell Bynam, professor of philosophy at Dutchess Community College in Poughkeepsie, N.Y.; and director of the National Resource Center for the Teaching of Philosophy.

"For the past 50 or 60 years philosophy was turning inward, examining its own nature," he said. "We've reached a point where philosophy was ready to turn outward to the whole world."

At William and Mary in Williamsburg, Va., Prof. James Harris has turned to rock music to illustrate philosophic principles. Although Harris says he's glad "my whole philosophic reputation doesn't rest on this," he has found modern music "really useful in reaching some students."

"I began using music in a series of 20- or 30-minute programs I was doing around campus for various social clubs. The response was so incredibly favorable that I began using it in class.

"I admit a lot of Top 40 stuff is trash. But there are some really intelligent and sensitive observers of the human situation who are writing and performing rock music.

"For example, there's a lot that can be done with alienation in rock music, the kind of alienation a lot of existential philosophy is talking about, particularly Leon Russell's 'Stranger in a Strange Land' or Moody Blues' 'In a Lost World.'"

At the University of Toledo, Prof. Richard Wright uses minicomputers to teach students how to work proofs in symbolic logic.

"The computer program gives him hints in solving the problems and tests his work," Wright said. "One important advantage is that the computer terminals are available 24 hours a day. Another is that many students are embarrassed to ask too many questions, but with the computer they can go back and work the problems as many times as they please."

WHAT IS THE COMMITTEE OF 300:

The Committee of 300 is a nonprofit, civic organization of 300 members who contribute their time, money and talents to assure the success of all community activities surrounding the Long Beach Grand Prix. The committee, associated with the Long Beach Area Chamber of Commerce, defines its role as purely voluntary and supportive. It provides the "extras" that help make a successful race and, most important, the presentation of a positive community image to visiting national and international guests.

This community organization which consists of business and professional people, athletes, housewives and college students, coordinates and implements the many pre-race week and race week activities. The committees activities include: VIP Hospitality, "Prix-View" Luncheon, Victory Dinner, VIP Transportation, Queen's Pageantry, Ushering, "Grand Prix" Days, press and public relations assistance, and public information. Membership applications are now being accepted for a limited number of openings in the Committee of 300.

Breakthrough scored for space laser gun

By FRED S. HOFFMAN
AP Military Writer

WASHINGTON — U.S. scientists have scored a research breakthrough in development of a ray-gun type weapon for possible future space battles, a senior Pentagon official has told Congress.

The breakthrough points to solution of one of the biggest problems which has perplexed the scientists — how to reduce high-energy laser beam devices to small enough size and weight to be carried by satellites.

Dr. George H. Heilmeier, director of the Pentagon's advanced research project's agency, said a way has been found in the laboratory to increase critical energy output by 350 times, using chemical lasers.

DURING the past year our goal of demonstrating useful efficiencies was reached in a small-scale device," Heilmeier told the House Armed Services Committee last week.

He said that recently completed analysis of these experiments "indicates that laser systems incorporating much more efficient future chemical lasers may be feasible."

Heilmeier cautioned that the technical problems are formidable" but that "space is a favorable environment for chemical lasers."

Pentagon scientists have said it may be another 10 years before a practical space-based laser weapon is a reality. There is no indication from Heilmeier's testimony as to what extent that time may be shortened.

Heilmeier described high-energy lasers in space as "a potential system to defend our own satellites against anti-satellite threats."

The Russians have stepped up their space testing of an anti-satellite system within the past year. This Soviet system does not use lasers, but relies on explosive techniques, according to U.S. intelligence officials.

"IT IS MY belief that the high-energy laser in space could represent a Sputnik-like event, a technical achievement which could influence the perceptions of foreign countries as to who is the leader in defense-related technology," Heilmeier said.

He warned that "such perceptions could have serious political implications in view of more obvious trends in other areas," obviously meaning Russian advances in growth of missile power.

Gives priority to Americans, regulates foreigners

U.S. 200-mile fishing limit begins

By JOHN KIFNER
New York Times Service

BOSTON — In the face of criticism from other countries and some misgivings in this country, the United States on Tuesday will take control of virtually all ocean fishing out to 200 miles off its coasts and far beyond that in some areas.

The hoped-for effects of the new law will be to cut back drastically the harvest of certain kinds of fish that are threatened with extinction, to replenish the stock of others depleted by overfishing and to regulate strictly any fishing within the 200-mile zone by the fleets of other nations.

For the small, aging fishing trawlers that tie up in the ports of New England, the new limit is regarded as a chance for survival that has come not a moment too soon.

OVER the past decade, vast fleets of foreign fishing ships — from Russia, Japan, Poland, East Germany and other countries — have worked the George's Bank and the other rich fishing grounds of the northwest Atlantic and have decimated the fish stock.

Haddock, a fish once so cheap and plentiful it was sometimes thrown away, have declined by 96 per cent between 1968 and 1975, according to the National Marine Fisheries Service.

Yellowtail, flounder and cod — the traditional mainstays of the New England fishing industry — are nearly as close to vanishing, according to fishermen and marine scientists.

In places like the small brick auction house on Pier 3 in New Bedford, New England's largest fishing port, where the scallopers and draggers gather early each morning to sell their cargoes, the talk in recent years has been of little else but the depredations of the foreign fleets, who are known generically, if not entirely accurately, as "the Russians."

BUT, while the New Englanders and the salmon fishermen in the Pacific Northwest have been hard hit by foreign fishing fleets, not all American fishermen are entirely happy with the 200-mile limit.

The tuna fishermen of Southern California, who chase their migratory quarry into South American waters and have been seized and fined by Ecuador and Peru are particularly unhappy. So are the Gulf shrimp fishermen in Texas, who feel the way the boundaries are being set will allow Mexico to keep and harvest the shrimp.

The new fishing law gives priority to American fishermen to 200 miles out to sea, rather than the 12-mile zone established in 1966. "Creatures of the continental shelf" — that is lobsters and various crabs — have previously been prohibited to foreign fishermen.

EIGHT regional fishing councils have been set up to determine the quotas for various species of fish. The councils also can set up zones in which fishing is not permitted in order to let the depleted stock grow.

Foreign ships, after receiving a permit from the State Department and paying a fee of up to $5,000, are to be permitted to catch a fixed portion of the "optimum yield" not harvested by American fishermen. The regional fishing councils are to recommend to the State Department the quotas for the foreign ships based on past records.

In New England, for instance, the regional council is recommending, in effect, holding up many of the permits of Russian and Japanese ships, according to its chairman, Hal Lyman, the publisher of a sport fishing magazine.

THERE will be no fishing at all allowed for haddock, Lyman said, and no foreign permits were being issued for butterfish or fur mackerel. The council, he said, has approved some permits for Soviet vessels to fish for hake, a species not much used here.

Squid, a delicacy in Mediterranean countries, but not widely eaten here, will have the highest foreign quota.

The activities of the foreign fishing fleets, Lyman said, "will be sharply curtailed without question."

The agreement is to be enforced by the Coast Guard, which is to be able to board and inspect foreign fishing vessels at will. Many of the Coast Guard boarding parties are also to include officials from the National Marine Fisheries Service.

The expansion of duties, however, has not meant an immediate expansion of men and equipment for the Coast Guard.

Planners map path from Armageddon

By JAMES COATES
Knight New Service

WASHINGTON — One of the capital's best known top secrets concerns a hidden city, about 40 miles west of the White House, built under an Appalachian foothill called Mount Weather.

The underground city—complete with three-story buildings, streets and a lake for drinking water—would shelter thousands of selected government managers if the Soviet missiles ever rain down on Washington.

When the topic is Mount Weather, questions at the Pentagon, CIA, even at the Social Security Administration, draw a terse "No comment."

Mount Weather is something like the U.S. government's safe deposit box. Its buildings contain computers which duplicate the data stored elsewhere in the country—information crucial for rebuilding. Currency records, census data, Social Security files, military intelligence, even income-tax data are stored in the system.

SIMILAR but much smaller "hardened" nuclear shelters at Fort Ritchie, Md., Colorado Springs, Omaha, and probably a few truly secret locations, make up the United States' efforts to build special wartime shelters.

These are designed for military and government leaders. If the unthinkable comes, civilians will be directed to 235,000 buildings with the familiar yellow-and-black "fallout shelter" signs throughout the country.

If there is time, Pentagon Civil Defense officials say, the government will attempt a massive evacuation of most cities with the terrified residents relocating to "host" communities in the rural countryside.

Civil Defense planners would divert water supplies and as much food, medicine, clothing, and other necessities as possible to the outlying areas under the plan.

COMPARED to the rest of the U.S. plannning for nuclear war, Civil Defense is a tiny program. This year's budget allots $82 million for the entire Civil Defense program—less money than a single B-1 bomber costs.

Testifying before Congress, officials of the Defense Civil Preparedness Agency claim that evacuation could save the lives of 100 million Americans in the face of an all-out Soviet missile attack.

The officials say that without such a program, about 80 million rural Americans would survive.

Their grisly arithmetic also concludes that without sufficient warning for an urban exodus, the fallout shelters now available — mostly in the basements of government buildings—would save about 30 million lives.

Here is their table of Armageddon:

Surprise attack—no warning: 80 million survivors.

Surprise attack—some warning: 110 million survivors.

Expected attack — full evacuation: 180 million survivors.

The population of the United States is 215,869,000.

A STRONG indication that Civil Defense is a back-burner item for national security planners came in November when scientists determined that millions of boxes of crackers in the country's designated fallout shelters had turned so stale they were not fit for human consumption.

Instead of replacing these food supplies, the government advised state and local officials to dispose of the "biscuits." In many localities the food was used for livestock; others decided to keep it in place on the theory that something is better than nothing after a couple of hungry weeks in a crowded basement.

Most of the biscuits date to the Cuban missile crisis of 1962, when confrontation with the Soviet Union on the high seas made Civil Defense temporarily very much a front-of-the-stove item.

AFTER THE Cuba scare, the Civil Defense budget allotted $70 million to buy the biscuits, $14 million for medical kits, and $10 million for portable toilets. Today, only the toilets still meet federal standards.

Civil Defense officials acknowledge that the Cuban crisis set the pattern for most of today's population protection plans.

The majority of plans held in contingency files deal with a situation where international tensions steadily build over a fairly long period of time.

According to the scenario, while the President, the military, and the diplomats keep busy with negotiations, troop movements, hotline calls, and other matters, the population would turn to Civil Defense.

The Civil Defense leaders speak of a "surge" in their activities. During the crisis, the contingency plans call for stocking enough food from local grocery stores for a 125,000 people in urban shelters, marking 95,000 buildings with shelter signs, training more than 500,000 citizens to become "shelter managers" and training another 10,000 people to become "radiological defense officers."

ANOTHER 2 million people would be equipped with simple radioactive sensing devices to serve as "radiological monitors."

The need for a "surge" comes because the government has allowed food to spoil in shelters and withdrawn much of the money once used to train Civil Defense volunteers, officials explain.

Officials at the Defense Civil Preparedness Agency gear their future planning to claims they can save 100 million people by massive evacuations through "Crisis Relocation Planning."

The plans designate 400 cities, military bases, and industrial sites which the Russians probably would try to obliterate in all-out war. The "targets" include every city with a 50,000 or more population. Planners currently are studying outlying areas near these cities to set up "host" reception procedures.

Most of the 400 cities are near rural areas well-equipped to handle a small exodus, but most people live in a few large cities where things are tougher, Civil Defense officials say.

THREE special problem areas are the so-called Chicago-Detroit corridor, the Northeast and California—all places where the crush of millions of evacuees would make relocation difficult if not impossible.

Panel given guidelines for trips abroad

WASHINGTON (AP) — Chairman Clement J. Zablocki Saturday issued guidelines for foreign travel by members of his House International Relations Committee to "promote public confidence in the integrity of those missions."

The Wisconsin Democrat said the purpose of his guidelines is to insure that they are businesslike and "according to high ethical standards."

Zablocki said it is necessary for members of his committee to travel for, among other reasons, checking how foreign aid is spent in many countries.

But he said these foreign travels should be carried out in such a way as to promote public confidence.

He said he would encourage Democrats and Republicans to travel together and in numbers instead of alone, and he said costs of all overseas trips in the future will be made public along with their purpose.

ZABLOCKI said he or ranking Republican Rep. William S. Broomfield of Michigan would have to approve in advance all the travel for committee business.

Members will have to make a report to the chairman about each trip and, where appropriate, this will be made public.

He said appropriated funds should be avoided when possible by using U.S. owned foreign currencies for expenses within other countries. And he said detailed reports on how all money was spent must be filed within 30 days after each trip.

He said the $75-a-day allowance authorized by law for overseas travel by members of Congress must be used only for expenses clearly required to carry out the trip.

Foreign payments 'policy instrument'

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senate Majority Leader Robert C. Byrd said Saturday that President Carter ought to be free to authorize payments to foreign leaders if such payments are in the national interest.

"I think the President ought to have the discretion to utilize such payments as an instrument of foreign policy," Byrd told reporters.

The CIA reportedly paid millions of dollars to King Hussein of Jordan over 20 years.

Byrd also said there should be safeguards against leaks of information as sensitive as such payments would be.

Byrd said he was present at a White House meeting Wednesday, but did not hear a discussion about the possibility of FBI surveillance of Senate intelligence committee members.

Fluorocarbons risk seen reduced by sand and sun

WASHINGTON (AP) — Scientists say some of the chemicals thought to damage the atmosphere's protective ozone layer apparently break down before causing harm. But the amount destroyed probably is too small to greatly reduce the overall problem, they add.

Scientists at the Commerce Department's National Bureau of Standards said in a report released Saturday that they discovered that two implicated fluorocarbon chemicals and another related one break down when absorbed by sand and bathed in sunlight.

Dr. Pierre J. Ausloos said this previously unsuspected breakdown of fluorocarbons illustrates that there may be other unknown processes in nature that affect the amount of fluorocarbons reaching the upper atmosphere.

But Ausloos said he does not believe the process he and Dr. Richard E. Rebbert discovered had more than a minimal effect on the total amount of fluorocarbons dumped into the air.

Concern about fluorocarbons has increased since 1974 when Drs. Mario Molina and Frank Rowland of the University of California said computer studies indicated the chemicals used as aerosol spray-can propellants and refrigerants reached the upper atmosphere.

Once in the stratosphere, Molina and Rowland said, high energy solar radiation decomposes the chemicals releasing chlorine atoms that destroy ozone.

Ozone shields the earth from high energy solar radiation and scientists fear its depletion would lead to increases in skin cancer, changes in vegetation and animal life, and possibly affect climate.

Last September, the National Academy of Sciences released an authoritative report saying that while more study is needed, all indications are that fluorocarbons are depleting ozone and that some regulation of use would almost certainly be necessary.

Since then, the Food and Drug Administration, the Environmental Protection Agency and the Consumer Product Safety Commission have taken steps to ban many fluorocarbon uses within two years.

Fluorocarbon manufacturers say such action is premature and should await further study. Chemical companies say unknown reactions, like the one discovered by Ausloos and Rebbert, could reduce the threat.

The hoped-for effects of the new law will be to cut back drastically the harvest of certain kinds of fish that are threatened with extinction, to replenish the stock of others depleted by overfishing and to regulate strictly any fishing within the 200-mile zone by the fleets of other nations.

For the small, aging fishing trawlers that tie up in the ports of New England, the new limit is regarded as a chance for survival that has come not a moment too soon.

OVER the past decade, vast fleets of foreign fishing ships — from Russia, Japan, Poland, East Germany and other countries — have worked the George's Bank and the other rich fishing grounds of the northwest Atlantic and have decimated the fish stock.

Haddock, a fish once so cheap and plentiful it was sometimes thrown away, have declined by 96 per cent between 1968 and 1975, according to the National Marine Fisheries Service.

Yellowtail, flounder and cod — the traditional mainstays of the New England fishing industry — are nearly as close to vanishing, according to fishermen and marine scientists.

In places like the small brick auction house on Pier 3 in New Bedford, New England's largest fishing port, where the scallopers and draggers gather early each morning to sell their cargoes, the talk in recent years has been of little else but the depredations of the foreign fleets, who are known generically, if not entirely accurately, as "the Russians."

BUT, while the New Englanders and the salmon fishermen in the Pacific Northwest have been hard hit by foreign fishing fleets, not all American fishermen are entirely happy with the 200-mile limit.

The tuna fishermen of Southern California, who chase their migratory quarry into South American waters and have been seized and fined by Ecuador and Peru are particularly unhappy. So are the Gulf shrimp fishermen in Texas, who feel the way the boundaries are being set will allow Mexico to keep and harvest the shrimp.

The new fishing law gives priority to American fishermen to 200 miles out to sea, rather than the 12-mile zone established in 1966. "Creatures of the continental shelf" — that is lobsters and various crabs — have previously been prohibited to foreign fishermen.

EIGHT regional fishing councils have been set up to determine the quotas for various species of fish. The councils also can set up zones in which fishing is not permitted in order to let the depleted stock grow.

Foreign ships, after receiving a permit from the State Department and paying a fee of up to $5,000, are to be permitted to catch a fixed portion of the "optimum yield" not harvested by American fishermen. The regional fishing councils are to recommend to the State Department the quotas for the foreign ships based on past records.

In New England, for instance, the regional council is recommending, in effect, holding up many of the permits of Russian and Japanese ships, according to its chairman, Hal Lyman, the publisher of a sport fishing magazine.

THERE will be no fishing at all allowed for haddock, Lyman said, and no foreign permits were being issued for butterfish or for mackerel. The council, he said, has approved some permits for Soviet vessels to fish for hake, a species not much used here.

Squid, a delicacy in Mediterranean countries, but not widely eaten here, will have the highest foreign quota.

The activities of the foreign fishing fleets, Lyman said, "will be sharply curtailed without question."

The agreement is to be enforced by the Coast Guard, which is to be able to board and inspect foreign fishing vessels at will. Many of the Coast Guard boarding parties are also to include officials from the National Marine Fisheries Service.

The expansion of duties, however, has not meant an immediate expansion of men and equipment for the Coast Guard.

Planners map path from Armageddon

WASHINGTON — One of the capital's best known top secrets concerns a hidden city, about 40 miles west of the White House, built under an Appalachian foothill called Mount Weather.

The underground city—complete with three-story buildings, streets and a lake for drinking water—would shelter thousands of selected government managers if the Soviet missiles ever rain down on Washington.

When the topic is Mount Weather, questions at the Pentagon, CIA, even at the Social Security Administration, draw a terse "No comment."

Mount Weather is something like the U.S. government's safe deposit box. Its buildings contain computers which duplicate the data stored elsewhere in the country—information crucial for rebuilding. Currency records, census data, Social Security files, military intelligence, even income-tax data are stored in the system.

SIMILAR but much smaller "hardened" nuclear shelters at Fort Ritchie, Md., Colorado Springs, Omaha, and probably a few truly secret locations, make up the United States' efforts to build special wartime shelters.

These are designed for military and government leaders. If the unthinkable comes, civilians will be directed to 235,000 buildings with the familiar yellow-and-black "fallout shelter" signs throughout the country.

If there is time, Pentagon Civil Defense officials say, the government will attempt a massive evacuation of most cities with the terrified residents relocating to "host" communities in the rural countryside.

Civil Defense planners would divert water supplies and as much food, medicine, clothing, and other necessities as possible to the outlying areas under the plan.

COMPARED to the rest of the U.S. plannning for nuclear war, Civil Defense is a tiny program. This year's budget allots $82 million for the entire Civil Defense program—less money than a single B-1 bomber costs.

Testifying before Congress, officials of the Defense Civil Preparedness Agency claim that evacuation could save the lives of 100 million Americans in the face of an all-out Soviet missile attack.

The officials say that without such a program, about 80 million rural Americans would survive.

Their grisly arithmetic also concludes that without sufficient warning for an urban exodus, the fallout shelters now available — mostly in the basements of government buildings—would save about 30 million lives.

Here is their table of Armageddon:

Surprise attack—no warning: 80 million survivors.

Surprise attack—some warning: 110 million survivors.

Expected attack — full evacuation: 180 million survivors.

The population of the United States is 215,869,000.

A STRONG indication that Civil Defense is a back-burner item for national security planners came in November when scientists determined that millions of boxes of crackers in the country's designated fallout shelters had turned so stale they were not fit for human consumption.

Instead of replacing these food supplies, the government advised state and local officials to dispose of the "biscuits." In many localities the food was used for livestock; others decided to keep it in place on the theory that something is better than nothing after a couple of hungry weeks in a crowded basement.

Most of the biscuits date to the Cuban missile crisis of 1962, when confrontation with the Soviet Union on the high seas made Civil Defense temporarily very much a front-of-the-stove item.

AFTER THE Cuba scare, the Civil Defense budget allotted $70 million to buy the biscuits, $14 million for medical kits, and $10 million for portable toilets. Today, only the toilets still meet federal standards.

Civil Defense officials acknowledge that the Cuban crisis set the pattern for most of today's population protection plans.

The majority of plans held in contingency files deal with a situation where international tensions steadily build over a fairly long period of time.

According to the scenario, while the President, the military, and the diplomats keep busy with negotiations, troop movements, hotline calls, and other matters, the population would turn to Civil Defense.

The Civil Defense leaders speak of a "surge" in their activities. During the crisis, the contingency plans call for stocking enough food from local grocery stores for a 125,000 people in urban shelters, marking 95,000 buildings with shelter signs, training more than 500,000 citizens to become "shelter managers" and training another 10,000 people to become "radiological defense officers."

ANOTHER 2 million people would be equipped with simple radioactive sensing devices to serve as "radiological monitors."

The need for a "surge" comes because the government has allowed food to spoil in shelters and withdrawn much of the money once used to train Civil Defense volunteers, officials explain.

Officials at the Defense Civil Preparedness Agency gear their future planning to claims they can save 100 million people by massive evacuations through "Crisis Relocation Planning."

The plans designate 400 cities, military bases, and industrial sites which the Russians probably would try to obliterate in all-out war. The "targets" include every city with a 50,000 or more population. Planners currently are studying outlying areas near these cities to set up "host" reception procedures.

Most of the 400 cities are near rural areas well-equipped to handle a small exodus, but most people live in a few large cities where things are tougher, Civil Defense officials say.

THREE special problem areas are the so-called Chicago-Detroit corridor, the Northeast and California—all places where the crush of millions of evacuees would make relocation difficult if not impossible.

Panel given guidelines for trips abroad

WASHINGTON (AP) — Chairman Clement J. Zablocki Saturday issued guidelines for foreign travel by members of his House International Relations Committee to "promote public confidence in the integrity of those missions."

The Wisconsin Democrat said the purpose of his guidelines is to insure that they are businesslike and "according to high ethical standards."

Zablocki said it is necessary for members of his committee to travel for, among other reasons; checking how foreign aid is spent in many countries.

But he said these foreign travels should be carried out in such a way as to promote public confidence.

He said he would encourage Democrats and Republicans to travel together and in numbers instead of alone, and he said costs of all overseas trips in the future will be made public along with their purpose.

ZABLOCKI said he or ranking Republican Rep. William S. Broomfield of Michigan would have to approve in advance all the travel for committee business.

Members will have to make a report to the chairman about each trip and, where appropriate, this will be made public.

He said appropriated funds should be avoided when possible by using U.S.-owned foreign currencies for expenses within other countries. And he said detailed reports on how all money was spent must be filed within 30 days after each trip.

He said the $75-a-day allowance authorized by law for overseas travel by members of Congress must be used only for expenses clearly required to carry out the trip.

Foreign payments 'policy instrument'

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senate Majority Leader Robert C. Byrd said Saturday that President Carter ought to be free to authorize payments to foreign leaders if such payments are in the national interest.

"I think the President ought to have the discretion to utilize such payments as an instrument of foreign policy," Byrd told reporters.

The CIA reportedly paid millions of dollars to King Hussein of Jordan over 20 years.

Byrd also said there should be safeguards against leaks of information as sensitive as such payments would be.

Byrd said he was present at a White House meeting Wednesday, but did not hear a discussion about the possibility of FBI surveillance of Senate intelligence committee members.

Fluorocarbons risk seen reduced by sand and sun

WASHINGTON (AP) — Scientists say some of the chemicals thought to damage the atmosphere's protective ozone layer apparently break down before causing harm. But the amount destroyed probably is too small to greatly reduce the overall problem, they add.

Scientists at the Commerce Department's National Bureau of Standards said in a report released Saturday that they discovered that two implicated fluorocarbon chemicals and another related one break down when absorbed by sand and bathed in sunlight.

Dr. Pierre J. Ausloos said this previously unsuspected breakdown of fluorocarbons illustrates that there may be other unknown processes in nature that affect the amount of fluorocarbons reaching the upper atmosphere.

But Ausloos said he does not believe the process he and Dr. Richard E. Rebbert discovered had more than a minimal effect on the total amount of fluorocarbons dumped into the air.

Concern about fluorocarbons has increased since 1974 when Drs. Mario Molina and Frank Rowland of the University of California said computer studies indicated the chemicals used as aerosol spray-can propellants and refrigerants reached the upper atmosphere.

Once in the stratosphere, Molina and Rowland said, high energy solar radiation decomposes the chemicals releasing chlorine atoms that destroy ozone.

Ozone shields the earth from high energy solar radiation and scientists fear its depletion would lead to increases in skin cancer, changes in vegetation and animal life, and possibly affect climate.

Last September, the National Academy of Sciences released an authoritative report saying that while more study is needed, all indications are that fluorocarbons are depleting ozone and that some regulation of use would almost certainly be necessary.

Since then, the Food and Drug Administration, the Environmental Protection Agency and the Consumer Product Safety Commission have taken steps to ban many fluorocarbon uses within two years.

Fluorocarbon manufacturers say such action is premature and should await further study. Chemical companies say unknown reactions, like the one discovered by Ausloos and Rebbert, could reduce the threat.

Pentagon faces it: unionized services 'strong possibility'

By JEFFREY ANTEVIL
Knight News Service

WASHINGTON — In a recurring nightmare among some Pentagon brass, a young lieutenant orders his platoon to storm an enemy gun position, only to be told by a buck private who identifies himself as "shop steward" that the unit has already completed its eight-hour shift and is off duty for the day.

Even the staunchest foes of unionization of the uniformed services — a category which embraces virtually all of the top military and civilian officials at the Defense Department — would concede that this vision is extreme.

But the prospect of enlisted men and their officers joining labor unions is neither a pipedream nor a nightmare. An outside study just released by the Pentagon calls it "a distinct possibility."

Unless Congress or President Carter act to stop it, the first organizing drive among servicemen and women may begin as early as this spring. Before the year is over, members of the armed services could be demanding the right to bargain collectively with their superiors over such matters as pay, leave and working conditions.

"We are pretty much ready to go," a spokesman for the American Federation of Government Employes (AFGE), an AFL—CIO affiliate, replied when asked about the status of military unionization. The union voted last September to open its rolls to servicemen, and its executive council is expected to authorize an organizing effort at a meeting early next month, subject to approval by a majority of AFGE locals.

In addition, a labor source said at least two other unions, the National Maritime Union and the Teamsters, are considering similar efforts.

Opponents are already moving to head off the unions. The top officers of the Army, Navy, Air Force and Marines testified before the Senate Armed Services Committee earlier this month that unions have no place in the military and should be banned by law. The new civilian leadership at the Pentagon, including Defense Secretary Harold Brown, is also opposed to unionization.

Anti-military unionization bills have been pending in both houses of Congress for some time, but they have received powerful new support from Sen. John C. Stennis, D-Miss., chairman of the Armed Services Committee, who promised hearings in the near future.

Sen. Strom Thurmond, R-S.C., author of a bill with more than 30 co-sponsors which would impose criminal penalties for attempting to organize servicemen, summarized the opposition view last week. In a report on the pros and cons of military unionization published by the American Enterprise Institute, Thurmond said "an effective defense force is built and maintained upon a foundation of discipline... and quick responsiveness."

He added:

"This foundation cannot exist with loyalty divided between the chain of command and a union... When our men are called upon to defend their country, a commander must have unquestioned authority to order them into battle and the power to enforce his order."

Supporters of military unionization point to the growth of labor unions in municipal police and fire departments and say that similar grievances are pushing the armed services in the same direction.

Army reshapes to gain speed, mobility

By DREW MIDDLETON
New York Times Service

NEW YORK — The United States Army will begin this fall a long-range program to raise the firepower and manpower of armored and mechanized infantry divisions. The program is intended to counter the recent strengthening of Soviet division in these two areas.

Successful tests of the new divisional organization will result in units of 17,800 men, instead of 16,500, with 15 instead of 11 battalions, 56 more heavy guns, 200 more junior officers and 54 more tanks in the mechanized infantry units.

In the trial program starting at Fort Hood, Tex., in September, the Army will test the effectiveness of infantry battalions of 400 instead of 600 men and of tank battalions reduced to 475 soldiers from 550. The number of tanks in each platoon will be cut from five to three.

One objective, according to Lt. Col. Daryl Jaschen, the Pentagon's project manager for the reorganization, is to increase the "alacrity" with which individual divisional units, armored, infantry or artillery, react to battlefield situations.

First major combat revision since WW II

ANOTHER IS to simplify the junior officer's job by enabling him to concentrate on a single combat role. Now a company commander, engaging an enemy at 3,000 meters, has 35 options ranging from air strikes to anti-tank weapons. Under the new organization he would deal only with the special weapons in his command.

Three developments stimulated recommendations for the Army's first major reorganization of its 11 heavy divisions, armored and mechanized infantry since World War II.

The first was the Arab-Israeli war of 1973 with its very heavy losses of armored fighting vehicles to anti-tank weapons, due in many cases to the absence of sufficient artillery to break up infantry attacks against armor.

The second was the imbalance in artillery and tanks between Soviet and American forces. The Russians have roughly seven times as many artillery pieces, according to Col. Jaschen, and four times as many tanks.

The final stimulus was the expectation that the remotely piloted surface-to-air and surface-to-surface weapons that will be deployed early in the next decade will require a new divisional organization.

These are sophisticated systems requiring longer and more advanced training, larger ammunition stocks on the battlefield instead of in rear areas and a high degree of competence in maintenance under active battle conditions.

CITING ARTILLERY as "the biggest killer on the battlfield," Col. Jaschen said that the artillery "has got to be beefed up" and at present the inferiority in this combat arm is "the biggest deficiency that has to be corrected."

The number of 155-milimeter self-propelled howitzers in each division will be increased from 54 to 96 and the number of eight-inch guns from 12 to 56. The guns will fire the cannon-launched laser-guided projectile now being developed. In trials, the projectile has been hitting consistently within 10 meters of the center of the target, close enough to destroy most tanks.

"For the first time in the history of warfare," Col. Jaschen said, "you will be able to kill a tank with field artillery; until now the guns have always been area weapons."

The new projectiles cost about $5,000 each compared to $150 for the less accurate standard 155 shell.

The number of tanks, now 354, in an armored division will not be reduced in accordance to the size of the armored platoons. But battalions will have 36 instead of the present 54 tanks.

MECHANIZED INFANTRY divisions will have 324 tanks instead of 270 as the new XM-1 tank replaces the Sheridans, classed as an armored fighting vehicle. The mechanized infantry divisions already have had a certain number of tanks.

The reduction in the number of tanks in a platoon from five to three is intended to improve the platoon commander's control of his unit. The Israelis in 1973 found that the three-tank platoon was easier to handle in battle.

Specialization will extend beyond armored units. The new divisions will have an air defense group. They also will rely on the Air force and the Cobra-Tow helicopter for air support against a hostile force.

"The young company commanders will fight the battle," Col. Jaschen said. "In the new divisional organization, each will command a single weapons system, tanks, anti-tank, infantry in armored personnel carriers."

Implicit in the reorganization program is the Army's expectation that the volunteer professional force will be continued. Pentagon officers insist that the new weapons now under development are so sophisticated that long and intensive training on them is necessary if they are to be used effectively.

The first Cavalry Division will test the new organization. Phase one will be devoted to operations at the battalion level. Next year the test will move to brigade and in 1979 the full division with new equipment will be tested.

status as a tax-exempt, non-profit organization and raises questions of impropriety in FHP's financal relationship with its profit-making subsidiaries. A subcommittee headed by Sen. Sam Nunn, D-Ga., has also investigated possible improprieties in FHP's finances.

Six directors of FHP hold one or more positions with profit-making affiliates of FHP such as Plaza Pharmacy Corp., Physicians' Equipment Rental Co. and Medical Centers Building Co.

GUMBINER denies any impropriety. He says the directors raised personal capital to invest in facilities which FHP couldn't afford to build, and then rented the facilities to FHP.

"I can see why the attorney general might think board members owning a building would conceivably charge FHP unfair rent, but FHP has been audited repeatedly by outsiders, and no one has questioned the fairness of rents, x-ray charges or anything else," Gumbiner said. "The attorney general's suit raises theoretical questions for which he has no evidence."

Gumbiner said he met with representatives of the attorney general last week in Sacramento and ironed out a tentative settlement proposal in which any property held in common by FHP and its profit-making affiliates will be sold to FHP, eliminating the basis for the suspected improprieties.

He said FHP is financially stable enough to buy the rented facilities which it could not afford to build at the time the subsidiaries were established.

"In fairness to all parties, especially the patients, FHP asked the health department for a provisional extension of its Medi-Cal contract until an equitable solution could be reached or alternate health care could be arranged for the patients," Gumbiner said.

"WE WERE waiting for the settlement proposal to be confirmed by Younger when (Secretary of Health and Welfare Mario) Obledo decided not to grant the extension of our contract — based, we believe, on incomplete information," Gumbiner said.

Included in the letters mailed Saturday to the 16,000 Medi-Cal recipients were special stickers which they are to give to their new doctors and hospitals when they seek care, Nance said.

Under its Medi-Cal contract, FHP has received a pre-paid, fixed monthly subsidy for every Medi-Cal client signed up, with no stickers involved. Individual doctors and hospitals receive post-treatment compensation for every sticker collected.

FHP does not have the facilities or necessary licenses to process the stickers, Gumbiner said.

FHP has about 35,000 clients who are not subsidized by government aid. They receive complete care for an annual fee, often paid by employers or unions. Under the terms of its articles of incorporation as a pre-paid health organization, FHP cannot treat patients on a fee-for-service basis, he added.

"We won't immediately abandon acutely ill patients, but the Medi-Cal patients cannot continue to receive routine medical services from FHP," he said.

"OUR MEDI-CAL patients include elderly people with heart conditions, diabetics on maintenance drugs and about 600 mentally ill patients currently in therapy, which include homicidal patients, child molesters and other psychopathics.

"What's going to happen to them?" he asked. "Local clinics and mental health facilities are overloaded. Other patients in the midst of eye care and dental treatment will not get their glasses or dentures."

If FHP fails to win a restraining order and loses the contract, the program will not try to win a new contract after its dispute with the attorney general is settled, Gumbiner said.

"It would cost in excess of a half million dollars to sign up these 16,000 people. If we tried to get a new contract, the sick would come back to us on their own, but we would have to launch an expensive door-to-door effort to sign up healthy persons in order for the plan to succeed economically.

"We have to sign up healthy people as well as the sick in order to spread the risk evenly. Under our plan, the client pays a known fee each month and never worries about paying unusually high bills for catastrophic illnesses."

He said the 16,000 Medi-Cal recipients now served by FHP were signed up over a six-year period since the pre-paid project was authorized in 1969.

FHP has offices in Long Beach, Compton, Fountain Valley, Anaheim, Santa Ana, Guam and Utah.

Governor to discuss water with Carter

FRESNO (AP) — Gov. Brown announced Saturday he will meet with President Carter to "ask for what assistance we can" on California water problems.

Brown, here to study San Joaquin Valley water problems, said he consulted with administration officials by telephone last week on long-term water needs and indicated he will meet with the President on Monday.

"We have begun the process of bringing factions together who are interested in the needs of water in California so in a few months, we can develop a unified position," Brown told water officials and valley legislators.

"We want to present for Congressional review a complete water program that will satisfy our needs well past the year 2,000."

He expressed optimism that a solution can be found to the conflict over water diversions to control salinity in the Sacramento-San Joaquin Delta and the need of farmers for more irrigation water.

"There are obviously competing forces between delta interests and the San Joaquin Valley which I think we can bring together now," Brown said. "From meetings held last week, I think we are on the right track."

Valley legislators heard a variety of suggestions for solving both the short-range drought problem and the longer range need for new water supplies.

Police fence operation nets $2 million in loot

WASHINGTON (AP) — A fencing operation run by police and the FBI for 14 months has recovered $2 million in stolen jewelry, securities, luxury cars and antiques, authorities announced Saturday. Federal arrest warrants were issued for 16 persons in five East Coast states.

The operation was conducted over 14 months from a $1,500-a-month hotel room in the plush Shoreham Americana hotel. Among the 64 expensive items purchased were such items as a irreplaceable antique mirror that had been stolen from the U.S. Capitol, $220,000 in municipal and corporate securities and a tractor-trailer with a load of over 1,000 cases of liquor.

The bogus fencing operation was the third conducted by law enforcement agencies in Washington in the last year. The others have resulted in 330 arrest warrants and to date there have been 200 convictions.

The first operation was known as "The Sting" and the second as "GYA" for "Got You Again." The operation disclosed Saturday, which ran concurrently with the others, was called "Highroller."

The completion of Highroller was announced by Nick F. Stames, agent in charge of the Washington FBI office; Maurice Cullinane, Washington's police chief, and Earl J. Silbert, U.S. attorney.

"Some of the information we gathered will be invaluable to the Federal Bureau of Investigation because we have been able to penetrate organized crime," said Cullinane.

"The hotel suite was used for the entire 14 months, but some of the transactions were in other jurisdictions. We went from North Carolina to New York and all the states in between," he said.

and to meet with him Monday at 11 a.m.

Despite official Ugandan assurances that the Americans were in no danger, a White House spokesman said the United States would do "whatever is necessary" to save them if their lives are threatened.

Amin also sent a long and rambling cable to President Carter, telling him the United States should consider its own violations of human rights before meddling in Ugandan affairs.

Mugabi told the Daily Nation that all prisoners at Makindye were divided into separate cells for military personnel, political prisoners and "elimination chambers."

On the night of Feb. 18, he was quoted as saying, all the Langi tribesmen among the prisoners were herded out of their cells and killed.

Amin world enigma

and ordered them to a meeting with him Monday in Kampala, the capital.

At the same time, Amin sent Carter a long telegram urging that the United States consider what he called its own human rights crimes before involving itself in Ugandan affairs.

It was only last November that Idi Amin was claiming credit for the election of Carter. He had said that his announced support prompted American blacks to vote for him.

Through the years Amin, a former Ugandan heavyweight boxing champion, has thrust himself into world headlines. Some of his exploits:

—He has said Adolf Hitler was "right to burn 6 million Jews."

—He fired Princess Elizabeth Bagaya, a former model and actress, as his foreign minister after charging that she had sexual relations in the restroom of a Paris airport with a white man on her way home from the United Nations. The princess and French officials called the charge absurd.

—In a move to put Uganda's economy fully in the hands of nationals, he expelled 40,000 Asians who had British passports in 1972.

He brought charges against British researcher Denis Hills for writing in an unpublished manuscript that Amin was a village tyrant. A Ugandan court sentenced Hills to death, and only after the intervention of the British and Zaire governments did Amin spare the Briton's life.

AMIN governs a landlocked nation that is about the size of Oregon. Because of its mountains and lakes the east-central African nation sometimes is called the Switzerland of Africa. Its 11.6 million people come from various African tribes and make their living mostly off the land. A chief export is coffee. Last year Uganda sold 2.43 million 132-pound bags of coffee abroad.

But the leadership and personality of Idi Amin have made Uganda a known word around the world.

"A stench comes forth from everything associated with Idi Amin," said Dr. Thomas Melady the last American ambassador to Uganda, who urged Carter Friday to expel the Ugandan diplomatic delegation from Washington. "There are certain things you just can't tolerate, and having the representatives of this killer in the United States is one of them."

"All men are both good and bad, and presidents are also men," Idi Amin once said. "We must respect our presidents, even if they become so bad we have to remove them. We made them presidents; if they were bad we have ourselves to blame."

MOST biographies say Amin was born sometime in 1925—they don't know exactly when—in the Moslem and Kakwa tribal district of northwest Uganda. The biographies say his mother, who had a reputation as a sorceress, left the area when Idi was very young and that he had little contact with his father, a peasant.

But Amin told a different story at a meeting in 1975 of the Organization of African Unity in Kampala.

He said he was born in 1928 in a police barracks that once stood at the site of the meeting. He said his father was a police sergeant.

Biographers say he had only a partial grade school education before joining the King's African Rifles in 1946, when Uganda was a British protectorate.

"I never had any formal education—not even a nursery school certificate," he once said in an interview. "True. But sometimes I know more than doctors of philosophy because as a military man I know how to act. I am a man of action."

At 6-feet-4 and weighing 250 pounds, Amin was prime soldier material.

Maj. Grahame said in 1975: "He was the most natural born leader that I've ever met."

In 1961, after Uganda gained independence from Britain, Amin became a lieutenant and one of the first two Ugandan officers. It was during this period that he became Uganda's heavyweight boxing champion, a title he held for nine years.

BUT HIS military record was marred by stories of personal cruelty and indiscipline.

In 1966 he faced charges from political opponents that he embezzled $47,600 given him by Congolese rebels to buy arms for the fight against Congolese leader Moise Tshombe. But Milton Obote, also implicated, quashed the opposition and promoted Amin to armed forces commander.

Personal and political differences developed between Obote and Gen. Amin, however.

Feeling himself threatened, Amin took power in a military coup in 1971, while Obote was attending a Commonwealth summit conference in Singapore.

From the beginning of his rule Amin resorted to outrageous rhetoric and general clowning.

His propensity for lecturing world leaders led him to wish former President Nixon "a speedy recovery" from the Watergate affair, suggest that former President Ford choose a black vice president and advise Arab states to "train kamikaze pilots to beat Israel."

Amin's clowning could not drown out the charges of brutality.

Accounts of tribal massacres and systematic extermination of his opponents filtered out from Uganda.

PRISONERS were said to have been sledge-hammered to death in jails and dismembered corpses fed to crocodiles in the Nile. Judges were reported bundled into car trunks and never seen again.

Concern for his own security prompts Amin to move about under tight guard. Opposition to his rule has resulted in at least eight assassination attempts. In 1976 grenades were tossed at his car, killing his driver and wounding 37 bystanders.

Friends concede that Amin is capable of bewildering explosions of energy and personality. He works 14 or more hours a day, flying to the remotest parts of Uganda and driving himself around Kampala.

He has married five wives and divorced three of them, fathering an estimated 20 or more children.

He promoted himself to field marshal and president for life and awarded himself numerous medals, including the Victoria Cross, a Ugandan copy of Britain's highest award for bravery.

He once boasted: "All those doctors of philosophy, they are not better than me. They cannot do what I do. I am very tough, yes. I am a pure son of Africa."

Summary of Secret Witness cases

The Independent, Press-Telegram's Secret Witness program has resulted in the arrest of 70 criminal suspects and fugitives from justice since the program was inaugurated on June 10, 1972, with rewards totaling $48,500 paid or committed on conviction of suspects waiting trial. Additional reward money available for informants is specified in the case list below, one of the varying summaries of 10 Secret Witness cases printed in the Independent and Press-Telegram each Sunday and Thursday.

Rewards also will be paid for information leading to the arrest and conviction of suspects in any other major criminal cases, whether covered in these summaries or not, and for the apprehension of fugitives from justice. These rewards will vary in amount, depending on the seriousness of the offense.

Rewards in all cases, whether or not previously published, will remain in effect until such cases are closed or until notification in these pages that the reward has been withdrawn.

To ensure eligibility for rewards, informants must channel all information directly through Secret Witness — that is, to notify Secret Witness first — either by calling the special Secret Witness number or by writing to the I.P-T Secret Witness editor.

In cases in which outside organizations or individuals pledge an additional reward to that guaranteed by Secret Witness, the Independent, Press-Telegram assumes responsibility for payment only of that amount guaranteed by Secret Witness.

Today's summaries follow:

— A $2,000 reward will be paid for information leading to the arrest and murder conviction of the killer of 24-year-old Robert J. Rodriguez, of Long Beach, who was found shot to death at L Street and Figueroa Place in Wilmington — just across the street from Harbor College — on the morning of Jan. 16, 1977.

— Rewards totaling $20,000 are offered for information leading to the arrest and murder conviction of the killer of Long Beach police officer Franke Neal Lewis, shot to death at 2:30 a.m. on Dec. 14, 1975, when he approached a car parked in the 6300 block on Cantel Street to investigate a disturbance. The rewards include $2,000 guaranteed by Secret Witness, $10,000 from state funds pledged by Gov. Brown and $8,000 pledged by the Long Beach Police Officers Association.

— Rewards totaling $7,000 — including $2,000 guaranteed by Secret Witness and $5,000 pledged by the victim's parents — will be paid for the arrest and murder conviction of the killer of 19-year-old Janet Stalleup, of Garden Grove, whose body was found in her car in the parking lot of a Garden Grove apartment building at 13111 Yockey St. on the morning of Dec. 27, 1976. Her neck had been broken and she had been raped.

— A $2,000 reward will be paid for information leading to the arrest and murder conviction of the killer of 2-year-old Naeenah Smith, of South Los Angeles, who was seized from the arms of her stepmother by two men in front of a South Los Angeles supermarket at 3:10 p.m. on Nov. 8, 1976, strangled, and dumped in a trash bin six blocks away. Police believe the case may be connected with a Long Beach crime since the stepmother, LaRonda Burton, was the mother of 5-year-old Andrea "Trecey" Logan, who was found strangled in an alley near their Long Beach home on May 7, 1974.

— A $2,000 reward is offered for information leading to the arrest and murder conviction of the killer of 16-year-old Freddie Jones and 17-year-old Roderick Williamson of, Long Beach, found shot to death execution-style with hands bound behind them near the Terminal Island Freeway at Pacific Coast Highway on June 27, 1976.

— A $2,000 reward is offered for information leading to the arrest and murder conviction of the killer of Refugio Chavez, 32, gunned down outside his home on McDonald Avenue in Wilmington at 2:20 a.m. June 13, 1976. Chavez had just arrived home and was attempting to quiet revelers at a noisy drinking party in the street when he was shot down.

— Rewards totaling $4,500 — including $2,000 guaranteed by Secret Witness and $2,500 pledged by family members and friends — will be paid for information leading to the arrest and murder conviction of the killer of Felix R. Porrazzo, 55-year-old flower shop owner, who was savagely and fatally bludgeoned during a robbery at his shop at 3950 Atlantic Ave. in Long Beach at about 9 a.m. on Sunday, May 30, 1976.

— Rewards totaling $2,500, including $2,000 guaranteed by Secret Witness and $500 pledged by the Bellflower Education Association, will be paid for information leading to the arrest and murder conviction of the slayer of Joseph Clark Bott, 41-year-old Bellflower High School teacher who was shot to death as he was returning to his home at 6054 Whitewood Ave. in Lakewood at 5:30 p.m. on Nov. 30, 1975.

— A $2,000 reward will be paid for information leading to the arrest and murder conviction of the killer of Stephen Duane McCord, a 28-year-old Mira Loma man found shot to death in an alley at the rear of 3033 E. Anaheim St. on the morning of April 1, 1976.

— A $2,000 reward will be paid for information leading to the arrest and murder conviction of the killer of 16-year-old Wendy Blanchard of Santa Monica, whose partly nude and bludgeoned body was found on the morning of Jan. 7, 1976, on a sidewalk near 172 W. Colden Ave., in South Los Angeles. She was last seen alive at 11:25 p.m. on Jan. 6 at the Greyhound bus station in Long Beach, where she was talking with a tall, thin, young black man.

SANDY DENNIS
Strange Star

Earl Wilson

Dennis a menace to marriage

NEW YORK — "I'm going to be 40 on April 27, I'm going to love it and I want a lot of presents," Sandy Dennis said the other day between sniffles.

It's unusual for an actress to volunteer her age, but Sandy's an unusual lady. As she sat in the stage manager's office at the Brooks Atkinson Theater, where she's starring in "Same Time, Next Year," Sandy had a sable coat wrapped around her legs and her booted feet up on a chair. She was fighting a cold and looking sicker as she talked.

"I think age is personal," she said. "I like telling mine. I haven't figured out why."

"Maybe because you don't look it?"

"Is that it? Twenty-five years of my life I was probably marriageable, but I don't think I am anymore. I think the prime is over."

OVER AT 40! Sandy nodded and blew her nose. She still seems like a young girl. She has lived with two men, one whom she wasn't naming, and then red-bearded jazz saxophonist Gerry Mulligan. For a decade they went through the fiction that they were married, not telling people they weren't until they broke up, when everybody was surprised to learn that Sandy wasn't really Mrs. Mulligan and never had been.

Here is a girl from Lincoln, Neb., who says marriage never got her interest, not even with Mulligan.

"I don't remember whether the subject ever came up," Sandy said. "We didn't tell everybody we were just living together because that wasn't in fashion then as it is now.

"Anyway, I didn't want to get married. I never wanted to get dressed up that much; I never wanted a family; I never wanted children. I'm too old to have children. I don't want to be a 60-year-old mother of a 20-year-old daughter. Just like I don't want to move to New Jersey, I don't want to get married."

Sandy pulled the sable tighter around her legs ("I bought it when I was rich; I wish I had the money back") and said, "I'm a Taurus; we're kind of slow."

She doesn't do anything to attract attention: "To attract attention now I'd have to get pregnant by some married celebrity."

BUT SHE'LL BE getting attention, because she's in a new movie, "Nasty Habits," which is a take-off of Watergate, with Sandy playing a nun with a character likened to John Dean. It will probably be controversial. Sandy will be seen dressed as a man, wearing a mustache, being disrobed in a men's room and discovered not to be a man.

"As I get to be 40," she said, "I know I'm going to continue to work. My career is as a theater actress. I don't get asked to do many movies — one about every five years. I can keep working on the stage till I'm 70 if I'm healthy, and if I get one picture every five years I'll do six more pictures."

Sandy doesn't even want a man around the house, she says: "That's like having a foreign object living with you. Nobody can say to me, 'Where the hell have you been?' It bores me. Perhaps that's why I'm not married."

In her non-married, non-attached way, Sandy is very happy living with her many, many cats and dogs in Connecticut: "I love taking the train in to work. It gives me a couple of hours to read."

Sandy wishes she could be a businesswoman like Marlo Thomas:

"I can see her sitting at a desk putting this together with that and making it all work. With me, I'd say, 'I'll go to the Gotham Book Store and buy a book and read awhile.' A girl like Marlo Thomas — you know the elastic in her underwear is always good. If I could be like her, I could have several huge cat farms."

TODAY'S BEST LAUGH: Mickey Freeman's back from a cruise that hit bad weather: "I've been on rough seas before, but when you see the ship's captain come out of the doctor's office ..."

WISH I'D SAID THAT: A lot of people (notes Angie Papadakis) trying to get part of Howard Hughes' estate: "Some of them figure where there's no will there's a way."

EARL'S PEARLS: George Gobel once admitted he sometimes got dizzy after one drink: "Usually the sixth or seventh."

Henny Youngman took a physical exam, watched the doctor apply the stethoscope and asked nervously, "Hear anything expensive, doc?" That's Earl, brother

'40s trumpeter Ferguson 48 and doing fine

Knight News Service

NEW YORK — "I was on the Charlie Barnet band with Maynard in the '40s," the musician said. "When he started for those high notes some of the guys would drop quarters in a hat. It was a bet to see if he'd make it."

Trumpeter and multi-horn man Maynard Ferguson made it then as a young section man by blowing his horn's upper register into demonic screeches. Though some called him an exhibitionist — and still do — it drove fans wild. Today at 48 he makes it pretty much the same way. His horn has felt more high Cs than a sailor.

The 13-piece ear bender he leads now makes adroit use of rock and Indian music forms, which he studied during 18 months in residence near Madras in 1969, yet it is still jazz-oriented.

"I've always been a great believer in change," Ferguson says of his musical preferences. "You can't stick in one groove." So he takes what he wants from other idioms and absorbs it for his own purposes.

That his use of Indian and rock devices is successful is obvious from his album sales. "Primal Scream" sank in for almost 120,000 copies — a miracle for a big band — and his recording of the theme from the film "Rocky" is rising as fast as a Ferguson arpeggio.

Dennis a menace to marriage

SANDY DENNIS
Strange Star

NEW YORK — "I'm going to be 40 on April 27, I'm going to love it and I want a lot of presents," Sandy Dennis said the other day between sniffles.

It's unusual for an actress to volunteer her age, but Sandy's an unusual lady. As she sat in the stage manager's office at the Brooks Atkinson Theater, where she's starring in "Same Time, Next Year," Sandy had a sable coat wrapped around her legs and her booted feet up on a chair. She was fighting a cold and looking sicker as she talked.

"I think age is personal," she said. "I like telling mine. I haven't figured out why."

"Maybe because you don't look it?"

"Is that it? Twenty-five years of my life I was probably marriageable, but I don't think I am anymore. I think the prime is over."

OVER AT 40! Sandy nodded and blew her nose. She still seems like a young girl. She has lived with two men, one whom she wasn't naming, and then red-bearded jazz saxophonist Gerry Mulligan. For a decade they went through the fiction that they were married, not telling people they weren't until they broke up, when everybody was surprised to learn that Sandy wasn't really Mrs. Mulligan and never had been.

Here is a girl from Lincoln, Neb., who says marriage never got her interest, not even with Mulligan.

"I don't remember whether the subject ever came up," Sandy said. "We didn't tell everybody we were just living together because that wasn't in fashion then as it is now.

"Anyway, I didn't want to get married. I never wanted to get dressed up that much; I never wanted a family; I never wanted children. I'm too old to have children. I don't want to be a 60-year-old mother of a 20-year-old daughter. Just like I don't want to move to New Jersey, I don't want to get married."

Sandy pulled the sable tighter around her legs ("I bought it when I was rich; I wish I had the money back") and said, "I'm a Taurus; we're kind of slow."

She doesn't do anything to attract attention: "To attract attention now I'd have to get pregnant by some married celebrity."

BUT SHE'LL BE getting attention, because she's in a new movie, "Nasty Habits," which is a take-off of Watergate, with Sandy playing a nun with a character likened to John Dean. It will probably be controversial. Sandy will be seen dressed as a man, wearing a mustache, being disrobed in a men's room and discovered not to be a man.

"As I get to be 40," she said, "I know I'm going to continue to work. My career is as a theater actress. I don't get asked to do many movies — one about every five years. I can keep working on the stage till I'm 70 if I'm healthy, and if I get one picture every five years I'll do six more pictures."

Sandy doesn't even want a man around the house, she says: "That's like having a foreign object living with you. Nobody can say to me, 'Where the hell have you been?' It bores me. Perhaps that's why I'm not married."

In her non-married, non-attached way, Sandy is very happy living with her many, many cats and dogs in Connecticut: "I love taking the train in to work. It gives me a couple of hours to read."

Sandy wishes she could be a businesswoman like Marlo Thomas:

"I can see her sitting at a desk putting this together with that and making it all work. With me, I'd say, 'I'll go to the Gotham Book Store and buy a book and read awhile.' A girl like Marlo Thomas — you know the elastic in her underwear is always good. If I could be like her, I could have several huge cat farms."

TODAY'S BEST LAUGH: Mickey Freeman's back from a cruise that hit bad weather: "I've been on rough seas before, but when you see the ship's captain come out of the doctor's office . . . "

WISH I'D SAID THAT: A lot of people (notes Angie Papadakis) trying to get part of Howard Hughes' estate: "Some of them figure where there's no will there's a way."

EARL'S PEARLS: George Gobel once admitted he sometimes got dizzy after one drink: "Usually the sixth or seventh."

Henny Youngman took a physical exam, watched the doctor apply the stethoscope and asked nervously, "Hear anything expensive, doc?" That's Earl, brother.

'I see the same as everyone else'

Feliciano blind — but not handicapped

By A. ACE BURGESS
Staff Writer

Singer-guitarist-actor Jose Feliciano was born sightless 31 years ago. Medically and legally, he is still blind, but in some ways he sees as well as anyone with 20-20 vision.

To prove it, he does a number of things that many blind persons would never think of doing. Last week he went skiing in the California mountains, and before that he went horseback riding, swimming and water skiing and played a game of baseball.

How does he do it? Simple — he decides which way he wants to go and moves ahead with all deliberate speed. His blindness has never been a problem and, he says, never will be.

"I know a lot of people see my blindness as a handicap," he said while sipping a cup of coffee in the Hollywood offices of his publicist. "But I never have. I don't believe I have a handicap.

"I see the same as everyone else," he said. "I don't see the sunset or moonlight, but I feel it. I can touch, sense and feel things, and it's in this context that I have 20-20 vison. I understand what life is all about, and I'm happy with the way things are, because they could have been much worse."

FELICIANO has never been one to let his lack of sight get in his way, and it's for this reason that he's one of the most respected performers in the entertainment industry.

What he's done and achieved in his short life puts most sighted men to shame. Although he underplays his blindness, his success in the entertainment industry has been a long, hard climb from the beginning.

Blind since his birth in the rural town of Larez, Puerto Rico, he was the second of 12 children.

His family was poor and couldn't afford medical help. Before his father, a farmer, moved the family to New York City, three of his brothers and sisters died of childhood illnessess.

Feliciano was too young to remember those days, but he has vivid memories of times he wanted to play with other Spanish Harlem kids but couldn't because of his blindness.

This being the case, he found an enjoyable hobby, playing a second-hand accordion. He spent hours picking out chords and following tunes on scratchy records his mother bought. The extremely agile left hand he displays today while playing the guitar he credits to the hours he spent learning the accordion.

HE WASN'T a bad accordion player, but his first love was the guitar. After purchasing one for $10, he began imitating the vocal styles of Sam Cooke, Ray Charles and Frank Sinatra by listening to them on the radio.

As he grew older, he started singing in Greenwich Village coffeehouses in order to sustain himself and take some of the burden off his father, who was then a longshoreman.

Before long he was discovered by a talent agent, and the rags-to-riches story began. It's not over, but a lot of things have happened since his discovery by RCA Records in 1964.

As of now, he's one of the top entertainers in the world, and he's enthralled audiences in North and South America, the Far East and Europe. He's given a concert for 100,000 cheering fans at South America's Mar del Plata Festival and appeared with symphony orchestras in the United States and Britain.

HE ALSO SCORED the theme of the television series "Chico and the Man," wrote and performed original compositions for "Sesame Street," scored music for the film "Aaron Loves Angela," sold records in excess of 86 million and has 32 gold records to his credit and two Grammy awards.

He's also found time to do some acting. To date, he's appeared on "McMillan and Wife," "Chico and the Man" and the defunct series "Kung Fu."

After doing all this, you might wonder what next he has up his sleeve. Well, you're the first to know that it won't be acting. It's not that he's not a good actor, or that he doesn't like it, but he knows that his roots are in music.

"I'm going to give up acting, at least for the moment," said Feliciano, leaning back in his chair. "I want to expand a lot more musically before I get back into acting. My goal right now is to be somewhat like Stevie Wonder. I'm learning to play a number of instruments like the drums, bass guitar and organ.

"STEVIE IS my No. 1 man, and the reason is that he can never top himself. Every album he does is as good as the last one because he uses a variety of musical concepts. I'm picking up some pointers now that I think will make me a better overall performer."

Anyone wanting to check out these pointers can do so March 17-19 when Feliciano appears at the Roxy Theater in Hollywood. There will be two shows a night, at 9 and 11. He will feature a number of songs from his new album, "Sweet Soul Music."

After this engagement, he will embark on a tour that will take him to such far places as Mexico City and Florida. As for what keeps him going, that can be said in one word — people.

"People are very important to me," he said. "They give warmth to me, and I give warmth to them. The end result is that we both go home happy."

And Feliciano is happy, a lot happier than he would have been if he had listened to what people were telling him as a young boy:

" 'Don't be an entertainer. Take vocational rehabilitation, and we'll set you up with a newspaper stand'," he remembered. "When I refused, they said, 'Why do you have to be so difficult?' Well, I'm sure glad I was difficult."

His Valentine was wayward, but the husband wasn't

CONCORD, N.H. (AP) — A wayward Valentine's Day card caused a marital spat until a postal worker stepped in with an alibi for the husband.

It began when the husband, whose name was not released, mailed the card in Concord. Under new procedures, the Postal Service sent the card to Manchester, 20 miles south, for sorting and postmarking.

The Valentine arrived a day late, and the wife also asked her husband what he was doing in Manchester.

After she threatened to leave him, he asked the post office for an explanation. An employe couldn't explain why it took five days for the woman to get the Valentine but did explain how the card, and not her husband, got to Manchester.

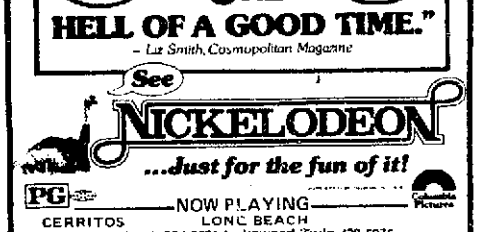

World opera is singing the blues

LONDON (AP)—The Royal Opera House at Covent Garden recently announced it made a profit of $184,000 on opera and ballet last season. It was a tiny sum—around 1 per cent of the Garden's total budget.

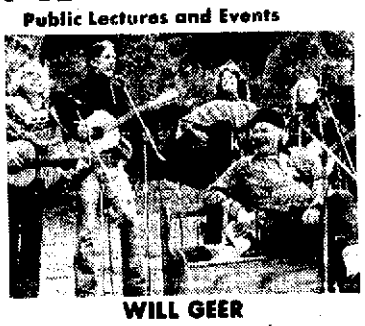

It may have been the only profit made by any of the world's major houses in the year just ended, but the effect was spoiled when Sir Claus Moser, Covent Garden's chairman, announced in almost the same breath, "We take a very gloomy and worrying view of the future."

Sir Claus' views are shared by administrators of every other major opera house, where soaring fees, mounting production costs and inflation are threatening to put a night at the opera out of reach of all but the very rich—or very educated—lovers of probably the most expensive art form in the world.

The Lur

It just wasn't her night

By JUDITH MUSAFIA

Greek pianist Vasso Devetzy proved, in her recital Friday night at El Camino College Auditorium, that she is no successor to her late compatriot, Gina Bachauer.

While a biographical note in the program speaks of many triumphs in her career, her playing on this occasion did not reflect these claims.

REVIEW

The program consisted of the Haydn Sonata No. 52, the Mozart Sonata in A Minor (K. 310), Beethoven's 32 Variations in C minor, Schumann's "Papillons" (Op. 2) and two Chopin works, the Scherzo No. 3 in C Sharp Minor and the Andante Spianato and Grand Polonaise (Op. 22).

All these works except perhaps for the last two, unless played with superb control and imagination, do not pose technical problems of the first order. Miss Devetzy has a rather cleanly articulated finger technique, but little in terms of sonorous palette.

The two classical works on the program emerged pale and ill-conceived. The pianist's lack of expressive power was most clearly shown in the slow movements, while the faster sections would have gained from better planning for the logical unfolding of the musical forms.

The two Chopin works were decidedly more congenial to the pianist, who was able to give a more convincing account of her abilities, especially in the dialogue section of the Scherzo and the greater part of the Polonaise.

Marvin Hamlisch scoring for Bond

Oscar winner Marvin Hamlisch has been contracted to write the score for the new James Bond movie, "The Spy Who Loved Me."

Hamlisch won three Academy Awards in one year, for his song and background music in "The Way We Were" and his adaptation of Scott Joplin's ragtime in "The Sting."

YOUR HOROSCOPE by JEANE DIXON

Forecast for Monday

Your birthday today: Your main aim now should be to unify what you've accumulated to date so you can improve, manage it more easily. Social moves, creative enterprises expand as you phase out old ways of doing things. Relationships grow stronger. Today's natives show ability in drama, music, poetry, frequently are emotionally detached; impersonal. Those born this year have intense magnetism, will express themselves fluently, mistake self-indulgence for necessity.

Aries (March 21-April 19): Business, public relations are good. Past differences flare up in your personal world, find you unsure what to do. Readjust taxes, insurance, shared finances.

Taurus (April 20-May 20): Friends help your enterprises with introductions, contacts, their own participation. Keep a steady course, avoid overdoing. Expect some form of overtime.

Gemini (May 21-June 20): Speak candidly of your intentions. People who seldom pay attention listen now. A new job or venture is favored. Let intuition guide cash outlays beyond budgets.

Cancer (June 21-July 22): Personal gain is at stake. Put on a good show. Try to meet people higher up in your field, either in distant locations or slightly different specialties.

Leo (July 23-Aug. 22): Call in loans of money, possessions, settle accounts. Little you say is taken as you mean it, no progress made persuading others to agree to your plans. Patience!

Virgo (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Insist on paying your own way. Don't promise to do more for others than usual. Consultations prior to financial moves save many a dollar, future headaches.

Libra (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Your bright idea is a guideline if you simply get busy. Sketch out goals so beautifully that others see themselves comfortably situated in your projection.

Scorpio (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Aim for better results with less involvement. More progress is made in the promotion than in the doing. Social action is expensive, few choices left open.

Sagittarius (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): You're at a skeptical turning point. Wind up old matters, get ready to launch new without bringing in extra complications. Go out for competitive games.

Capricorn (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Instead of worrying, share problems and opportunity. Talk to higher-ups if possible: At your level, everybody is spoiling for a fight. Save your energy.

Aquarius (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Ask all you deserve; never mind a bit of rivalry. Let experts handle complex equipment. If you must do it, every safety precaution in the book is valid.

Pisces (Feb. 19-March 20): Momentum from recent changes carries on in your favor. Avoid extravagance, overindulgence, but make the most of advantages. Romantic appeal runs strong.

Before long he was discovered by a talent agent, and the rags-to-riches story began. It's not over, but a lot of things have happened since his discovery by RCA Records in 1964.

As of now, he's one of the top entertainers in the world, and he's enthralled audiences in North and South America, the Far East and Europe. He's given a concert for 100,000 cheering fans at South America's Mar del Plata Festival and appeared with symphony orchestras in the United States and Britain.

HE ALSO SCORED the theme of the television series "Chico and the Man," wrote and performed original compositions for "Sesame Street," scored music for the film "Aaron Loves Angela," sold records in excess of 86 million and has 32 gold records to his credit and two Grammy awards.

He's also found time to do some acting. To date, he's appeared on "McMillan and Wife," "Chico and the Man" and the defunct series "Kung Fu."

After doing all this, you might wonder what next he has up his sleeve. Well, you're the first to know that it won't be acting. It's not that he's not a good actor, or that he doesn't like it, but he knows that his roots are in music.

"I'm going to give up acting, at least for the moment," said Feliciano, leaning back in his chair. "I want to expand a lot more musically before I get back into acting. My goal right now is to be somewhat like Stevie Wonder. I'm learning to play a number of instruments like the drums, bass guitar and organ.

"STEVIE IS my No. 1 man, and the reason is that he can never top himself. Every album he does is as good as the last one because he uses a variety of musical concepts. I'm picking up some pointers now that I think will make me a better overall performer."

Anyone wanting to check out these pointers can do so March 17-19 when Feliciano appears at the Roxy Theater in Hollywood. There will be two shows a night, at 9 and 11. He will feature a number of songs from his new album, "Sweet Soul Music."

After this engagement, he will embark on a tour that will take him to such far places as Mexico City and Florida. As for what keeps him going, that can be said in one word — people.

"People are very important to me," he said. "They give warmth to me, and I give warmth to them. The end result is that we both go home happy."

And Feliciano is happy, a lot happier than he would have been if he had listened to what people were telling him as a young boy:

" 'Don't be an entertainer. Take vocational rehabilitation, and we'll set you up with a newspaper stand'," he remembered. "When I refused, they said, 'Why do you have to be so difficult?' Well, I'm sure glad I was difficult."

His Valentine was wayward, but the husband wasn't

CONCORD, N.H. (AP) — A wayward Valentine's Day card caused a marital spat until a postal worker stepped in with an alibi for the husband.

It began when the husband, whose name was not released, mailed the card in Concord. Under new procedures, the Postal Service sent the card to Manchester, 20 miles south, for sorting and postmarking.

The Valentine arrived a day late, and the wife also asked her husband what he was doing in Manchester.

After she threatened to leave him, he asked the post office for an explanation. An employe couldn't explain why it took five days for the woman to get the Valentine but did explain how the card, and not her husband, got to Manchester.

World opera is singing the blues

LONDON (AP)—The Royal Opera House at Covent Garden recently announced it made a profit of $184,000 on opera and ballet last season. It was a tiny sum—around 1 per cent of the Garden's total budget.

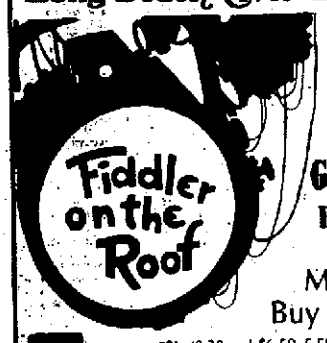

It may have been the only profit made by any of the world's major houses in the year just ended, but the effect was spoiled when Sir Claus Moser, Covent Garden's chairman, announced, in almost the same breath, "We take a very gloomy and worrying view of the future."

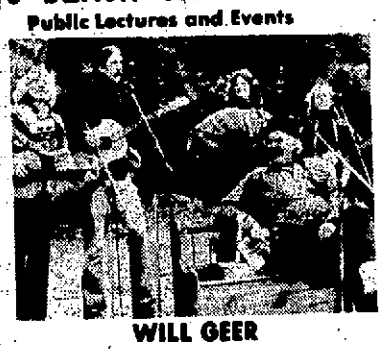

Sir Claus' views are shared by administrators of every other major opera house, where soaring fees, mounting production costs and inflation are threatening to put a night at the opera out of reach of all but the very rich—or very educated—lovers of probably the most expensive art form in the world.

The Lair

It just wasn't her night

By JUDITH MUSAFIA

Greek pianist Vasso Devetzy proved, in her recital Friday night at El Camino College Auditorium, that she is no successor to her late compatriot, Gina Bachauer.

While a biographical note in the program speaks of many triumphs in her career, her playing on this occasion did not reflect these claims.

REVIEW

The program consisted of the Haydn Sonata No. 52, the Mozart Sonata in A Minor (K. 310), Beethoven's 32 Variations in C minor, Schumann's "Papillons" (Op. 2) and two Chopin works, the Scherzo No. 3 in C Sharp Minor and the Andante Spianato and Grand Polonaise (Op. 22).

All these works except perhaps for the last two, unless played with superb control and imagination, do not pose technical problems of the first order. Miss Devetzy has a rather cleanly articulated finger technique, but little in terms of sonorous palette.

The two classical works on the program emerged pale and ill-conceived. The pianist's lack of expressive power was most clearly shown in the slow movements, while the faster sections would have gained from better planning for the logical unfolding of the musical forms.

The two Chopin works were decidedly more congenial to the pianist, who was able to give a more convincing account of her abilities, especially in the dialogue section of the Scherzo and the greater part of the Polonaise.

Marvin Hamlisch scoring for Bond

Oscar winner Marvin Hamlisch has been contracted to write the score for the new James Bond movie, "The Spy Who Loved Me."

Hamlisch won three Academy Awards in one year, for his song and background music in "The Way We Were" and his adaptation of Scott Joplin's ragtime in "The Sting."

YOUR HOROSCOPE by JEANE DIXON

Forecast for Monday

Your birthday today: Your main aim now should be to unify what you've accumulated to date so you can improve, manage it more easily. Social moves, creative enterprises expand as you phase out old ways of doing things. Relationships grow stronger. Today's natives show ability in drama, music, poetry, frequently are emotionally detached, impersonal. Those born this year have intense magnetism, will express themselves fluently, mistake self-indulgence for necessity.

Aries (March 21-April 19): Business, public relations are good. Past differences flare up in your personal world, find you unsure what to do. Readjust taxes, insurance, shared finances.

Taurus (April 20-May 20): Friends help your enterprises with introductions, contacts, their own participation. Keep a steady course, avoid overdoing. Expect some form of overtime.

Gemini (May 21-June 20): Speak candidly of your intentions. People who seldom pay attention listen now. A new job or venture is favored. Let intuition guide cash outlays beyond budgets.

Cancer (June 21-July 22): Personal gain is at stake. Put on a good show. Try to meet people higher up in your field, either in distant locations or slightly different specialties.

Leo (July 23-Aug. 22): Call in loans of money, possessions, settle accounts. Little you say is taken as you mean it, no progress made persuading others to agree to your plans. Patience!

Virgo (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Insist on paying your own way. Don't promise to do more for others than usual. Consultations prior to financial moves save many a dollar, future headaches.

Libra (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Your bright idea is a guideline if you simply get busy. Sketch out goals so beautifully that others see themselves comfortably situated in your projection.

Scorpio (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Aim for better results with less involvement. More progress is made in the promotion than in the doing. Social action is expensive, few choices left open.

Sagittarius (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): You're at a skeptical turning point. Wind up old matters, get ready to launch new without bringing in extra complications. Go out for competitive games.

Capricorn (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Instead of worrying, share problems and opportunity. Talk to higher-ups if possible. At your level, everybody is spoiling for a fight. Save your energy.

Aquarius (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Ask all you deserve; never mind a bit of rivalry. Let experts handle complex equipment. If you must do it, every safety precaution in the book is valid.

Pisces (Feb. 19-March 20): Momentum from recent changes carries on in your favor. Avoid extravagance, overindulgence, but make the most of advantages. Romantic appeal runs strong.

"TOP SALES PERSON OF THE YEAR"

Century 21 Sparow Realty salutes Terri Vedder for her outstanding sales achievements in 1976. In acquiring this prestigeous title for the second year in a row, Terri sold 2.8 million dollars worth of Real Estate during the year. Terri's Real Estate expertise encompasses both residential sales and income property sales.

'Owners, developers, ecologists must meld'

Homebuilders attending the February meeting of the Orange County Chapter of the Building Industry Assn. were urged by two speakers to seek better understanding with pressure groups and were encouraged by a third speaker, who forecast a favorable climate for 1977-78.

Appearing at the Airporter Inn, the speakers were Thomas Riley, supervisor of Orange County's Fifth District; Martin Fenton, Jr., chairman of the board of The Christiana Companies, Inc., and Donald Parker Kennedy, president of First American Financial Corp.

Noting that he spends more time on "the ecological-growth-open-space hassle than on any other aspect of county business," Riley said that he has arrived at three truths:

"FIRST, much of Orange County's economy is dependent on the development industry. Second, Orange County will continue to grow and experience development pressures which can create very desirable residential and commercial developments. Third, many mistakes have been made in Orange County and we are now experiencing problems from those mistakes."

Moving to the subject of seeking understanding, Riley said:

"All too often, competing interests — such as ecologists homeowners, and developers — have no understanding of each other. There is a definite mistrust. If there is one thing I could do, it would be to foster greater understanding between these groups.

"I can foresee a day when the entire county will be urban development because development pressure is beyond control. We can and must avoid the mistakes of the past. We must replace the present hostility because many critical decisions must be made. I have been working closely with the BIA staff and I invite all of you builders to become more involved."

FENTON reported that he had just successfully completed a four-year approval process, enabling his firm to build the last phase of Huntington Harbour at a cost of $150 million. He began with this "precept":

"As a land owner, you have no property rights. Your role is to massage different points of view so something can be built. Building is anti-climatic.

"In our case, we had to meld the viewpoints of governmental agencies, pressure groups, buyers, and Christiana shareholders. No government agency wanted to be first in approving. And we had a wide variety of pressure groups, including kayak paddlers and least tern lovers. Land development costs went from $10 million to $13 million. Hes similar to those that sold two or three years ago for $110,000 are now selling for $160,000.

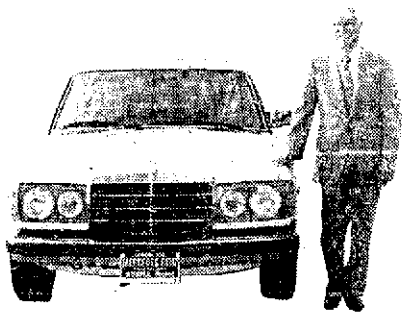

"Next time, four years won't be enouch time to get a project approved. You need to be a statesman, to have a good sense of humour and a great deal of patience.

"Is it worth the trouble and expense? You can achieve very great and lasting satisfaction — and very great frustration."

Kennedy observed that he always ignores economists "because — when they're in general agreement — it scares me to death and then the economy gets stubborn." However, he concluded that he has to agree with the economists that 1977 and 1978 will be good years for the building industry.

Oak Creek '77 set for move-ins

Immediate occupancy is available now at Oak Creek Park's Series '77 single family homes, adjacent to Oak Creek Park in La Mirada.

Location, features and price make these spacious two-story homes one of the Southland's most outstanding new home values, according to Chris Canaday, project sales manager.

Almost every residence overlooks the rolling green five-acre park with equestrian and bike trails, picnic tables and play areas.

In addition, the close-in prime residential area of La Mirada gives the Oak Creek Park community an excellent and convenient location to freeways and major shopping.

Arciero & Sons of Walnut, builder of the 58-unit development, has also included a community pool, tennis court and clubhouse for the exclusive use of homeowners, all of which are "country club" extras not usually found in a single family home project, Canaday said.

FIVE SPACIOUS floor plans with from 1857 to 2057 square feet of living area are available in two, three and four bedroom plans with 2½ baths, large family rooms, oversized master suites and attached two-car garages.

Custom woodburning fireplaces, wall-to-wall carpeting throughout, vaulted ceilings, ceramic tile entryways, large dressing and bath areas and kitchens with all built-ins are primary interior features of Oak Creek Park.

With their excellent location, size and outstanding features, the homes are still under $36 per square foot and are moderately priced for the value given with prices starting at $68,950.

The sales office is open from 10 a.m. to dusk. Take the Santa Ana (5) Freeway to the Beach Boulevard exit. Turn north on beach to La Mirada Boulevard. Drive north on La Mirada to Oak Creek Park homes just below Imperial Highway in the city of La Mirada.

Condo buyers getting help from agencies

By WAYNE MARKHAM
Knight News Service

Condominium buyers may find it easier to obtain financing for their home purchases in the future under a draft agreement reached by four federal agencies.

The proposed policy is aimed at eliminating conflicts in documentation required by the VA, FHA, Federal National Mortgage Association (FNMA) and Federal Home Loan Mortgage Corp. (FHLMC).

"This is a significant breakthrough," says Lincoln C. Cummings, president of the Community Associations Institute.

"IN THE PAST, developers of condominium projects were faced with developing legal documents for the condominium association that met the requirements of each of these different agencies to facilitate financing of the mortgages purchasers would need.

"Not infrequently, these requirements conflicted with each other, and the approval of one agency could make it difficult to obtain the approval of another."

One of the major beneficiaries of the proposed standardized documentation rule will be condo owners who resell their units, CAI officials add.

A major change contained in the draft agreement would forbid mandatory recreational leases or management contracts that do not contain a 90-day cancellation clause.

"The resale market has been affected by the lack of uniformity in these requirements. If the legal documents of a condominium which had been approved by VA or FHA five or six years ago did not meet the current requirement of FHLMC or FNMA, obtaining a mortgage for the second or third purchaser has been difficult," Cummings says.

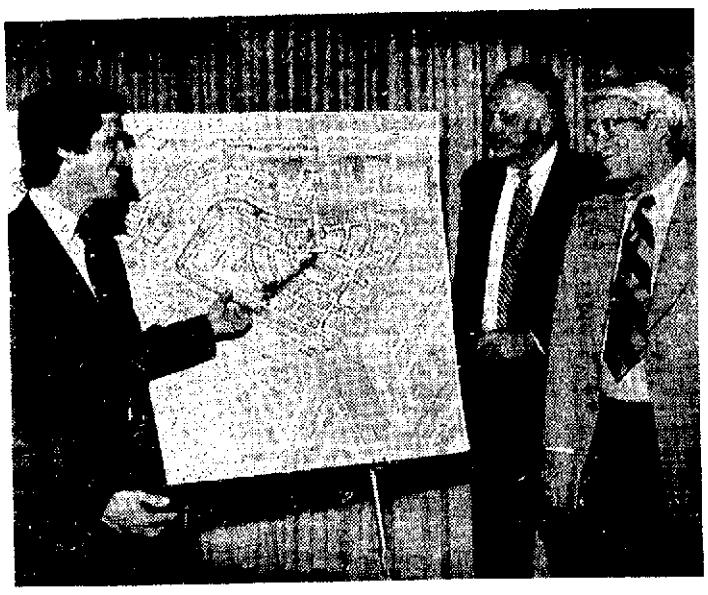

WORK ON THE standardized documentation policy has been under way since last Spring when the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD) helped create a special inter-agency Condominium Task Force.

The Washington-based Community Associations Institute also helped bring public support for the move along with participation by the Mortgage Bankers Association, The United States League of Savings Associations, the National Association of Home Builders and the Urban Land Institute.

Copies of the proposed policy can be obtained by writing the Federal Register in Washington, D.C., or CAI offices there, 1200 18th St., NW, Washington, D.C., 20036. Enclose a self-addressed, stamped envelope to speed processing.

THE DRAFT POLICY outlines four major points in condo documents that will be accepted by all four agencies on new projects:

- Forbids right of first refusal clauses that give the association control over resales.
- Mandates turn over of control to the condo association within 120 days after they obtain 75 per cent of the voting strength.
- Requires a two-month equivalent maintenance fee be set aside as a reserve fund for capital repair and replacement needs.
- Requires that owners who lease their units lease them for not less than 30 days and impose same restrictions on renters as bylaws impose on owners.
- Forbids binding management contracts or recreation leases that do not have a 90-day cancellation provision.

'FOUR YEARS FOR APPROVAL' said Martin Fenton Jr., left, board chairman of the Christiana Cos., Inc., as he showed drawing of the firm's new Huntington Harbour project to Orange County Supervisor Thomas Riley, right, and Donald P. Kennedy, president of First American Financial Corp. All spoke to the Orange County Chapter of the Building Industry Association.

'Buy now in California'

"The number one ingredient is available money," Kennedy said. "Savings and loans make 50 to 70 per centof the real estate loans around the country and 80 per cent in Southern California. And savings and loans had their best year ever with deposits increasing by $34 billion.

"Further, I really can't see any reason for an increase in interest rates."

Kennedy indicated that American Financial is budgeting for "a 20 to 25 per cent increase in real estate activity everywhere except the Northeast." The firm expects Phoenix "to be really hot" and Florida, Washington and Virginia "to pick up."

He said California has a good product and people are convinced they had better "buy now."

"The Orange County boom will continue, partly because of speculation, but through this year speculators won't hurt the general market.

"A softened market will damage speculators and then the builder will have to compete with the investor."

New residential community due

Preliminary plans have been completed by the Newport Beach architectural firm of Bates-Bassenian-Pekarek for a new residential community to be built in Huntington Beach by the Kendall-Brief Co. of homebuilders. The announcement was made by John T. Bates, partner in the award-winning architectural firm.

Located on Newland Avenue just south of Adams, the $7-million development will contain three to five bedroom homes with from 1,700 to 2,700 square feet of interior living space. Four different floorplans will be offered in a variety of 11 exterior stylings.

"The housing product we will be building at this Huntington Beach location has been specifically designed to the site and is very different from other available housing in the area," said Barry Brief, partner in the Newport Beach-based homebuilding firm.

A total of 68 homes is planned for the 14-acre site. Bates-Bassenian-Pekarek is responsible for the architectural design.

Condo buyers getting help from agencies

By WAYNE MARKHAM
Knight News Service

Condominium buyers may find it easier to obtain financing for their home purchases in the future under a draft agreement reached by four federal agencies.

The proposed policy is aimed at eliminating conflicts in documentation required by the VA, FHA, Federal National Mortgage Association (FNMA) and Federal Home Loan Mortgage Corp. (FHLMC).

"This is a significant breakthrough," says Lincoln C. Cummings, president of the Community Associations Institute.

"IN THE PAST, developers of condominium projects were faced with developing legal documents for the condominium association that met the requirements of each of these different agencies to facilitate financing of the mortgages purchasers would need.

"Not infrequently, these requirements conflicted with each other, and the approval of one agency could make it difficult to obtain the approval of another."

One of the major beneficiaries of the proposed standardized documentation rule will be condo owners who resell their units, CAI officials add.

A major change contained in the draft agreement would forbid mandatory recreational leases or management contracts that do not contain a 90-day cancellation clause.

"The resale market has been affected by the lack of uniformity in these requirements. If the legal documents of a condominium which had been approved by VA or FHA five or six years ago did not meet the current requirement of FHLMC or FNMA, obtaining a mortgage for the second or third purchaser has been difficult," Cummings says.

WORK ON THE standardized documentation policy has been under way since last Spring when the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD) helped create a special inter-agency Condominium Task Force.

The Washington-based Community Associations Institute also helped bring public support for the move along with participation by the Mortgage Bankers Association, The United States League of Savings Associations, the National Association of Home Builders and the Urban Land Institute.

Copies of the proposed policy can be obtained by writing the Federal Register in Washington, D.C., or CAI offices there, 1200 18th St., NW, Washington, D.C., 20036. Enclose a self-addressed, stamped envelope to speed processing.

THE DRAFT POLICY outlines four major points in condo documents that will be accepted by all four agencies on new projects:

- Forbids right of first refusal clauses that give the association control over resales.
- Mandates turn over of control to the condo association within 120 days after they obtain 75 per cent of the voting strength.
- Requires a two-month equivalent maintenance fee be set aside as a reserve fund for capital repair and replacement needs.
- Requires that owners who lease their units lease them for not less than 30 days and impose same restrictions on renters as bylaws impose on owners.
- Forbids binding management contracts or recreation leases that do not have a 90-day cancellation provision.

'FOUR YEARS FOR APPROVAL' said Martin Fenton Jr., left, board chairman of the Christiana Cos., Inc., as he showed drawing of the firm's new Huntington Harbour project to Orange County Supervisor Thomas Riley, right, and Donald P. Kennedy, president of First American Financial Corp. All spoke to the Orange County Chapter of the Building Industry Association.

'Buy now in California'

"The number one ingredient is available money," Kennedy said. "Savings and loans make 50 to 70 per centof the real estate loans around the country and 80 per cent in Southern California. And savings and loans had their best year ever with deposits increasing by $34 billion.

High coffee prices brewing better life for Brazil farmers

By EDGAR MILLER
Associated Press

RIO DE JANEIRO — Brazilian rural workers are getting better wages, new schools, roads and social improvements from the money Brazil receives in higher coffee prices paid by consumers in the United States and the rest of the world, says the head of the Brazilian Coffee Institute.

Camilo Calazans de Magalhaes said in an interview that increased coffee export taxes — which have risen from 16 cents to 81 cents a pound since 1975 — are providing the government with funds to help rural workers, who many said were passed over in the Brazilian economic boom of a few years ago.

"I think it is better for the government to use this money in social work than to leave it in the hands of the rural landowner who is going to spend it abroad," Calazans added. "He will catch a ship or a plane and go to Paris. We are trying to keep these resources here and benefit the whole population.

"For example, we are constructing secondary roads in coffee regions, broadening technical assistance, carrying out electrification programs.

"This is why we increased the tax so that these resources would stay here. I get a lot of flak from the farmers because of this, but I think it is in the interest of the country and within the more progressive social philosophy."

Brazil is in the midst of an industrialization program, and before oil price increases went into effect in 1973 the economy was booming. But the military-led government came under heavy criticism from various quarters charging that the riches were not seeping down to the rural and urban poor.

Calazans said he is trying to reorganize Brazil's coffee industry by encouraging farmers to grow other crops as well as coffee on their plantations.

"We are trying to institute a coffee-growing system that creates a rural middle class with diversified farm activity as well as coffee," he said. "We are achieving this.

"Coffee is paying the biggest salaries in rural work. A coffee plantation worker earns about 40 cruzeiros ($3.17) a day. We are helping the coffee workers in two ways: First, by establishing social assistance for farm laborers and obliging payment of higher salaries. Secondly, this export tax which we are so criticized for — this money remains in the hands of the government to be applied to building schools, roads, etc."

Calazans did not say how many rural workers are benefiting from the increased coffee income, but a spokesman for his institute said later that about 2 million coffee workers in northern Parana state alone are now earning 40 to 50 cruzeiros (about $4) a day as opposed to the standard of $2 a day for workers in other agricultural areas. The minimum wage in major Brazilian cities is the equivalent of $70 a month and less than $50 a month in other urban areas.

The export tax was a major factor in the rise in coffee prices from an average of $1.27 a pound in the U.S., before a frost wiped out two-thirds of Brazil's coffee trees in 1975, to more than $3 a pound on some U.S. grocery shelves now.

Before the frost, the tax was $21 for each 132-pound bag exported — or 16 cents a pound. As Brazil's stocks dwindled and demand increased, Calazans' government agency increased the export tax. In January it was raised to $103 a bag (78 cents a pound), and Wednesday it went up to $107 a bag (81 cents a pound).

Because his agency has taxing and other regulatory powers, Calazans has been called a coffee czar, "boss of Brazil's coffee industry." As head of the policy-setting institute since 1974, he has become an influential man in Brazilian and world coffee circles.

But his job is to get the best price for Brazil's coffee. Before the frost Brazil had a stockpile of 50 million bags of coffee, and because of this glut the price remained low. Calazans said, however, that these stocks are being depleted now.

Alcohol, drug fatal to tycoon

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Millionaire industrialist Robert P. McCulloch died from a combination of barbiturates and alcohol, County Coroner Thomas Noguchi said Saturday.

Noguchi said an autopsy showed the cause of death was "short-acting barbiturate intoxication."

He said a behavorial scientist would be assigned to the case to investigate whether the death was a suicide.

McCulloch, board chairman of McCulloch Oil Co. and the man who brought the London Bridge to the Arizona desert, was found dead Friday afternoon in his Bel-Air home. He was 65. The cause of death was at first presumed to be a heart attack.

Noguchi said the autopsy also showed "a high level of alcohol" and "evidence of severe arteriosclerosis heart disease."

A company spokesman said McCulloch had been treated for a heart condition since 1972.

The coroner's office said drugs were found in his bedroom, but his private physician said they were not the drugs prescribed for him.

His family said McCulloch had not appeared depressed prior to his death.

A maid found the executive dead in an upstairs bedroom Friday afternoon. He was last seen alive at 5 p.m. Thursday, police said.

Seagulls, bad design led to DC-10 blaze

Associated Press

Ineffective bird-control measures and an engine design problem contributed to a fire that destroyed a Douglas DC-10 widebody jetliner on a 1975 takeoff accident at New York's Kennedy International Airport, the National Transportation Safety Board said Saturday.

Both problems have since been corrected, the board said in a report on its investigation of the accident.

The mishap occurred Nov. 12, 1975, as an Overseas National Airways plane was taking off on a trans-Atlantic flight. The pilot reported a flock of about 100 seagulls rose in front of the DC-10 as it raced down the runway at about 115 miles an hour.

The right wing engine ingested birds and began to disintegrate. Shrapnel punctured tires, fuel tanks and the hydraulic system and the engine caught fire as the pilot steered onto a taxiway and brought the plane to a halt.

THE 139 persons aboard, all airline employes on a ferry flight, left te plane by the evacuation chute. There were 32 evacuation injuries. The report said "serious evacuation problems could have been experienced had this been a routine passenger flight," with passengers untrained in emergency evacuation.

Sports benefit handicapped

By PATRICIA de LUNA
Staff Writer

Handicapped individuals and specialists who work with them say that it is not only the able-bodied person who can benefit from a little more activity in the fresh air and sunshine.

Tom Clardy, who heads the local chapter of the National Inconvenienced Sportsmen's Association, says handicapped persons can achieve a good feeling of accomplishment, an increased sense of socialization, and an important feeling of being in control by being involved in sports.

Mickey Christiason, recreation therapist at Rancho Los Amigos, says that through sports a handicapped athlete can quickly gain "respectability" in a non-handicapped society. Society in general places a high value on sports, he says, and sees those with handicaps as helpless non-people. By being involved in sports a handicapped person can overcome that image and reestablish his sense of equality.

Christiason also considers it important for a handicapped person to relate socially with persons who are not handicapped and sports is a good way to do that.

Robert Warner, the owner of DeCordova Riding Stables in Los Cerritos who teaches people with cerebral palsy and polio how to ride, says horseback riding can help develop leg and arm muscles, a sense of balance, and a renewed sense of self-confidence.

Jeff Minnebraker, another recreation therapist at Rancho Los Amigos, is a player and teacher of wheelchair tennis. He encourages men and women in wheelchairs to go out and play tennis with other friends in chairs or with friends who are able-bodied. They will have a good time, he says. "There's no big gap in learning to play."

With minor rule changes, such as allowing a double bounce of the ball for the person in the chair and requiring a foreswing serve by the able-bodied player, wheelchair tennis can "get under your skin," Minnebraker says. He points out that tennis is "good exercise and a good way to be with people. All you have to do is try it. That's life."

Sports helped Jeff Minnebraker "get through a lot of things" involved in making an adjustment to his handicap, says Christiason. But Minnebraker is an exception, he adds. "Only a small percentage of handicapped persons are active in sports."

Christiason wants to increase that number. He says that those who participate in sports renew their sense of self worth while becoming physically healthier. Unfortunately, he says, not enough sports programs for handicapped persons exist.

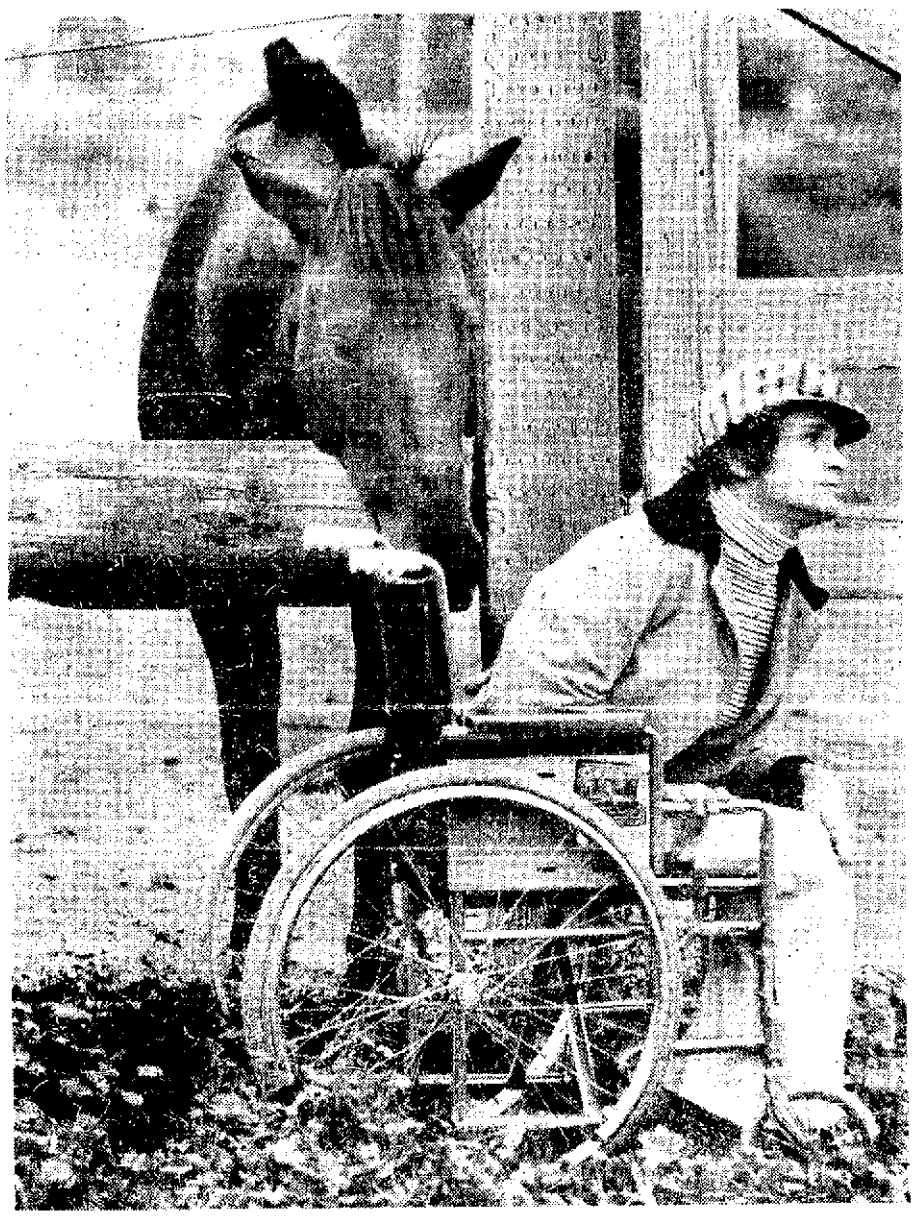

TO IMPROVE this situation, Christiason has been trying to convince various recreation departments to set up special programs. Together with the California Association of the Physically Handicapped, Inc., he recently conducted a day-long workshop at Liberty Park in Cerritos.

Minnebraker, Clardy and Warner each offered a perspective at the workshop on the value of sports and other recreational activity for the handicapped person.

Tom Clardy, who was an active skier before he lost one leg completely and lost the use of the other, draws on his own experience to compare the difficulties for one and two-legged people in learning to ski.

"It's a totally new process," he says. "I had to learn to ski all over again. The important hurdle is WATCHING as her husband takes a horseback riding lesson, Sydney Martin is, in turn, watched by a curious horse.

LEARNING to relax is important in good skiing, says Tom Clardy, background, as Mark Monfort makes his first attempt with an assist from Gary Laird, owner of sports store which offers special classes for the handicapped.

INCONVENIENCED Sportsmen's Association has 170 members in Southern California chapter, which is headed by Tom Clardy, 31, an ex-police officer-turned psychology student.

Male makes choices for dual-career couples

By CAROLYN KORTGE
Ridder News Service

When a career-minded, achievement-oriented professional man weds a career-minded, achievement-oriented professional woman, something has to give.

The something usually is her.

Equal opportunity aside, it's still a cast of she follows him, according to a study of 214 dual-career couples undertaken by dual-career couple Martha Foster and Michael Berger.

It's still the man's career that shapes most marital decisions and the woman's career that is sacrificed first when transfers or children disrupt a two-career couple's status quo, the researchers said.

Foster and Berger both have doctorate degrees in psychology from George Peabody College in Nashville, Tenn. He is an assistant professor in the department of psychology at Georgia State University in Atlanta. She is director of the Family and Infant Program at North Metro Children's Center in Atlanta.

He got his job first. She followed and took her chances on landing a position.

Their study of other two-career couples, the researchers said during a recent visit to Wichita, Kan., was a very personal journey. The frustration and conflict that grew out of their own failure to resolve individual career needs equally was the impetus for their study of the way other couples have coped with the clash between marriage and two careers.

WITH A GRANT from the National Institute of Health, they sent questionnaires to every university in the country with doctoral programs in psychology, biochemistry, microbiology and other sciences. Most of the couples who responded had just concluded their first post-doctoral job search. Almost 80 per cent said they had tried to be equal in their search for career opportunities. But 60 per cent said their final decision was traditional — the man took the job and the woman followed.

Egalitarian efforts failed, many couples reported, because it was easier to be traditional. Women have social and historical support for following their spouse; men do not.

"Women professionals have been trained to see themselves as professionals and to be assertive in terms of their professional goals, but they are not trained to deal with that assertiveness in the context of a marriage," Foster said.

"With men, it is assumed they will have both a career and a marriage and that they will make the leadership choices."

Both men and women, the researchers said, found it hard to escape traditional social roles even when they did not think those roles were ideal.

"Men find it very hard to get any support from other men for following their wives or letting her choose the job," Berger said. "Women worry about what kind of husband would let his wife make the decisions."

FAMILY AND child care problems brought a second major foil to egalitarian career-choice attempts.

"Egalitarian efforts failed because women, and only women, were controlled by child care constraints," Foster said. "Not a single man mentioned child care as a career consideration. Only women backed down on their careers due to children."

Many couples in the survey said they planned to alternate — he would choose this time and she'd take the lead next time.

But Berger sees economic obstacles to the "alternative" method for giving each marriage partner an equal opportunity to succeed and advance.

"I'm not sure the alternative approach will really work," Berger said. "By the time she's ready to choose, his job will pay more and they will have a lifestyle built on his salary. They may not be able to afford to change to let her have a job choice."

Results of the dual-careers study, Foster and Berger said, seem to indicate that the true "career woman" is still a rare exception. When working women add the social demands of family and marriage to the professional demands of a career, social demands usually win.

"Having a career," Foster said, "is not just making a living. It's making an identity. There is a lot of non-rational committment to a career and for women that's a very scary thing. It's hard to change your roles and be assertive after a history of feminine socialization."

THE LATE actor Humphrey Bogart — his movie image was of a tough guy in trouble.

Q: Anything to a rumor that Lee Majors ("Six-Million-Dollar Man") may quit the series since his wife (Farrah Fawcett-Majors) now seems to be the superstar in the family? — Mrs. S. Brindell, Baltimore.

Q: What famous movie idol was once known as "The Profile"? — Mrs. Gerald McC., Tucson, Ariz.

A: John Barrymore. When asked which was his best profile, he modestly answered, "Both!"

Q: We guess the thing we'll remember most about Henry Kissinger was the way he always seemed to be smiling. Through all those ups and downs, what did he enjoy most? — Mr. and Mrs. D. Schulte, St. Louis.

A: "Marrying Nancy," was his instant answer.

Q: Like George C. Scott, didn't Charlie Chaplin once turn down an Oscar? — D. S., Detroit.

A: Chaplin did turn down an award. But it was not an Oscar. It was a New York Film Critics' award for the "best male performance," in "The Great Dictator" in 1940.

Q: We recall that in his early days Humphrey Bogart was usually in a death row cell. Any idea who many times he killed or was killed? — P. Blount, Sacramento, Calif.

A: "In my first 34 pictures," Bogie once revealed, "I was shot in 12, electrocuted or hanged in eight, and was a jailbird in nine. I played more scenes writhing around on the floor than I did standing up." He "reformed" when he played Sam Spade, the wisecracking private eye in "The Maltese Falcon," a role his pal, George Raft, turned down. It was one of only a handful of pictures Bogart said he was proud to be in.

FOND EMBRACE for Kris Kristofferson and Barbra Streisand in scene from "A Star Is Born" — his recording debut less than auspicious.

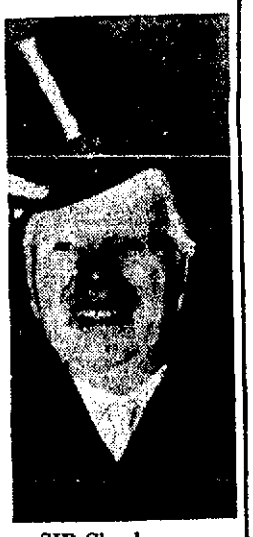

FORMER Secretary of State Henry Kissinger and his wife, Nancy — she's responsible for his smile.

Q: Is it true that Kris Kristofferson was working as a dishwasher when he was discovered? — Cy Kertman, Newport Beach, Calif.

A: No. Here's what happened. Marijohn Wilkin (who had published some of Kris's early material) mentioned him to then Epic Records veep Len Levy as possibly having exceptional singing ability. She said Kristofferson could be found working at the Columbia recording studios in Nashville. Levy went looking and found him — working as a janitor! He was sweeping out the studios.

Levy signed him to record for Epic (a subsidiary of Columbia) and Kristofferson made a couple of records. However, when Levy left Epic Kristofferson was dropped from the label by Clive Davis, then president of Columbia Records. Note: Though Kris had been working as a janitor, he was already a Rhodes scholar and had been on the faculty at West Point.

'Sentinel' horrors promise box office hurrahs

Horror movies, the psychologists tell us, are just another visual, vocal and visceral way to tell we're alive. A scream a day keeps the doctor away. The public laps up hair-curling, bone-chilling terror like spaniels devour hamburger.

"Rosemary's Baby," "The Exorcist." "The Omen" — not to mention such low-budget classics as "The Night of the Living Dead" and "The Texas Chainsaw Massacre" — have pumped fresh dividends into Hollywood's empty coffers.

Now there's a new horror on the horizon that threatens to break new box-office records. It's called "The Sentinel," and it's hard to believe that Michael Winner, the director, is the same man who last year turned out a dumb little dog picture called "Won Ton Ton."

"It's quite simple, really," he says, sipping Coca Colas and puffing Cuban cigars in his New York hotel suite while fighting off the jet lag from a transatlantic flight. "After 'Won Ton Ton' I certainly wasn't getting any more offers to direct comedies! Besides, I like the idea of frightening people."

Before our meeting, three people had warned me Winner was a feisty egomaniac whose first love was self-promotion. "Ken Russell and I both have that reputation," he laughs wickedly, "but I think we're both terribly charming! Of course, he raps critics over the head with blunt instruments. I'm too much of a coward.

"Publicity is good fun. I don't go around knocking on doors to get my name in the paper, but as long as I've got a film I don't mind trying to sell it."

The one he's selling now is "The Sentinel." When he spent Universal's $3.5 million quietly last year on location in New York, they didn't say a word. When he showed it to the executives in Hollywood after final editing, they "almost committed suicide by doing a two-foot fall from their padded leather chairs." They asked for a horror film, but they didn't bargain for this.

"THE SENTINEL" is about a beautiful model who rents an apartment in a gloomy old building in Brooklyn Heights only to discover it is the gateway to Hell. Corpses come to life, demons ooze and slither through the hallways at midnight, the blood splashes across the screen shamelessly, and the audience shrieks its way home to a week of nightmares.

Going to bed after seeing "The Sentinel" is like going to bed after a dinner of raw chile peppers and ground glass.

Michael Winner loves the imagery of that. Every scream means dollars in the cash register. "Audiences are fairly unshockable today," he shrugs. "If you're following in the footsteps of 'The Exorcist,' where the big scene was a 14-year-old girl masturbating with a crucifix, you've got to go some to shock anybody!"

But Winner, who already shocked folks with the realistic rape scene in "Death Wish," did it again by hiring real freaks from hospitals, freak shows, circuses and asylums to play the devils from Hell.

"It took two hours just to make up John Carradine as a blind priest, and he looked like he'd had a rather late night the night before! To do 30 people in make-up with lights melting the wax would've been corny. All it says in the book the movie is based on is 'The armies of Hell rose up.' I didn't want 30 extras with white faces wobbling about. I wanted something spectacularly horrifying!

"In Marlowe, Dante and the paintings of Heironymous Bosch the creatures of Hell were hideously deformed, so I said, 'Let's get the real thing!' Universal knew what I was up to — they got carbons of letters saying, 'Dear Mr. Deformed, please come for an interview at 3 o'clock' — but they didn't want it publicized."

Freaks have been used before, in Tod Browning's repugnant classic "Freaks." Brian De Palma used them in "Sisters," but squeamish exees got cold feet and cut them out of the film. Never has anything like "The Sentinel" been seen by human eyes, however.

Some audiences leave the theater raving about the scary make-up, not knowing the truth. Unfortunates with their faces eaten away, goiters, missing eyes and appendages, and worse — they are all here, and one wonders why they did it.

"Each one read the script, signed releases and got a promise they could leave if they were offended in any way. There was nothing sensational about it, and I have a clear conscience," says Winner.

"The remarkable thing is that the creatures we used turned out to be the happiest, most professional group of people I've ever worked with in 20 years of making films. This was their moment in the sun. They photographed each other, got autographs from the stars, they were flown in from everywhere, and it really enriched their lives.

"One man wrote me he had been a recluse who never went out of his home before the film was made because he thought he was the ugliest man in the world. The movie proved to him that there were others worse off than he was.

"It also had a comic side to it, too. We put them up in hotels during the weekend of the Tall Ships, and the tourists were a bit mortified, I think. Then we gave them chauffered Cadillacs, and the crowds on the set would come around when the cars pulled up, hoping to see Ava Gardner, and out would pop these

rex reed

freaks! They had a sense of humor about it. Nobody had ever asked them to join in life before.

"SYLVIA MILES had to play with them in the nude. Her only complaint was that one of them kept pinching her on the bottom."

Sylvia Miles also had to munch the brains of a fresh corpse onscreen. "It was bread soaked in chemical syrup, and she wasn't really supposed to eat it, but she got carried away and it seemed like such a shame to disturb her.

"The make-up man whispered to me: 'She's gonna die of food poisoning!' and I said, 'Well, I really don't need her after 4 o'clock, so it doesn't matter!' She was O.K. the next day, so she must have a cast-iron stomach!"

Winner has never made a film in a Hollywood studio, so everything was an authentic locale. Chris Saradon's penthouse was really Michael Bennett's apartment on Central Park South.

The haunted house was a real building in Brooklyn Heights inhabited by 40 irate tenants who had to be moved into hotels. "One man wanted $20,000 a day to vacate his room and said if he didn't get it, he'd run an electric saw all day and ruin the sound. We got rid of him by cutting off his electricity in the basement.

"Another group wanted $30,000, which I thought was quite a lot for Brooklyn. So I ignored them. To my horror, I discovered they had a room overlooking the street. When Ava Gardner showed up as the real estate lady to rent the empty house they hung a sheet in the window. We covered that up with foliage. During the night, they tore down the foliage.

"This went on for a few weeks, until we invited them to a cast party in the garden — a very boring party, on the cheap, really — but they were so overcome with joy that from then on they were very helpful. We stripped all the furniture, knocked down the walls, and put everything back later. All the tenants did very well in the end. They all got free paint jobs."

IF WINNER has an ego, it makes good copy. He's not one of those deadly dull directors who goes around eating humble pie and boring the press to death because he doesn't know where his next job is coming from. Winner is witty, opinionated, quick and, after 20 movies, still full of enthusiasm for the business.

"It's totally unpredictable! 'Won Ton Ton' was enormously publicized in the

Q: Is it true that Kris Kristofferson was working as a dishwasher when he was discovered? — Cy Kertman, Newport Beach, Calif.

A: No. Here's what happened. Marijohn Wilkin (who had published some of Kris's early material) mentioned him to then Epic Records veep Len Levy as possibly having exceptional singing ability. She said Kristofferson could be found working at the Columbia recording studios in Nashville. Levy went looking and found him — working as a janitor! He was sweeping out the studios.

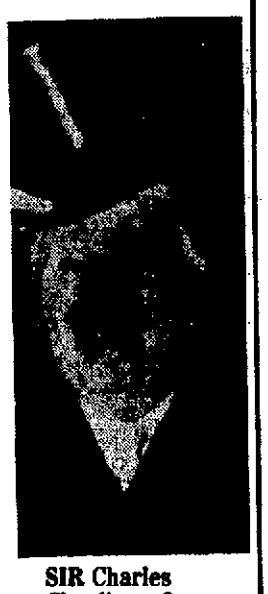

Levy signed him to record for Epic (a subsidiary of Columbia) and Kristofferson made a couple of records. However, when Levy left Epic Kristofferson was dropped from the label by Clive Davis, then president of Columbia Records. Note: Though Kris had been working as a janitor, he was already a Rhodes scholar and had been on the faculty at West Point.

'Sentinel' horrors promise box office hurrahs

Horror movies, the psychologists tell us, are just another visual, vocal and visceral way to tell we're alive. A scream a day keeps the doctor away. The public laps up hair-curling, bone-chilling terror like spaniels devour hamburger.

"Rosemary's Baby," "The Exorcist," "The Omen" — not to mention such low-budget classics as "The Night of the Living Dead" and "The Texas Chainsaw Massacre" — have pumped fresh dividends into Hollywood's empty coffers.

Now there's a new horror on the horizon that threatens to break new box-office records. It's called "The Sentinel," and it's hard to believe that Michael Winner, the director, is the same man who last year turned out a dumb little dog picture called "Won Ton Ton."

"It's quite simple, really," he says, sipping Coca Colas and puffing Cuban cigars in his New York hotel suite while fighting off the jet lag from a transatlantic flight. "After 'Won Ton Ton' I certainly wasn't getting any more offers to direct comedies! Besides, I like the idea of frightening people."

Before our meeting, three people had warned me Winner was a feisty egomaniac whose first love was self-promotion. "Ken Russell and I both have that reputation," he laughs wickedly, "but I think we're both terribly charming! Of course, he raps critics over the head with blunt instruments. I'm too much of a coward.

"Publicity is good fun. I don't go around knocking on doors to get my name in the paper, but as long as I've got a film I don't mind trying to sell it."

The one he's selling now is "The Sentinel." When he spent Universal's $3.5 million quietly last year on location in New York, they didn't say a word. When he showed it to the executives in Hollywood after final editing, they "almost committed suicide by doing a two-foot fall from their padded leather chairs." They asked for a horror film, but they didn't bargain for this.

"THE SENTINEL" is about a beautiful model who rents an apartment in a gloomy old building in Brooklyn Heights only to discover it is the gateway to Hell. Corpses come to life, demons ooze and slither through the hallways at midnight, the blood splashes across the screen shamelessly, and the audience shrieks its way home to a week of nightmares.

Going to bed after seeing "The Sentinel" is like going to bed after a dinner of raw chile peppers and ground glass.

Michael Winner loves the imagery of that. Every scream means dollars in the cash register. "Audiences are fairly unshockable today," he shrugs. "If you're following in the footsteps of 'The Exorcist,' where the big scene was a 14-year-old girl masturbating with a crucifix, you've got to go some to shock anybody!"

But Winner, who already shocked folks with the realistic rape scene in "Death Wish," did it again by hiring real freaks from hospitals, freak shows, circuses and asylums to play the devils from Hell.

"It took two hours just to make up John Carradine as a blind priest, and he looked like he'd had a rather late night the night before! To do 30 people in make-up with lights melting the wax would've been corny. All it says in the book the movie is based on is 'The armies of Hell rose up.' I didn't want 30 extras with white faces wobbling about. I wanted something spectacularly horrifying!

"In Marlowe, Dante and the paintings of Heironymous Bosch the creatures of Hell were hideously deformed, so I said, 'Let's get the real thing!' Universal knew what I was up to — they got carbons of letters saying, 'Dear Mr. Deformed, please come for an interview at 3 o'clock' — but they didn't want it publicized."

Freaks have been used before, in Tod Browning's repugnant classic "Freaks." Brian De Palma used them in "Sisters," but squeamish execs got cold feet and cut them out of the film. Never has anything like "The Sentinel" been seen by human eyes, however.

Some audiences leave the theater raving about the scary make-up, not knowing the truth. Unfortunates with their faces eaten away, goiters, missing eyes and appendages, and worse — they are all here, and one wonders why they did it.

"Each one read the script, signed releases and got a promise they could leave if they were offended in any way. There was nothing sensational about it, and I have a clear conscience," says Winner.

"The remarkable thing is that the creatures we used turned out to be the happiest, most professional group of people I've ever worked with in 20 years of making films. This was their moment in the sun. They photographed each other, got autographs from the stars, they were flown in from everywhere, and it really enriched their lives.

"One man wrote me he had been a recluse who never went out of his home before the film was made because he thought he was the ugliest man in the world. The movie proved to him that there were others worse off than he was.

"It also had a comic side to it, too. We put them up in hotels during the weekend of the Tall Ships, and the tourists were a bit mortified, I think. Then we gave them chauffered Cadillacs, and the crowds on the set would come around when the cars pulled up, hoping to see Ava Gardner, and out would pop these freaks! They had a sense of humor about it. Nobody had ever asked them to join in life before.

"SYLVIA MILES had to play with them in the nude. Her only complaint was that one of them kept pinching her on the bottom."

Sylvia Miles also had to munch the brains of a fresh corpse onscreen. "It was bread soaked in chemical syrup, and she wasn't really supposed to eat it, but she got carried away and it seemed like such a shame to disturb her.

"The make-up man whispered to me: 'She's gonna die of food poisoning!' and I said, 'Well, I really don't need her after 4 o'clock, so it doesn't matter!' She was O.K. the next day, so she must have a cast-iron stomach!"

Winner has never made a film in a Hollywood studio, so everything was an authentic locale. Chris Saradon's penthouse was really Michael Bennett's apartment on Central Park South.

The haunted house was a real building in Brooklyn Heights inhabited by 40 irate tenants who had to be moved into hotels. "One man wanted $20,000 a day to vacate his room and said if he didn't get it, he'd run an electric saw all day and ruin the sound. We got rid of him by cutting off his electricity in the basement.

"Another group wanted $30,000, which I thought was quite a lot for Brooklyn. So I ignored them. To my horror, I discovered they had a room overlooking the street. When Ava Gardner showed up as the real estate lady to rent the empty house they hung a sheet in the window. We covered that up with foliage. During the night, they tore down the foliage.

"This went on for a few weeks, until we invited them to a cast party in the garden — a very boring party, on the cheap, really — but they were so overcome with joy that from then on they were very helpful. We stripped all the furniture, knocked down the walls, and put everything back later. All the tenants did very well in the end. They all got free paint jobs."

IF WINNER has an ego, it makes good copy. He's not one of those deadly dull directors who goes around eating humble pie and boring the press to death because he doesn't know where his next job is coming from. Winner is witty, opinionated, quick and, after 20 movies, still full of enthusiasm for the business.

"It's totally unpredictable! 'Won Ton Ton' was enormously publicized in the Memorial day at Republic

It looked like a Goth-Roman battle scene in an old Latin reader; the police in an orderly row and coming toward them across a field, a ragged crowd of about 1,500 people.

Two are carrying American flags. Another a sign: "Republic vs. the People."

This is the Republic Steel Company plant in South Chicago, Memorial Day, 1937. For two days strikers have been battling police to seize the plant and oust company maintenance men inside. There are 75,000 steel workers on strike across the nation as John L. Lewis and his new Congress of Industrial Organizations (CIO) are trying to gain union recognition. U.S. Steel, the giant of the industry, has already settled, giving a 10 per cent wage increase and establishing a 40-hour week. Now Lewis turns to Little Steel-Republic, Inland, Youngstown.

Six Republic plants are virtually under siege by strikers. The company drops food to its people inside by plane. One plane is fired on.

It is a time of sit-down strikes, beatings by company goons, hardjawed hostility between management and its workers. Union organizers at the Ford Motor Company are bloodily beaten in their effort to win recognition and an $8 day. Henry Ford says with finality he'll only pay $6. And definitely no union.

And at South Chicago they are marching, tattered crusaders, veterans of the hunger-ache of the Depression. Their leader, a hard-muscled young man in shirtsleeves with a CIO button in the ribbon of his felt hat, approaches a police officer.

THE OFFICER makes an impatient gesture, as if to say no. The crowd is yelling and throwing rocks and pebbles from slingshots. Suddenly the 300 police draw their guns and fire directly into the mob. The strikers stop, then run, climbing over the fallen in their maddened dash to safety.

A heavy, bareheaded middle-aged man finds himself at the rear of the mob and tries to run a gauntlet of police. They begin clubbing him with their nightsticks as he tries to dodge past them. Then he is trapped and holds his hands up. The clubbing goes on. Slowly, clumsily, he goes down. The clubbing continues. The CIO says later one of the 10 people who died was found with his brains literally beaten out. Six others were shot in the back.

The strikers lose the battle: the strike is settled on Republic's terms. But they win the war: four years later the government invokes the New Deal's Wagner Act to order Republic and other firms of Little Steel to recognize the union, the United Steel Workers of America.

Biofeedback aids ear woe

Biofeedback can sometimes improve the condition of individuals suffering severe ringing in the ear — a disorder technically called tinnitus.

Biofeedback is a technique in which information is fed back to the patient on one or more physiologic processes.

Forty-one patients were treated with biofeedback after several different forms of treatment had failed.

The training in this case consisted of 10 to 12 one-hour sessions. Patients were taught to relax certain muscles and to increase circulation through the peripheral vascular system.

ben zinser

Improvement in ear condition was reported by 80 per cent of the patients. Symptoms disappeared in 10 per cent. Sixty-six per cent reported taking less medication.

The research was conducted by Los Angeles ear doctors, and a report appears in Postgraduate Medicine.

No corn before X-ray

If you have no teeth, don't eat sweet corn before undergoing an X-ray examination of the colon.

Why? Because undigested corn kernels pass into the colon and look like polyps.

Drs. Harry C. Press and T. Wilkins Davis of the department of radiology at Howard University, Washington, D. C., tell of six patients who had eaten corn five to seven days before a barium X-ray.

Intact corn kernels, they note, have a thin outer covering of cellulose not digested in the human gastrointestinal tract. Ordinarily these coverings are broken up during chewing to allow mixture with a chemical in the saliva (ptyalin) which breaks down the kernel and starts starch digestion.

But toothless patients can't chew the kernels, which are swallowed whole. So they simulate polyps in the colon, the doctors report in the American Journal of Roentgenology.

Marathon running

Heart patients have now been running marathons (26 miles) since the mid-1960s, apparently without danger, a doctor says.

In a new report, a doctor tells of a bypass patient who ran a marathon only four months after his operation. A bypass is a surgical operation to route blood around a plugged-up coronary artery.

Covering a long distance on foot helps to give a "very high level of protection" against fatty narrowing of the arteries, says Dr. T. J. Bassler, editor for the American Medical Joggers Association.

Dr. Bassler, of Centinela Hospital in Inglewood, says he has been unable to substantiate a single case of fatal atherosclerosis among marathon runners.

His comments are in the British Medical Journal.

Alcohol raises blood pressure

Persons who consume three or more alcoholic drinks a day tend to have elevated blood pressures, researchers report.

The finding stems from a study of patients of Kaiser-Permanente, says the Medical Post, a newspaper for doctors.

Some of the other findings, as reported to the American Heart Association:

—Men tended to drink more than women.

—Drinking was most prevalent among white men, least prevalent among persons of Oriental descent.

—Alcohol use showed a strong positive association with cigarette smoking and a weaker association with coffee use.

By TISH BALDRIGE

The more frantic and pressured we become in accomplishing our business objectives, the more important it is that everyone be thoughtful of everyone else to help us get through the tough days.

Efficiency is woven right into good manners in the office. It's part of the same fabric. The instrument that bugs us most is the telephone, that constantly ringing apparatus that intrudes on our work, interrupts our train of thought and informs its unwilling victims of fresh crises with which to deal.

There are certain basics we all should heed, whether we are the chairman of the board of a large corporation (who answers his own phone routinely or whose secretary has just stepped out of the office), or whether we are the lowest in importance on the office totem pole. Here are some basics to keep in mind the next time you pick up the phone and begin dialing.

1. Always leave your telephone number when you leave a message. Never go on the assumption that the other person knows it (his telephone book may have been mislaid that morning). Leave your number and extension so that no one has to waste time looking it up.

2. Always give your full name. Last week a person named only "Betty" called when I was out. She assured my assistant that I would know who she was. "Just say that Betty called." She also insisted that I would know her number. What she didn't realize was that I know 2½ "Bettys" (the one-half being the unborn child of friends who have already decided to name their daughter-to-be "Elizabeth"). I never attempted to figure out which Betty had called.

3. Ask for a person by his or her last name. Don't call and ask to speak to "Harry" or "Nancy" even if you have direct-dialed the office and everyone there is on a first-name basis. It is inefficient and unbusinesslike.

4. Don't be afraid to discuss your business with an associate. A secretary is under orders to ask why you want to speak to her boss if she doesn't know you. A secretary or assistant could turn out to be your best friend. Get that person on your side with good manners and cooperation; then your call will go through.

An executive's staff assistant respects someone else's professionalism. The caller who refuses to discuss why he is calling, who masks his mission in mystery, as tugh it were a top secret matter, gets nowhere. If your reason for calling is complicated, say so, but rough it out for the other person. Here's a hypothetical conversation:

"MAY I please speak to Mr. Reeves? This is Anne Bigelow, president of the Bigelow Trading Company calling."

"May I ask what this is in reference to, Miss Bigelow?"

"It's rather complicated, but I've been asked to represent a Saudi Arabian export firm here in the U.S. My lawyer, John Johnson, is an acquaintance of Mr. Reeves' and suggested that I call since Mr. Reeves knows the Saudi principal, Mr. Omarr Al-Jamal. My company is small and this would be a very important piece of business for us, but first I wanted to check out Mr. Al-Jamal with Mr. Reeves. I know how busy he is, but I need advice and I'd greatly appreciate Mr. Reeves' giving me five minutes on the phone."

"I'm sure Mr. Reeves will be glad to talk to you, Miss Bigelow. I'll have him call you when he has finished his meetings."

Contemporary Living

Courtesy its own reward

By TISH BALDRIGE

The more frantic and pressured we become in accomplishing our business objectives, the more important it is that everyone be thoughtful of everyone else to help us get through the tough days.

Efficiency is woven right into good manners in the office. It's part of the same fabric. The instrument that bugs us most is the telephone, that constantly ringing apparatus that intrudes on our work, interrupts our train of thought and informs its unwilling victims of fresh crises with which to deal.

There are certain basics we all should heed, whether we are the chairman of the board of a large corporation (who answers his own phone routinely or whose secretary has just stepped out of the office), or whether we are the lowest in importance on the office totem pole. Here are some basics to keep in mind the next time you pick up the phone and begin dialing.

1. Always leave your telephone number when you leave a message. Never go on the assumption that the other person knows it (his telephone book may have been mislaid that morning). Leave your number and extension so that no one has to waste time looking it up.

2. Always give your full name. Last week a person named only "Betty" called when I was out. She assured my assistant that I would know who she was. "Just say that Betty called." She also insisted that I would know her number. What she didn't realize was that I know 2½ "Bettys" (the one-half being the unborn child of friends who have already decided to name their daughter-to-be "Elizabeth"). I never attempted to figure out which Betty had called.

3. Ask for a person by his or her last name. Don't call and ask to speak to "Harry" or "Nancy" even if you have direct-dialed the office and everyone there is on a first-name basis. It is inefficient and unbusinesslike.

4. Don't be afraid to discuss your business with an associate. A secretary is under orders to ask why you want to speak to her boss if she doesn't know you. A secretary or assistant could turn out to be your best friend. Get that person on your side with good manners and cooperation; then your call will go through.

An executive's staff assistant respects someone else's professionalism. The caller who refuses to discuss why he is calling, who masks his mission in mystery, as tugh it were a top secret matter, gets nowhere. If your reason for calling is complicated, say so, but rough it out for the other person. Here's a hypothetical conversation:

"MAY I please speak to Mr. Reeves? This is Anne Bigelow, president of the Bigelow Trading Company calling."

"May I ask what this is in reference to, Miss Bigelow?"

"It's rather complicated, but I've been asked to represent a Saudi Arabian export firm here in the U.S. My lawyer, John Johnson, is an acquaintance of Mr. Reeves' and suggested that I call since Mr. Reeves knows the Saudi principal, Mr. Omarr Al-Jamal. My company is small and this would be a very important piece of business for us, but first I wanted to check out Mr. Al-Jamal with Mr. Reeves. I know how busy he is, but I need advice and I'd greatly appreciate Mr. Reeves' giving me five minutes on the phone."

"I'm sure Mr. Reeves will be glad to talk to you, Miss Bigelow. I'll have him call you when he has finished his meetings."

Aces on bridge

By IRA CORN

Dear Mr. Corn: Rubber bridge, both vulnerable. Left hand opponent opens one diamond, partner doubles and South responds one heart. Doubler rebids one spade and South passes. This goes down and doubler insists that South should have rebid hearts (North had only a four card spade suit).

This was South's hand. Any comments regarding North's "free lessons"?

Answer: I would have raised to two spades instead of passing and I would have gone set more! Your partner's rebid over your minimum response was obviously misguided. When one makes a take out double and then bids over a non-forcing response, the doubler announces a strong hand (more than a minimum double) and a good suit.

Dear Mr. Corn: We held this hand at our weekly meeting and we don't know how to get to the correct contract. There are more than enough points for a slam, but how do you make it?

Twenty Questions,
Visalia, Calif.

Answer: A tough bidding problem and most pairs would reach a major suit slam, down one or two because of the unavoidable spade losers. The best contract is six diamonds which can be made without the lead of the spade ace and a heart shift.

Against this defense, North wins the heart in dummy and cashes the diamond ace. However, he cannot get to his hand to draw trumps without establishing the setting trick for East.

A tough hand and lots of tough luck. It proves that not all slams can make.

Dear Mr. Corn: When the opponents overcall partner's one no trump opening, how does one use the Stayman convention?

Lost Major,
Knoxville, Ky.

Answer: Cue bid the opponent's suit. A three club bid is a competitive and non-forcing bid. Naturally, if one chooses a cue bid, it requires sufficient strength to risk a game bid by opener (a minimum of nine good points).

Dear Mr. Corn: What is a false card?

Masked Marvel,
Detroit

Answer: A deceptive play of playing some card other than the "normal" card with the intent to deceive an opponent.

Dear Mr. Corn: What is a preference bid?

Hard Choices,
Dayton, Ohio

Answer: A bid in partner's original suit at the lowest possible level when partner bids two suits. This bidding is a preference:

West	East
1♠	1 NT
2♥	2♠

This bidding is a definite raise:

West	East

Diamonds are this bridegroom's best friends

carolyn mcdowell

LONG BEACH baseball star Jeff Burroughs, now with the Atlanta Braves, touched home base long enough to introduce his new bride, the former Debbie Gorman, to local friends.

The couple was married earlier this month in Newport, R.I., at the Catholic Church where the late President Kennedy and Jackie exchanged vows.

Jeff's parents, Chuck and Iona Burroughs, jetted back to the ceremony with some members of the wedding party, Bruce and Michelle Evans, Terry Rowland, Martin Leavelle and Jim Milner.

Jeff's parents hosted a post wedding reception for 150 friends at the Edgewater Hyatt House last week.

Debbie's mother, Ann Gorman, and aunt, Rita Bannon, flew here for the party.

Other guests included Skip and Lorna Rowland, Buck and Margaret Arnold, the Bob Harrisons, baseball players from all over such as Bobby Grich, Jim Umbarger, Chuck Ross and Mike Kekich (just back from Venezuela).

Among others were Ed and Cathy Crosby, Jim and Eleanor Howard, Don and Marie Otto, Bill and Dot McNellis, Ronald and Dorothy Weller, Ralph and Katie Lines and the baseball scout who started Jeff's professional baseball career, Paddy Cottrell, who came from San Jose with his wife, Eunice.

Jeff and Debbie are off to spring training in Florida. They will live in Long Beach during the off season.

ART KEMPSTER and his wife, Pat, started off his retirement career with a bang.

Some 200 co-workers at the Board of Equalization came from all over the state to honor him at a farewell luncheon at the Proud Bird restaurant in Inglewood. It was a double celebration for Art, as it was also his birthday.

The Kempsters' Peninsula neighbors also feted him with a surprise party at the home of Clayton and Kay Todd.

Admission for the party was "something to repair or something to do for Art now that he isn't working." Among gifts was a three-legged stool.

The Kempsters' sons, Steve and Rich, were at the party — Rich brought his dad a needlepoint kit.

Then Art and Pat were off to New Orleans where they took in pre-Mardi Gras festivities including a parade which starred Telly Savalas tossing "gold" doubloons with his likeness on them.

There, they caught a Russian ship, the Odessa, for a cruise to Yucatan, Honduras and stops along the way.

Pat told me that they took dancing and Russian language lessons aboard ship. I don't know how the dancing turned out, but the Kempsters learned to say Yes, No and Thank You in Russian.

SPEAKING OF surprises.

Bachelor brothers, Tom and Ed Dixon, pulled a double surprise on their parents, Ward and Louise, for their silver wedding anniversary.

In fact, it was a week of surprises. The Dixons thought they had celebrated by going out to dinner and having a second honeymoon at the Newporter Inn in Newport Beach. They also asked their old friend, Msgr. James Lynch, to say a Mass for them at St. Matthews Church on the anniversary date.

The boys said they would take them out to dinner for a late celebration.

Louise was getting ready to change her clothes to keep the date with the boys when Tom asked what she was going to wear. Louise said "My brand new pantsuit." Tom allowed as how he would like her in a dress. So he chose one. Louise was somewhat huffy about the whole thing — she didn't care much for the one he chose.

Properly dressed, off they went on the freeway and drove and drove until they came to the San Gabriel Mission where Ward and Louise were married.

They spied a nephew, Mike Dixon and his wife, Joanne, hiding in the bushes. Then they were greeted by another nephew, Father Leo Mattecheck, who is pastor of the Mission. The big surprise was the appearance of still another nephew, Father Ernest Hyman, who had officiated at their wedding. He came from LeMar, Colo., to help them celebrate Mass.

More friends and relatives appeared for the service and when it was over, Ward and Louise were told to ride back with Ward's brother, Col. Brendan Dixon, USAF, ret., and his wife, Donna.

They were welcomed back home with a buffet for 70 guests featuring a silver punchbowl filled with French 75s. Tom and Ed had done it all with the help of cousins, Patricia and Kathleen Dixon.

Surprisers included Jack and Lucille Hamilton, Mo and Jean Molander, Gene and Dorothy Dare, Emil Knuti of Reseda, and Frank Ward of Sacramento.

More were Ann Sheelar, Monica Ryan, Madeline Dixon, the Dave Martins, Clarence and Antoinette Gabel, Bob and Doris Gilette, Veronica Heckendorf, Ann Wessling and Phil and Alice Riley.

MORE SURPRISES ...

For Gladys Ott who celebrated her 90th birthday at a surprise party given for her by her daughter, Toni McDowell.

Among surprisers were her brother and sister-in-law from San Bernardino, Sig and Vera Gillenberg. She also received a call from her nephew in Washington, Ernie Gillenberg.

Other family members there were her grandson, Skip McDowell, with his wife, Marilyn, and their children, Scott and Shannon; a niece, Vida Moseley and husband, Roland; Tim and Lil Doubleday and Russ Ambruster.

Even at the age of 90, Gladys still tears around to Eastern Star meetings.

Women are asking

'How can I make some money with a boutique item that isn't too difficult to paint or sew?'

By REBA & BONNIE CHURCHILL

We've officially entered the "let's-do-it-ourself" age. Time was when everyone wanted to "let George do it." Guess George didn't do it too well, for our mail has been brimming over with questions on make-it-yourself items. Here is a suggestion designed to give artistic ability a boost, plus adding coins to the piggy bank.

Maureen McCormick shows off a "sprout chart" which is practical as a boutique item to sell or a present to give. The fabric measuring stick pattern lets you record the growth-in-height of each member of the family.

All that is required is a strip of material (such as felt or non-woven interfacing used in coats and jackets), crayons or liquid embroidery paint, and two strips of wood.

Cut the material six-feet-long (so every member of the clan can have a record of his height). Use crayons or liquid embroidery paint to draw a ruler; calculate it either in meters — or, if you're "old hat," in inches.

Okay, now it's time to let your creative energy be exposed. Either draw or trace animals, birds and flowers up the side of the ruler. It provides a colorful addition to the hanging chart.

If crayons have been used, set the color. Cover the drawing with a towel and use a medium-warm iron to press color into the fabric. Final touch is securing a wooden stick across top and bottom of the ruler. This serves as a hanger for the "sprout chart," as well as a weight to keep it flush to the wall.

P.S. Your many letters requested it. We've had the famous Spa-Type Diet reprinted. Now you can try a nutrition-oriented 4-day diet like they use at world renowned spas. Send 50 cents in coin and a self-addressed, stamped envelope to: Reba & Bonnie Churchill, "4-Day Snack & Slim Diet," Independent, Press-Telegram, P. O. Box 46-181, Hollywood, Calif. 90046.

At Wit's End

Musical comedy hints at tragedy

erma bombeck

I got this great idea for a musical.

There's this slob of a boy who has just finished college. Unfortunately, it did not finish him. He drags around in polluted gym shoes, combs his hair with his fingers, and has a three-expression vocabulary: "Far out," "Anyone call?" and "Go for it."

He is discovered one day by a set of parents in his bedroom singing, "All I want is a home somewhere . . . far away from a desk and chair . . . and no one in my hair . . . now wouldn't that be lovely?"

The parents look at one another. Here was the chlenge they had been waiting for. Could they take a raw, untrained, college graduate and transform him into an employed adult? They had to try.

They lured him intoheir confidence by promising him his own refrigerator and set to work. Every night they put on a record that chanted, "The pain of work is mainly in the brain." With disgust and boredom he would spew back, "The rain in Spain stays mainly in the plain."

Weeks and months of coaching produced absolutely nothing. Then one night, half sick with exhaustion (and three frozen pizzas), the boy said tiredly, "The pain of work is mainly in the brain."

The mother snapped to attention, "Again."

"The pain of work is mainly in the brain," he repeated.

"I think he's got it," smiled the father. "Once again, where's that blasted pain?"

"IN THE BRAIN! IN THE BRAIN!" he shouted, tears streaming down his face.

They had created an adult. Now it was time to see if they could fool anyone else. Disguising him with a suit, a tie, and hard shoes, they found him employment in a department store and that night found him dancing around the bedroom singing, "I could have clerked all night." They had pulled it off. He was made head of stock.

After that, the parents saw very little of the boy. He spent a fortune on suits with vests, girls who wore dresses, a car with velour seats and his own apartment. One night, his parents saw him at dinner at a posh restaurant and he jumped to his feet and sang two choruses of "Who Needs You?"

Later, in the bedroom, the mother in a poignant scene picks up a worn gym shoe . . . a discarded towel . . . a bowel of petrified pudding from under his bed and with tears streaming down her face sings, "I've grown accustomed to his taste . . ."

At that moment, the son appears and says, "I'm coming home to live."

It probably wouldn't sell. Who goes to watch musical tragedies?

Diamonds are this bridegroom's best friends

LONG BEACH baseball star Jeff Burroughs, now with the Atlanta Braves, touched home base long enough to introduce his new bride, the former Debbie Gorman, to local friends.

The couple was married earlier this month in Newport, R.I., at the Catholic Church where the late President Kennedy and Jackie exchanged vows.

Jeff's parents, Chuck and Iona Burroughs, jetted back to the ceremony with

some members of the wedding party, Bruce and Michelle Evans, Terry Rowland, Martin Leavelle and Jim Milner.

Jeff's parents hosted a post wedding reception for 150 friends at the Edgewater Hyatt House last week.

Debbie's mother, Ann Gorman, and aunt, Rita Bannon, flew here for the party.

Other guests included Skip and Lorna Rowland, Buck and Margaret Arnold, the Bob Harrisons, baseball players from all over such as Bobby Grich, Jim Umbarger, Chuck Ross and Mike Kekich (just back from Venezuela).

Among others were Ed and Cathy Crosby, Jim and Eleanor Howard, Don and Marie Otto, Bill and Dot McNellis, Ronald and Dorothy Weller, Ralph and Katie Lines and the baseball scout who started Jeff's professional baseball career, Paddy Cottrell, who came from San Jose with his wife, Eunice.

Jeff and Debbie are off to spring training in Florida. They will live in Long Beach during the off season.

ART KEMPSTER and his wife, Pat, started off his retirement career with a bang.

Some 200 co-workers at the Board of Equalization came from all over the state to honor him at a farewell luncheon at the Proud Bird restaurant in Inglewood. It was a double celebration for Art, as it was also his birthday.

The Kempsters' Peninsula neighbors also feted him with a surprise party at the home of Clayton and Kay Todd.

Admission for the party was "something to repair or something to do for Art now that he isn't working." Among gifts was a three-legged stool.

The Kempsters' sons, Steve and Rich, were at the party — Rich brought his dad a needlepoint kit.

Then Art and Pat were off to New Orleans where they took in pre-Mardi Gras festivities including a parade which starred Telly Savalas tossing "gold" doubloons with his likeness on them.

There, they caught a Russian ship, the Odessa, for a cruise to Yucatan, Honduras and stops along the way.

Pat told me that they took dancing and Russian language lessons aboard ship. I don't know how the dancing turned out, but the Kempsters learned to say Yes, No and Thank You in Russian.

SPEAKING OF surprises.

Bachelor brothers, Tom and Ed Dixon, pulled a double surprise on their parents, Ward and Louise, for their silver wedding anniversary.

In fact, it was a week of surprises. The Dixons thought they had celebrated by going out to dinner and having a second honeymoon at the Newporter Inn in Newport Beach. They also asked their old friend, Msgr. James Lynch, to say a Mass for them at St. Matthews Church on the anniversary date.

The boys said they would take them out to dinner for a late celebration.

Louise was getting ready to change her clothes to keep the date with the boys when Tom asked what she was going to wear. Louise said "My brand new pantsuit." Tom allowed as how he would like her in a dress. So he chose one. Louise was somewhat huffy about the whole thing — she didn't care much for the one he chose.

Properly dressed, off they went on the freeway and drove and drove until they came to the San Gabriel Mission where Ward and Louise were married.

They spied a nephew, Mike Dixon and his wife, Joanne, hiding in the bushes. Then they were greeted by another nephew, Father Leo Mattecheck, who is pastor of the Mission. The big surprise was the appearance of still another nephew, Father Ernest Hyman, who had officiated at their wedding. He came from LeMar, Colo., to help them celebrate Mass.

More friends and relatives appeared for the service and when it was over, Ward and Louise were told to ride back with Ward's brother, Col. Brendan Dixon, USAF, ret., and his wife, Donna.

They were welcomed back home with a buffet for 70 guests featuring a silver punchbowl filled with French 75s. Tom and Ed had done it all with the help of cousins, Patricia and Kathleen Dixon.

Surprisers included Jack and Lucille Hamilton, Mo and Jean Molander, Gene and Dorothy Dare, Emil Knuti of Reseda and Frank Ward of Sacramento.

More were Ann Sheelar, Monica Ryan, Madeline Dixon, the Dave Martins, Clarence and Antoinette Gabel, Bob and Doris Gilette, Veronica Heckendorf, Ann Wessling and Phil and Alice Riley.

MORE SURPRISES ...

For Gladys Ott who celebrated her 90th birthday at a surprise party given for her by her daughter, Toni McDowell.

Among surprisers were her brother and sister-in-law from San Bernardino, Sig and Vera Gillenberg. She also received a call from her nephew in Washington, Ernie Gillenberg.

Other family members there were her grandson, Skip McDowell, with his wife, Marilyn, and their children, Scott and Shannon; a niece, Vida Moseley and husband, Roland; Tim and Lil Doubleday and Russ Ambruster.

Even at the age of 90, Gladys still tears around to Eastern Star meetings.

Women are asking

'How can I make some money with a boutique item that isn't too difficult to paint or sew?'

By REBA & BONNIE CHURCHILL

We've officially entered the "let's-do-it-ourself" age. Time was when everyone wanted to "let George do it." Guess George didn't do it too well, for our mail has been brimming over with questions on make-it-yourself items. Here is a suggestion designed to give artistic ability a boost, plus adding coins to the piggy bank.

Maureen McCormick shows off a "sprout chart" which is practical as a boutique item to sell or a present to give. The fabric measuring stick pattern lets you record the growth-in-height of each member of the family.

All that is required is a strip of material (such as felt or non-woven interfacing used in coats and jackets), crayons or liquid embroidery paint, and two strips of wood.

Cut the material six-feet-long (so every member of the clan can have a record of his height). Use crayons or liquid embroidery paint to draw a ruler; calculate it either in meters — or, if you're "old hat," in inches.

Okay, now it's time to let your creative energy be exposed. Either draw or trace animals, birds and flowers up the side of the ruler. It provides a colorful addition to the hanging chart.

If crayons have been used, set the color. Cover the drawing with a towel and use a medium-warm iron to press color into the fabric. Final touch is securing a wooden stick across top and bottom of the ruler. This serves as a hanger for the "sprout chart," as well as a weight to keep it flush to the wall.

P.S. Your many letters requested it. We've had the famous Spa-Type Diet reprinted. Now you can try a nutrition-oriented 4-day diet like they use at world renowned spas. Send 50 cents in coin and a self-addressed, stamped envelope to: Reba & Bonnie Churchill, "4-Day Snack & Slim Diet," Independent, Press-Telegram, P. O. Box 46-181, Hollywood, Calif. 90046.

At Wit's End

Musical comedy hints at tragedy

I got this great idea for a musical.

There's this slob of a boy who has just finished college. Unfortunately, it did not finish him. He drags around in polluted gym shoes, combs his hair with his fingers, and has a three-expression vocabulary: "Far out," "Anyone call?" and "Go for it."

He is discovered one day by a set of parents in his bedroom singing, "All I want is a home somewhere . . . far away from a desk and chair . . . and no one in my hair . . . now wouldn't that be lovely?"

erma bombeck

The parents look at one another. Here was the chlenge they had been waiting for. Could they take a raw, untrained, college graduate and transform him into an employed adult? They had to try.

They lured him intoheir confidence by promising him his own refrigerator and set to work. Every night they put on a record that chanted, "The pain of work is mainly in the brain." With disgust and boredom he would spew back, "The rain in Spain stays mainly in the plain."

Weeks and months of coaching produced absolutely nothing. Then one night, half sick with exhaustion (and three frozen pizzas), the boy said tiredly, "The pain of work is mainly in the brain."

The mother snapped to attention. "Again."

"The pain of work is mainly in the brain," he repeated.

"I think he's got it," smiled the father. "Once again, where's that blasted pain?"

"IN THE BRAIN! IN THE BRAIN!" he shouted, tears streaming down his face.

They had created an adult. Now it was time to see if they could fool anyone else. Disguising him with a suit, a tie, and hard shoes, they found him employment in a department store and that night found him dancing around the bedroom singing, "I could have clerked all night." They had pulled it off. He was made head of stock.

After that, the parents saw very little of the boy. He spent a fortune on suits with vests, girls who wore dresses, a car with velour seats and his own apartment. One night, his parents saw him at dinner at a posh restaurant and he jumped to his feet and sang two choruses of "Who Needs You?"

Later, in the bedroom, the mother in a poignant scene picks up a worn gym shoe . . . a discarded towel . . . a bowel of petrified pudding from under his bed and with tears streaming down her face sings, "I've grown accustomed to his taste . . ."

At that moment, the son appears and says, "I'm coming home to live."

It probably wouldn't sell. Who goes to watch musical tragedies?

The workshop

For centuries artists of every country have sought to capture the natural brilliance of flowers in unfading forms . . . on canvas (with water, oil or acrylic paints), as well as from paper, gauze, wax and cotton. But now you can learn to create the most exotic-looking flowers of all . . . from silk or any lightweight fabric available at most fabric departments. Rayon, georgette, or nylon-organza are also very good. No special tools are needed for these flowers — just an interest in preserving spring's loveliest blooms.

Step-by-step instructions for creating each of the flowers pictured here are included in our colorful 16-page instruction guide. There are full-size traceable patterns for petals and leaves of the following flowers: rose, jonquil, violet, daffodil, carnation, daisy, sweet pea and poppy. Instructions for making stems from wire are also included.

To obtain Instruction Guide, #594, Silk Flowers, send $2 (includes first class postage and handling) by check or money order to Steve Ellingson, Independent, Press-Telegram Pattern Dept., P.O. Box 2383 Van Nuys, Calif. 91409.

HANDY TIP: When painting small pieces of fabric, a good drying tray can be made from an oven rack, covered with a piece of screen wire. This allows the air to circulate and keeps the fabric smooth.

Winner lives up to his name press before it opened, yet from the very first day, the theater was empty, so nobody can tell me publicity sells a movie. Before anybody saw it, including the critics, the public had already made a silent decision to pass it by. Opening day in New York looked like World War III had been declared.

"Conversely, on 'Death Wish' we had no advance publicity at all, nobody had ever heard of the picture. Charles Bronson had never had a hit in New York, and opening day, before one review appeared, there were riots in the theater. Bronson never took a nickel in New York before 'Death Wish,' and he hasn't had a success since, yet it's one of the top-grossing pictures of all time. It's an extraordinary business!"

A FORMER FILM critic who came to the fore making dreadful British rock musicals in the early '60s, Winner has small regard for today's critics. "If a cheap film comes out of Mesopotamia or Eastern Bengal showing an Indian peasant climbing 206 steps to get from A to B, they call the shot one of the greatest camera movements in cinema history, when all it is is five minutes of a man walking upstairs.

"It's all nonsense, and if these films attract an audience of five, it's a big day. Meanwhile, the people in East Bengal don't go to see these bores. They're all going to see American horror movies!"

He says he's unfulfilled because he has yet to make a film that is both artistic and commercial, but he's got this philosophy, and he may be right! "The masses are looking for entertainment, not art. All they want is an hour and a half of light relief in a dark room, and if you don't give it to them you find yourself down the toilet."

It's not likely to happen to Michael Winner. As long as audiences demand movies with pow-sock appeal, he's the man who delivers. Critics scoff, but in East Bengal, he's sitting pretty.

The Formula

Bubble cares away

By NORMAN H. STARK

Few things are more relaxing than a hot bath. But even a hot bath can be improved by the addition of a compound that causes bubbles to form. Their action as they rise to the water's surface has a massaging effect on the skin.

Each bubble is literally a tiny envelope of water surrounding a harmless, non-toxic gas. The principle involved is that of a base (bicarbonate of soda) neutralizing an acid (tartaric). When these chemicals are mixed nothing happens. However, when water is added the base neutralized the acid causing a reaction which forms the gas.

To make effervescent bath salts you'll need nine tablespoons of BICARBONATE OF SODA, seven and one-half tablespoons of TARTARIC ACID (cream of tartar) and two tablespoons CORNSTARCH. These three items can be found at drug stores. Simply mix these three ingredients thoroughly and add a few drops of any water soluble perfume, if desired. Use about two tablespoons to a tub of water. Store in an air-tight glass, metal or plastic containter.

(Like any chemical product you use at home, you should store this one safely, label it — listing ingredients and noting any cautions — and keep it out of reach of children.)

Symphonic weekend ahead

Long Beach pianist Craig Nies will perform Prokofiev's Piano Concerto No. 3 when the Long Beach Symphony gives its fifth in a series of subscription concerts Saturday at 8 p.m. in Long Beach City College auditorium, Clark Avenue and Harvey Way.

The program, under the direction of Alberto Bolet, also will include Handel's Water Music Suite and the Symphony No. 1 by Charles Ives.

Nies has twice been winner of the Martha Baird Rockefeller Grant, in 1975 and 1976. He has performed with the Los Angeles Philharmonic, on the California Concert Artists series and in the Young Musicians Series in Philadelphia.

Last May he was the only West coast winner of the Young Concert Artists international auditions. Resulting from the finals competition in New York was a concert in Rockville, Md.

A TAPE OF that concert was made by National Public Radio and is expected to be played in this area within the next several weeks on KLON, FM, Long Beach and KUSC, Los Angeles.

In November Nies will premiere a new piano concerto by Andre Brule with the Cota Symphony at the Music Center.

Limited seating for the symphony concert is still available. Information may be obtained from the Symphony Association office, 121 Linden Ave.

PIANIST Craig Nies is soloist with Long Beach Symphony.

Bruce Polay, music director of the Lakewood Philharmonia, will serve as both conductor and soloist of the opening number at a concert next Sunday at 8 p.m. in Long Beach City College auditorium, Clark Avenue and Harvey Way.

The concert, fourth in a season series of six, begins with Concertino for Piano and Orchestra by Arthur Honegger, which is a short novelty composition written as a satirical comment on the piano concerto.

Featured soloist will be cellist Steven Fraser who will perform the Haydn Cello Concerto in D Major, Opus 100. Fraser has performed with several orchestras in Southern California as principal cellist and soloist.

Symphony No. 5, Opus 76 by Antonin Dvorak, one of the composer's early works, will conclude the program.

Tickets may be purchased at the door the evening of the performance. Admission is $2.50 for adults and $1.50 for students and senior citizens. ASB card holders from Long Beach City College will be admitted free.

Silver, mosaic gift offered to museum

Thanks to Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Gilbert of Beverly Hills, their extraordinary collections of silver and mosaics will be given to the Los Angeles County Museum of Art upon opening of an exhibition on April 28 at the museum.

According to Kenneth Donahue, museum director, "This is a totally unique gift to an American museum; there is nothing in the world comparable to the Gilberts' mosaic collection outside the Hermitage in Leningrad, and the Georgian silver collection is the most important in a private collection in the United States."

The Gilberts, who came to the U. S. from England 30 years ago, have collected almost 200 examples of mosaics made between the 17th and early 20th centuries. Their silver collection includes 50 18th and early 19th century pieces primarily by two of the world's most famous silversmiths, Paul de Lamerie (1688-1751) and Paul Storr (1771-1844).

The mosaic collection is Roman and Florentine. Within the Roman category the collection focuses on micro-mosaics, a term coined by Gilbert to describe objects made of tiny fragments or tesserae of colored stones, clay or glass.

There are objects in the collection where the tesserae number 1200 to the square inch.

Florentine mosaics are made of marble and "pietre dure" or semi-precious stones of wide variety including lapis lazuli, onyx, jasper, coral, agate, rock crystal, amethyst and carnelian. Mosaic works of this type are generally used as table tops, inlaid plaques on cabinets and walls, and mosaic "paintings."

Monumental silver and silver-gilt pieces in the Rococo and Neo-classical style are featured in the silver collection, which includes center pieces, serving dishes, candelabra, cups, bowls, trays and urns.

Of particular interest are two pairs of silver and silver-gilt royal gates made during the reign of Catherine the Great for two churches in the Monastery of Pechersk in Kiev, Ukraine.

KEN DECKER, watercolorist of the rural American scene, will be guest artist Tuesday of the Bellflower Art Association. The meeting, to which the public is invited, will take place at 7:30 p.m. in Simms Park social hall, Bellflower.

INTRIGUING results of an intensive hunt during the past seven years will be seen, beginning Tuesday, in a collection of German Expressionist art at UCLA's Wight Gallery.

The collection, gathered by Robert Gore Rifkind, Beverly Hills attorney, includes prints, drawings, illustrated books, periodicals and posters and other work done by the German Expressionists. Some have never before been exhibited in the United States.

The exhibit includes a rare copy of the manifesto announcing the opening of the Bauhas school of architecture, design and craftsmanship at Weimar, Germany, which was written by Walter Gropius and illustrated with a woodcut by Lyonel Feininger.

The Rifkind collection also includes examples of early influences, such as art nouveau, or Jugendstil, the Secessionists, and evidence of the influence of primitive art on work done at the end of the 19th century.

A central part of the collection is Die Brucke (the bridge), a name chosen by a group of artists who gathered in Dresden and Berlin and tried to awaken German art from what they saw as a sterile period.

Among rarities to be exhibited are Erich Heckel illustrations for Oscar Wilde's "Ballad of Reading Gaol," a series of 10 woodcuts done in 1907 and never before shown in this country.

College slates Geer

Will (Grandpa Walton) Geer will join with his family and troupe of young artists in a two-hour show, "Americana," Friday at 8 p.m. in Long Beach City College auditorium, Clark Avenue and Harvey Way.

During the presentation Geer will "visit" with Walt Whitman, Mark Twain, Robert Frost, Woody Guthrie and Emily Dickinson, among others. Old Mark Twain will converse with young Samuel Clemens; Robert Frost will describe the flavor of New England seasons through his poetry; Walt Whitman will remember the hard times and personal despair of the Civil War.

Twain will give his centennial speech and also will shock Emily Dickinson with his free thinking. Frost and Whitman will have an argument about poetry versus free verse.

Interspersed among the anecdotes and reminiscences will be songs of Woody Guthrie.

Tickets are available at the LBCC student bank, 4901 E. Carson St., and at the office of public lectures and events on the Pacific Coast Campus, 1305 E. Pacific Coast Highway.

General admission tickets are $4.75 and $3.50; a limited number of discount tickets at $3 and $2 are available to ASB card holders and senior citizens over 62. All seats are reserved.

"AMERICANA" show features Will Geer and troupe at Long Beach City College.

LYNN HUFF
She's the steak expert at Currie's

THE WORD CATTLEMAN has a certain mystique when used to describe a steak. It makes us think of a midwestern or western cattle expert who knows exactly what he wants when he sits down to eat. He wants a steak that a man can be proud of.

So that's why the new cattleman's steak is such a success at Currie's Santa Fe restaurant, 1735 W. Pacific Coast Highway near Santa Fe Avenue. It's not the biggest steak in town, but it's a beauty of a 12-ounce ribeye. And the price is right — $5 on the dinner. Those who dine out very much are aware that fine steaks usually cost a lot more than that these days in fine restaurants.

The steak expert at Currie's is Lynn Huff. She and Bill Newbury are the owners of this spacious luncheon and dinner house which has a western decor and has been a prominent highway landmark since the 1940s. Lynn was never a cattlewoman. But she knows steaks, because she's been a restaurant executive in this area for a long time. For many years she was director of sales and catering at the Golden Sails Inn.

Since its beginning, Currie's Santa Fe has had a reputation for featuring a big variety of the best steaks — glorious filet mignons, New York cuts and top sirloins. Lynn and her No. 1 chef, Ann Duchak, who's unusually accomplished, now offer a greater choice of accompaniments with those steaks and all the other dinner entrees.

Guests can start their meal with soup du jour or clam chowder or shrimp vinaigrette salad or fresh spinach salad with special sweet-sour dressing or tossed green salad with dressing. Also included are potatoes or rice pilaf and hot fresh garlic bread.

Since taking over as owners last year, Lynn and Bill have revitalized Currie's with new ideas. A big variety of delectables is included on the de luxe brunch Sundays from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. It's $2.99 for adults; $1.99 for children. It starts with chilled orange, grapefruit or tomato juice. Then come eggs with beef patty, ham, bacon or sausage; potatoes O'Brien or grits; homemade cinnamon rolls and hot biscuits, country gravy and the fanciest condiment platter in town. The brunch plate is decorated with fresh fruit.

Lynn and Bill feature a happy hour in the lounge Mondays through Fridays, 5 to 7 p.m., offering hors d'oeuvres and double-sized drinks. The daily luncheons are so good that Currie's attracts executives, businesswomen and housewives from all over town. At night there are special chef's choice dinners for $3.50 (steak tidbits with sauce or fried chicken with country gravy) as well as higher-priced steamed and broiled king crab legs, steak with lobster, many other seafoods, outstanding prime rib au jus and grenadine of beef.

MOST NEWCOMERS TO DOWNTOWN Long Beach aren't aware that there was once a Hubert's Cafeteria on Fourth Street near Long Beach Boulevard. It was the first Hubert's, founded by Hubert Hust, who now owns and operates the Hubert's Cafeterias at 643 Pine Ave. and 218 E. Broadway.

About 16 years ago, a tow-headed youngster of 5 began working part-time at Hubert's on Fourth Street. That was Dave Hust's first job. He was hired by his father as a busboy who cleared the tables and cleaned the trays. The little fellow was a hard worker even then and proud of the fact that he was able to work part-time at the cafeteria the way his older brother Rick did. Hubert and his wife Joan have always believed in the old-fashioned philosophy that "blessed is he who has found his work." When Rick and Dave's younger brother Ron was old enough, he also was given a part-time cafeteria job. Hubert — a friendly, homey family man — was never a slave-driver; he gave his three boys just enough work to keep them happy.

Now Dave is a big, strapping athlete. He's 21 years old, six feet tall and weighs 185. He works out with weights, plays racketball and jogs. For the past two months, he's been manager-chef at Hubert's Cafeteria on Broadway. He loves the job and the responsibility. He starts work every morning at 5:45. Exuberant and out-going, he does just about everything around the place. He's the No. 1 chef, sometimes he's a carver on the cafeteria line and he enjoys going around the dining room giving coffee refills and greeting the customers.

Dave's enthusiasm and ideas have brought the reward of a noticeable pickup in business at Hubert's on Broadway. He credits his hard-working, cheerful employes with being equally responsible for making the restaurant so well-liked and highly praised. His top employes include Leona Kracher, Golden Rennert, Almeda Linville, Greta Apperson and backup chef Antonio Cruz.

Like Hubert's Cafeteria on Pine Avenue, Hubert's on Broadway features an unusually popular luncheon special for $1.60. It includes soup and salad, a hot beef or ham or corned beef sandwich, coffee or tea. Both cafeterias offer the same wholesome, nutrious breakfasts, luncheons and dinners at the same prices. Another popular luncheon entree is the halibut, $2.40 with salad, vegetable, roll, muffin or cornbread from Hubert's ovens.

Excellent daily dinners are $1.95. The biggest attraction, served Sundays, too, is Hubert's terrific roast beef dinner for $2.90, including everything from salad to beverage and a tempting, home-style dessert.

LYNN HUFF
She's the steak expert at Currie's

THE WORD CATTLEMAN has a certain mystique when used to describe a steak. It makes us think of a midwestern or western cattle expert who knows exactly what he wants when he sits down to eat. He wants a steak that a man can be proud of.

So that's why the new cattleman's steak is such a success at Currie's Santa Fe restaurant, 1735 W. Pacific Coast Highway near Santa Fe Avenue. It's not the biggest steak in town, but it's a beauty of a 12-ounce ribeye. And the price is right — $5 on the dinner. Those who dine out very much are aware that fine steaks usually cost a lot more than that these days in fine restaurants.

The steak expert at Currie's is Lynn Huff. She and Bill Newbury are the owners of this spacious luncheon and dinner house which has a western decor and has been a prominent highway landmark since the 1940s. Lynn was never a cattlewoman. But she knows steaks, because she's been a restaurant executive in this area for a long time. For many years she was director of sales and catering at the Golden Sails Inn.

Since its beginning, Currie's Santa Fe has had a reputation for featuring a big variety of the best steaks — glorious filet mignons, New York cuts and top sirloins. Lynn and her No. 1 chef, Ann Duchak, who's unusually accomplished, now offer a greater choice of accompaniments with those steaks and all the other dinner entrees.

Guests can start their meal with soup du jour or clam chowder or shrimp vinaigrette salad or fresh spinach salad with special sweet-sour dressing or tossed green salad with dressing. Also included are potatoes or rice pilaf and hot fresh garlic bread.

Since taking over as owners last year, Lynn and Bill have revitalized Currie's with new ideas. A big variety of delectables is included on the de luxe brunch Sundays from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. It's $2.99 for adults; $1.99 for children. It starts with chilled orange, grapefruit or tomato juice. Then come eggs with beef patty, ham, bacon or sausage; potatoes O'Brien or grits; homemade cinnamon rolls and hot biscuits, country gravy and the fanciest condiment platter in town. The brunch plate is decorated with fresh fruit.

Lynn and Bill feature a happy hour in the lounge Mondays through Fridays, 5 to 7 p.m., offering hors d'oeuvres and double-sized drinks. The daily luncheons are so good that Currie's attracts executives, businesswomen and housewives from all over town. At night there are special chef's choice dinners for $3.50 (steak tidbits with sauce or fried chicken with country gravy) as well as higher-priced steamed and broiled king crab legs, steak with lobster, many other seafoods, outstanding prime rib au jus and grenadine of beef.

MOST NEWCOMERS TO DOWNTOWN Long Beach aren't aware that there was once a Hubert's Cafeteria on Fourth Street near Long Beach Boulevard. It was the first Hubert's, founded by Hubert Hust, who now owns and operates the Hubert's Cafeterias at 643 Pine Ave. and 218 E. Broadway.

About 16 years ago, a tow-headed youngster of 5 began working part-time at Hubert's on Fourth Street. That was Dave Hust's first job. He was hired by his father as a busboy who cleared the tables and cleaned the trays. The little fellow was a hard worker even then and proud of the fact that he was able to work part-time at the cafeteria the way his older brother Rick did. Hubert and his wife Joan have always believed in the old-fashioned philosophy that "blessed is he who has found his work." When Rick and Dave's younger brother Ron was old enough, he also was given a part-time cafeteria job. Hubert — a friendly, homey family man — was never a slave-driver; he gave his three boys just enough work to keep them happy.

Now Dave is a big, strapping athlete. He's 21 years old, six feet tall and weighs 185. He works out with weights, plays racketball and jogs. Handicapped enjoy sports

TENNIS in a standard wheelchair takes practice. Tom Clardy takes a turn at a recent workshop for the handicapped.

HORSEBACK RIDING can help victims of cerebral palsy relax muscles and feel in control of the horse. Sidewalkers are usually necessary at first.

Staff photos by TOM SHAW

PLAYER and teacher of wheelchair tennis, Jeff Minnebraker shows others how rule changes make the game competitive with able-boded player or others in wheelchairs.

getting your self-confidence back. Once you've accomplished that, the rest is all made.

"The basic issue in learning to ski is learning to relax," he explains. "You do better if you don't key up."

There is a challenge for a paraplegic in learning to ski but "once a handicapped individual has verbally agreed to do it, he's met that challenge. He learns quickly.

"And because he's been down and hurt and experienced life from a different spectrum, he often can learn more quickly than a two-legged individual. He has a clearer point of view.

"Plus," Clardy chuckles, "it's easier to ski on one leg — you don't have to worry about crossing the ski tips."

Clardy, 31, a former police officer and now a graduate in psychology at Long Beach State University, used to sky dive, skin dive and ski before his disabling accident. Now as head of the 170-member association chapter, he wants to achieve all those things again.

MEANWHILE, Tish Flynn, a recreational therapist at the Long Beach Mental Health Clinic, says that those with mental handicaps also can benefit from increased sports activity. The children with whom she works at the clinic derive beneficial side effects from sports. She sees it as a way for them to gain praise from adults while having fun.

"The children have a chance to get attention for their activity and so the activity is a good way to change behavior.

"At home they get attention through inappropriate means. But in sports or by just getting out to the park for a barbecue they have alternative ways to get attention and this improves their self esteem."

Ms. Flynn, 26, takes the children, ranging in age from 7 to 17, on field trips as part of their day treatment program at the clinic. "The children choose their own activity. They've chosen the trip to the dryland ski school (at a Sports Center in Los Alamitos) three times in the last six months.

"A big part of the rereation therapy program rests on the fact that the children need practice in communication and in being with peers. If they see they can be successful in these areas at the ski school or at football or in finishing a leather project, they will see that they are worth something and this feeling carries over to their home situation."

"Play or recreation is a part of the lives of children and adolescents. They live in play. So one of the best ways to open a kid up is to play a game with him."

She sees skiing also as "an excellent energy release. On the ski slope, a hyperactive youngster can get rid of a lot of that energy."

Moreover, she says "it is therapeutic to try. You fall down and try again."

Christiason offers this summation: "given the level of their function, all handicapped persons can do something in the way of physical activity."

Coupon shows teacher's human, too

Who hasn't, at one time or another, come to the end of a day with the knowledge that you had to have something done by the morning, but you just didn't have the time to get it done?

You worry about what is going to happen because you haven't gotten the job or assignment done. You kick yourself for putting it off until there was not enough time left to do it. You dream up all sorts of excuses to explain why you didn't get it done.

All who have had that experience will appreciate why two of your youngsters are still talking about a valentine they received this year — a greeting from their teachers they hadn't expected.

It was a mimeographed sheet, with a big red heart outlined in the center, and a message:

Be My Valentine
This Valentine is a coupon which can be used as a substitute for one daily assignment.

In addition, there was some small print at the bottom — which you might have expected:

Notice: Void Where Prohibited (Long range assignments and tests)

That was the limitation put on by David's teacher, Miss Cathy Gallagher. Will's teacher, Mrs. Shirley Montague, indicated that the coupon was good only during February. Even so, you'd better believe that along with a third colleague who also distributed coupons, Mrs. Ann Perry, those teachers really scored with their pupils that day.

Needless to say, the kids have put their "coupons" in a safe place, much like the Monopoly player who gets a "Get Out of Jail Free" card from Chance or Community Chest. It's such a nice feeling to have that insurance against being caught short ... at least once.

dr. walt menninger

Mrs. Montague first started the practice several years ago, when she read about the idea in a teacher's magazine. It was presented as something to make kids happy. But she found it can be a valuable learning experience for the kids.

Most of the children don't cash in their coupons right away. They hang onto it, saving it for the "biggest" assignment that comes along. Indeed, some save it so long that Mrs. Montague's expiration date passes without their realizing it. And some never do attempt to use it.

Other kids pick up immediately on the opportunity and play it for all it's worth. Mrs. Montague ran out of her original supply this year and had to prepare a new coupon. She forgot to write in the test exclusion, and one of her pupils immediately wanted to apply it to an upcoming math test. He didn't get to.

THE COUPON is a small token with considerable positive psychological impact. Like insurance, it is an anxiety reliever. It is an assurance of being acceptable even if you are not always perfect.

The reality is that one missed assignment by a student is unlikely to have a deterrent effect on learning over the long haul. To be forgiven in advance for one missed assignment can free the student to progress without getting hung up in a struggle with the teacher. This positive experience can spill over to other areas.

Pastille burners prized

Q. "I purchased a Staffordshire pastille burner at auction for 15." —Edie, Tucson, Ariz.

A. Staffordshire pastille burners of pottery or porcelain shaped like cottages or castles were produced from the late 1700s well into the Victorian period. The conical shaped perfumed pastilles burned in them were used to sweeten the air in musty rooms. Some burners had roofs that lifted off, while others were lighted by means of a taper pushed through the window. Because they are presently selling for between $85 and $100, it seems proper to call your purchase scent-sational!

Q. "Would you please furnish us with some representative prices on Buck Rogers items?" — Morey, Las Vegas, Nev.

A. One is tempted to state that prices in this category are going up, up and away! Value guide: Big Little book, "Buck Rogers Versus the Fiend of Space," $15; pocket watch, $175; solar scout badge, $24; space glasses, $20; Tootsie Toy, battle-cruiser, $25; toy rocket ship, tin, Marx, $20; 25th century liquid helium water pistol, $65.

Q. "The Madrid Depression glass design is my favorite." —Iris, St. Petersburg, Fla.

A. Depression glass devotees admire and acquire the Federal Glass Company design whenever a bargain-priced piece pops into view. The crystal and amber pieces dating from the 1930s are somewhat more plentiful than the pink, green and blue specimens. Premium prices are being paid for such rarities as the covered butter dishes, ashtrays, pitchers and footed salt and pepper shakers. The pattern has resurfaced as Recollection in an amber shade, however the maker has clearly dated each piece "76" on the underside. Say "Si Si" should anyone offer you a piece of the Madrid pattern. Value guide: covered butter dish, green, $47.50.

Q. "I'm scouring the markets for Godey's Lady's Books." —Mrs. W. L., Vancouver, Wash.

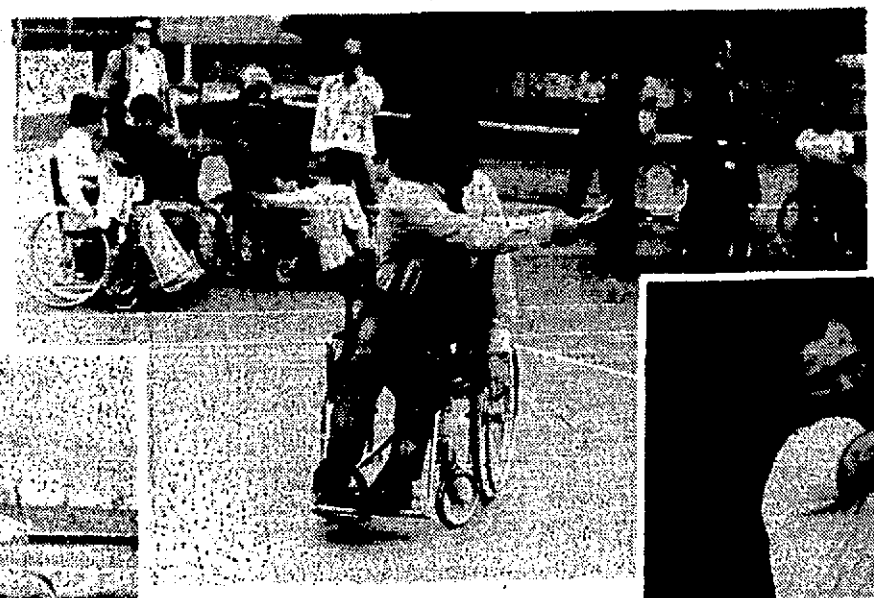

A. Louis Antoine Godey launched America's first magazine for women in 1830. It quickly became must reading thanks to the fascinating articles, stories, prints and fashion plates. Single fashion plates, usually hand-colored, proved so popular that double fold-out types appeared in the 1860s and 1870s. Thrift-conscious ladies usually saved their issues, having them bound at year's end. Those issues having their fashion plates intact positively beguile collectors. Sarah Josepha Hale was the editor of this magazine for over 50 years. Did you realize she wrote the poem "Mary Had a Little Lamb"? Value guide: 1865, bound volume, fashion prints intact, $40.

Handicapped enjoy sports

TENNIS in a standard wheelchair takes practice. Tom Clardy takes a turn at a recent workshop for the handicapped.

HORSEBACK RIDING can help victims of cerebral palsy relax muscles and feel in control of the horse. Sidewalkers are usually necessary at first.

getting your self-confidence back. Once you've accomplished that, the rest is all made.

"The basic issue in learning to ski is learning to relax," he explains. "You do better if you don't key up."

There is a challenge for a paraplegic in learning to ski but "once a handicapped individual has verbally agreed to do it, he's met that challenge. He learns quickly.

"And because he's been down and hurt and experienced life from a different spectrum, he often can learn more quickly than a two-legged individual. He has a clearer point of view.

"Plus," Clardy chuckles, "it's easier to ski on one leg — you don't have to worry about crossing the ski tips."

Clardy, 31, a former police officer and now a graduate in psychology at Long Beach State University, used to sky dive, skin dive and ski before his disabling accident. Now as head of the 170-member association chapter, he wants to achieve all those things again.

MEANWHILE, Tish Flynn, a recreational therapist at the Long Beach Mental Health Clinic, says that those with mental handicaps also can benefit from increased sports activity. The children with whom she works at the clinic derive beneficial side effects from sports. She sees it as a way for them to gain praise from adults while having fun.

"The children have a chance to get attention for their activity and so the activity is a good way to change behavior.

"At home they get attention through inappropriate means. But in sports or by just getting out to the park for a barbecue they have alternative ways to get attention and this improves their self esteem."

Ms. Flynn, 26, takes the children, ranging in age from 7 to 17, on field trips as part of their day treatment program at the clinic. "The children choose their own activity. They've chosen the trip to the dryland ski school (at a Sports Center in Los Alamitos) three times in the last six months.

"A big part of the rereation therapy program rests on the fact that the children need practice in communication and in being with peers. If they see they can be successful in these areas at the ski school or at football or in finishing a leather project, they will see that they are worth something and this feeling carries over to their home situation."

"Play or recreation is a part of the lives of children and adolescents. They live in play. So one of the best ways to open a kid up is to play a game with him."

She sees skiing also as "an excellent energy release. On the ski slope, a hyperactive youngster can get rid of a lot of that energy."

Moreover, she says "it is therapeutic to try. You fall down and try again."

Christiason offers this summation: "given the level of their function, all handicapped persons can do something in the way of physical activity."

KONA COAST, Hawaii — If you've ever dreamed of escaping to a tropical isle...with papayas, passion fruit and sandy beaches, but no streets, sidewalks, radios, TVs, telephones or door keys, Kona Village Resort may be your Shangri-La.

Secluded on the crystal-clear, emerald Kahuwai Bay on the Kona Coast of the Big Island of Hawaii, Kona Village offers an "idyllic lifestyle" in a "setting of untouched beauty" in a "private little Eden," one brochure boasts with only the slightest exaggeration.

The resort definitely is remote. It has been built on the site of the historic, once-thriving village of Kaupulehu and is spread over 65 acres, separated from the rest of the world by an additional 12,000 acres. An attended entry gatehouse two miles away on Hawaii's Highway 19 insures its privacy.

Inside are 71 individual, thatched-roof bungalows, or "hales," styled after those found in old Hawaii and seven other South Seas islands.

THE HALES, primitive in design only, are spaced for privacy and stand on stilts beside the beach, by a lagoon or in tropical gardens. Some stand over flows of black but iridescent lava which spewed from the angry Mount Hualalai in 1801, chasing villagers from the coast, but sparing the white-sand beach by the bay.

Once here, you can do nothing, or everything.

You can lie on the immaculate beach, sway in oversized hammocks under coco palms or sip heady tropical fruit drinks in strategically placed outdoor bars. The Shipwreck Bar is set up in a sailboat which broke up in a storm.

If you want total seclusion and absolute peace, it's yours. Stroll down the beach and you'll hear nothing but the surf washing over lava rocks and the cries of sea birds.

THE EVERYTHING — a slight exaggeration on my part — includes swimming, both in the ocean and in a fresh-water pool, snorkeling, scuba diving, surfing, fishing, sailing and outrigger canoeing.

You can play tennis, volleyball and shuffleboard. You can pitch horseshoes, putt golf balls, and if you really needed to get away, you can weave baskets.

You can also take guided walks to view ancient petroglyph fields, shelter caves and 100 varieties of flora and fauna.

The food is, as it should be, a gourmet's delight. Breakfast and dinner are sit-down meals. Lunch is available at an outdoor buffet — pickled papaya, kiwi fruit halves and potato salad with shrimp — or out of a picnic box.

Twelve dinner menus with three entrees each are rotated daily and, as you'd expect, include prime rib, shrimp, mahimahi and filet mignon, but also roast duckling, lobster foo yung, curry of South Sea lobster, filet of beef stuffed with oysters and roast rack of venison.

DESSERTS guaranteed to be a dieter's undoing include baked Alaska, strawberry crepes, chilled coconut soufflé and Kona coffee tarts.

Many of the resort's well-fed guests are repeaters, coming year after year. The average stay is five days.

Not surprising, it is a popular hideaway for honeymooners. Some couples come there to wed. The management provides ceremonies as elaborate or as simple as the couple desires. Vows can be exchanged indoors or out, in the gardens or by the sea, at sunrise or sunset.

On request, the resort will furnish the presiding official, witnesses, fresh flower leis, a photographer, wedding album, cake, champagne, music and wedding announcements featuring the honeymoon cottage in a line art drawing.

But, alas, paradise doesn't come cheap. It takes $110 a day for two to move into a hale in the garden and $125 a day for a hale by the ocean.

THE PRICE includes, however, three meals a day and use of all recreational equipment, excluding scuba gear. Tennis lessons and deep-sea fishing charters in pursuit of marlin and yellowfin tuna are extra, too.

There are special package rates for honeymooners and wedding arrangements.

If you can't pay the price, you might want to consider applying for work there. The resort closes Nov. 30 through Dec. 15 each year for maintenance and renovation and the employes go on vacation those two weeks. On the last two days of their vacation, they return as non-paying guests, hosted and served by the management.

About the lack of door keys and telephones: You can lock yourself in your hale, if you feel you must, and if you must telephone, one is available in the office.

For further information, write Kona Village Resort, Box 1299, Kaupulehu, Kona, Hawaii 96740, or their mainland travel representative in Los Angeles, John A. Tetley Co. Inc., 3075 Wilshire Blvd.

SAILING, surfing, sunning or just relaxing are the attractions at Kona Village Resort on the Big Island of Hawaii.

KONA COAST, Hawaii — If you've ever dreamed of escaping to a tropical isle with papayas, passion fruit and sandy beaches, but no streets, sidewalks, radios, TVs, telephones or door keys, Kona Village Resort may be your Shangri-La.

Secluded on the crystal-clear, emerald Kaluwai Bay on the Kona Coast of the Big Island of Hawaii, Kona Village offers an "idyllic lifestyle" in a "setting of untouched beauty" in a "private little Eden" — one brochure boasts with only the slightest exaggeration.

The resort definitely is remote. It has been built on the site of the historic, once-thriving village of Kaupulehu and is spread over 65 acres, separated from the rest of the world by an additional 12,000 acres. An attended entry gatehouse two miles away on Hawaii's Highway 19 insures its privacy.

Inside are 71 individual, thatched-roof bungalows, or "hales," styled after those found in old Hawaii and seven other South Seas islands.

THE HALES, primitive in design only, are spaced for privacy and stand on stilts beside the beach, by a lagoon or in tropical gardens. Some stand over flows of black but iridescent lava which spewed from the angry Mount Hualalai in 1801, chasing villagers from the coast, but sparing the white-sand beach by the bay.

Once here, you can do nothing, or everything.

You can lie on the immaculate beach, sway in oversized hammocks under coco palms or sip heady tropical fruit drinks in strategically placed outdoor bars. The Shipwreck Bar is set up in a sailboat which broke up in a storm.

If you want total seclusion and absolute peace, it's yours. Stroll down the beach and you'll hear nothing but the surf washing over lava rocks and the cries of sea birds.

THE EVERYTHING — a slight exaggeration on my part — includes swimming, both in the ocean and in a fresh-water pool, snorkeling, scuba diving, surfing, fishing, sailing and outrigger canoeing.

You can play tennis, volleyball and shuffleboard. You can pitch horseshoes, putt golf balls, and if you really needed to get away, you can weave baskets.

You can also take guided walks to view ancient petroglyph fields, shelter caves and 100 varieties of flora and fauna.

The food is, as it should be, a gourmet's delight. Breakfast and dinner are sit-down meals. Lunch is available at an outdoor buffet — pickled papaya, kiwi fruit halves and potato salad with shrimp — or out of a picnic box.

Twelve dinner menus with three entrees each are rotated daily and, as you'd expect, include prime rib, shrimp, mahimahi and filet mignon, but also roast duckling, lobster foo yung, curry of South Sea lobster, filet of beef stuffed with oysters and roast rack of venison.

DESSERTS guaranteed to be a dieter's undoing include baked Alaska, strawberry crepes, chilled coconut souffle and Kona coffee tarts.

Many of the resort's well-fed guests are repeaters, coming year after year. The average stay is five days.

Not surprising, it is a popular hideaway for honeymooners. Some couples come there to wed. The management provides ceremonies as elaborate or as simple as the couple desires. Vows can be exchanged indoors or out, in the gardens or by the sea, at sunrise or sunset.

On request, the resort will furnish the presiding official, witnesses, fresh flower leis, a photographer, wedding album, cake, champagne, music and wedding announcements featuring the honeymoon cottage in a line art drawing.

But, alas, paradise doesn't come cheap. It takes $110 a day for two to move into a hale in the garden and $125 a day for a hale by the ocean.

THE PRICE includes, however, three meals a day and use of all recreational equipment, excluding scuba gear. Tennis lessons and deep-sea fishing charters in pursuit of marlin and yellowfin tuna are extra, too.

There are special package rates for honeymooners and wedding arrangements.

If you can't pay the price, you might want to consider applying for work there. The resort closes Nov. 30 through Dec. 15 each year for maintenance and renovation and the employes go on vacation those two weeks. On the last two days of their vacation, they return as non-paying guests, hosted and served by the management.

About the lack of door keys and telephones: You can lock yourself in your hale, if you feel you must, and if you must telephone, one is available in the office.

For further information, write Kona Village Resort, Box 1299, Kaupulehu, Kona, Hawaii 96740, or their mainland travel representative in Los Angeles, John A. Tetley Co. Inc., 3075 Wilshire Blvd.

SAILING, surfing, sunning or just relaxing are the attractions at Kona Village Resort on the Big Island of Hawaii.

Triangle fare given renewal

Extension of Western Airlines' Alaska-Hawaii-California triangle fare through July 31, 1978 has been approved by the Civil Aeronautics Board.

The fare basically provides for a stopover in Hawaii for only $40 when flying round-trip between Anchorage and Los Angeles or Anchorage and San Francisco.

Other cities for which the fare is applicable, include Atlanta, Dallas, Denver, Houston, Las Vegas, Miami, Minneapolis, St. Paul, New Orleans, Oakland, Ontario, Phoenix, Portland, San Diego and Seattle-Tacoma.

The CAB extension of the triangle fare calls for a blackout period during the Christmas holidays — Dec. 8, 1977 through Jan. 5, 1978.

The trip must be completed in 120 days and applies to coach fares only.

Be penny-wise with car rental rates

Can an ordinary, trusting traveler telephone-shop for a rental car and actually locate the lowest-priced deal on the market?

Skeptics, maybe. Trusting types, no. After 16 phone calls trying to find the rock-bottom rate in Honolulu, I wound up with enough information to keep my hair curled for a week.

These days, of course, there are major and minor car rental firms operating out of most cities, many of them working through travel agents and transportation companies as well as their own sales organizations.

So when I called two travel agents, two airlines and Hertz Corp. asking, "What is the lowest-priced Hertz car in Honolulu?", I soon found myself sitting around with five answers to a question you might expect would have only one.

Moreover, the quotes I got ranged from $5 a day and 16 cents a mile to $20 to $22 a day with unlimited mileage.

THE NICE lady at AAA's Worldwide Travel and good old "Dave" at United goofed. They gave me comparatively high rates that Hertz says are not even on its Honolulu books.

I prodded the nice lady at Worldwide, and she did then find Hertz' $14.95 unlimited-mileage rate — along with an offer of a second and third day at $13.95 each, and four days or more at $12.95 each.

What she didn't find and what Hertz itself never mentioned was a $5-a-day, 16-cents-a-mile deal. That one was revealed only when I called Hawaiian Airlines. It was, their representative explained, a "special" and only for people who fly at least one leg of their trip with Hawaiian.

Well, not exactly, a Hertz executive said. Hawaiian promotes this rate, he confirmed, but anyone can buy or sell it. What he didn't know was how you arrange to hear about this rate if you don't call Hawaiian.

Then there's a weekly $112 unlimited mileage "lowest" Avis rate offered by Western Airlines, which you might prefer.

JUST WHEN you think you've nailed down all the essential details, they may very well do a disappearing act.

Seasonal adjustments are made, and "specials" zoom in and out. Obviously during such changeover periods it becomes particularly hard to "shop" rates and a whole lot easier to get caught in the cracks.

Would you believe you even have to ask the length of the week? Some companies have a six-day "weekly" rate, some have seven-day periods.

"Weekend" is another term open to peculiar definition. Some can start on Thursday and end late Monday. Others can be the more traditional Saturday-Sunday, and still others lots of combinations in between.

In Hawaii, some companies also offer an "inter-island" rate that allows you a package price even when you take out and turn in cars on each of two or more islands.

Virtually no one furnishes gas anymore, so at least one area of comparison has been eliminated. What's left includes figuring whether taking a car with time and mileage charges will come out cheaper than taking a car with a flat rate and unlimited-mileage charges.

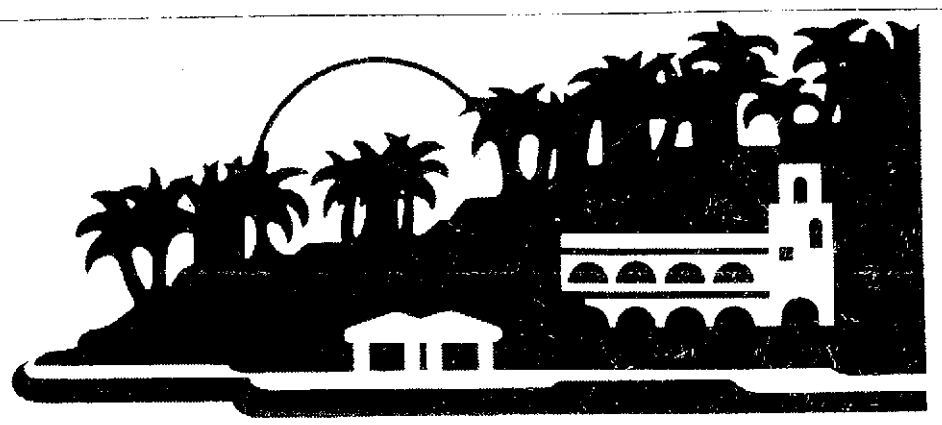

Hawaii's cheapest rental cars usually don't have air-conditioning and do have a stick shift. They're not likely to be smaller than a breadbox but, on the other hand, they generally are "subcompact" and not exactly roomy.

HITTING the road in Honolulu means shopping the car rental agencies for best price going.

It's tourist paradise in Aloha land

WAIKIKI OFFERS SUN AND SURF IN ABUNDANCE

stan delaplane

The beach at Waikiki

"What you say? I don' hear you." The big Hawaiian in a red aloha shirt cupped his hand to his ear.

In front of him a hundred new tourists ate roast pork under the coco palms. The Waikiki waves went hush-hush, and the night was warm as mother love.

"You got to say it like you MEAN it," said the Hawaiian. "Like, Al-LOH-ha!"

"Al-LOH-ha!" said the hundred tourists through mouthfuls of pig and poi. "Al-LOH-ha!"

These are the tours that brought 3.2 million tourists — (and $1.3 BILLION) — to the sugar islands last year. ("Only $416, 8 days including air fare from the West Coast. Flower lei greeting." Who can stay home?)

WHO MAKES these tours? "Mostly people in their fifties and sixties on their FIRST visit to Hawaii," says a tour director.

"Repeaters are rare. Not because they didn't like it. The second time, they know what they liked best and they do that part again."

I did it myself. It nearly wore me out. "Bags outside your door at 8 a.m." Bus to the volcano. Bus down to lunch at Kona. Plane to Maui. Dinner show. "Al-LOH-ha!" "Bags in the lobby at 8 a.m."

Let me tell you everybody adored it! There wasn't a sightseeing tour they didn't take. Not a morsel of roast pig got away.

And they saw EVERYTHING. If you can keep moving, you get more than your money's worth. Sounds a little plastic. But if you want to do the big thing for Mother, this is it.

From the 15th floor of the Royal Hawaiian tower, I was getting musical feedback from THREE beach groups. Red Shirt "Al-LOH-ha" beneath me.

"Now we gonna teach you to do da hula, jus' like in Honolulu."

THE ORIGINAL Royal Hawaiian — "the Pink Palace," a skyscraper once of SIX stories — was celebrating its 50th anniversary.

Up the beach at the Sheraton Waikiki (1,900 rooms) another hundred or so were eating pig and poi. Listening to the guitars play, "Beyond the reef ..."

Music pours through the elevators like coconut syrup.

"A Golden Week in Waikiki, $335!"

They put you in first-class hotels. Waikiki hotels are running 98.3 per cent full. They're filled with people whose bags are outside the door at 8 a.m. So a new group can move in.

IF YOU DO this on your own, the costs begin to eat you up. Top hotel rooms in Hawaii run $45. Half what you pay in European capitals or the Caribbean.

But dinners in the best restaurants are around, $45, too, with drinks and tips. Hotel breakfasts go $7 with ease.

The rummy maitai is $3. Beer is $1.95. And I paid 95 cents for a package of cigarettes.

Young surfers on the shorts get a small hotel room a couple of blocks OFF the beach. Many have kitchens. That's a real money saver.

The wall-to-wall beach hotels MUST leave access for the public. They're sometimes hard to find. And so narrow you have to go through sideways. ("You got a big opu, you nevah make it, brudda.")

But once on the beach, everything up to high tide mark is yours. And the warm Hawaiian sea belongs to everybody.

"Could a couple get by for a $1,000 for a week? We aren't night club types."

You want a small hotel with a kitchen on an outer island: Maui or Kaui. Hawaii Visitors Bureau, Honolulu, has a list of all hotels on all the islands.

Now two people can get a beach front condominium WITH kitchen, WITH rent car. One week for only $800, including air fare from the West Coast.

Learn to say "Al-LOH-ha!" And throw your shoes away.

A bargain in hotels

By LEE GARRICK
Ridder News Service

Any seasoned travel can tell you that San Francisco is a storied old city, reeking both charm and history, tempered by an increasing number of modern engineering marvels.

The Golden Gate Bridge, the Bay Area Rapid Transit System (BART) and the new Government Center near the tral itional financial district at Geary Avenue and Market Street attest to the city's slow transformation from a former Spanish outpost, to a 19th century boomtown and later to an international center of the shipping trade.

Likewise, the hotel business in San Francisco has changed with the times toward a modernism of recent years. Visitors who come by the thousands each year to this friendly city on the bay usually stay in one of the more modern, well-appointed (and unfortunately expensive) hotels.

Yet, a visitor who wishes to capture some "typical San Francisco" charm may best find it in a few less renowned hotels that don't carry such a stiff price tag.

I'M THINKING in particular of one hotel that has a placidity and atmosphere so homey that I can't resist booking in there each time I visit the city by the Golden Gate. I'm referring to the Hotel Beresford at 635 Sutter St., just at the foot of historic Knob Hill.

The Beresford holds for the visitor all of the charm of an inexpensive European pension, having just enough amenities to keep its rates reasonable (usually $22 to $28 a night for a room with two large double beds).

Close at hand to the seven-story Beresford are the attractions of Sutter Street with its shops, boutiques, art galleries and restaurants, and the Powell Street cable car provides ready access to Chinatown, Fisherman's Wharf, the Cannery and Ghirardelli Square.

Perhaps the best feature at the hotel is the White Horse Tavern located on the ground floor. A meticulous recreation of the tavern established in 1742 and bearing the same name in Edinburgh, Scotland, the White Horse with its cozy little bar is a great place to mingle.

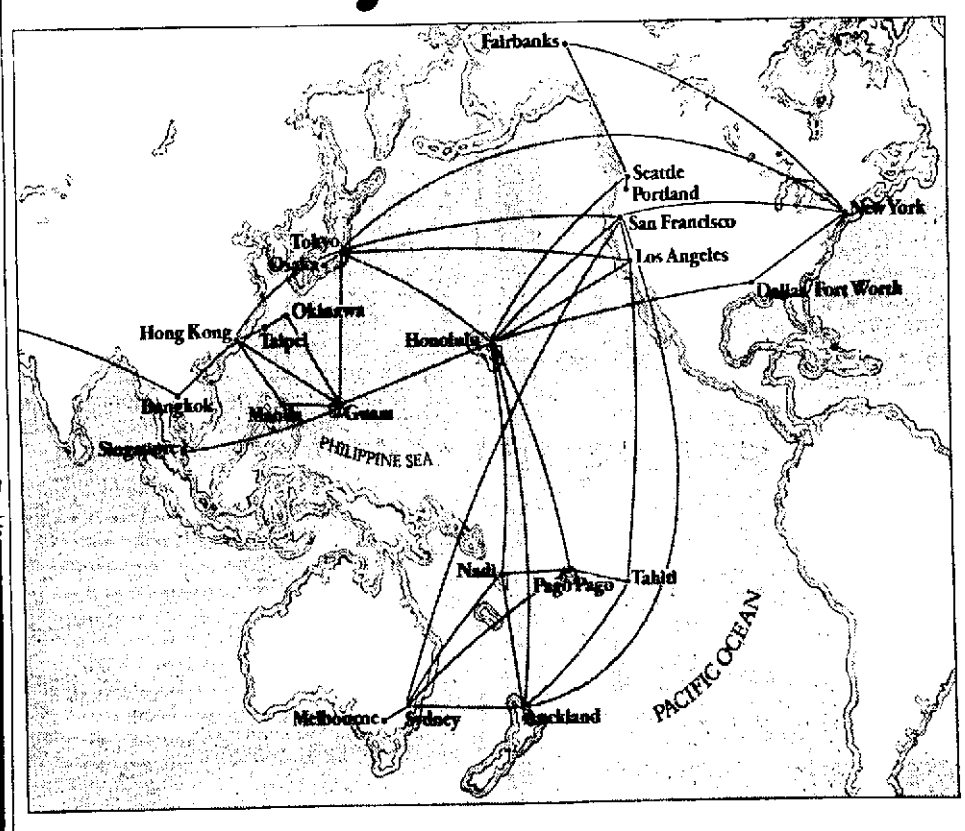

The White Horse's duplication of its forebear is complete even unto the antique bed-warmer and an ancient crossbow hung over the fireplace which, actually works. Perhaps as a concession to modern energy sources, however, the fireplace employs a gas flame and noncombustible logs.

DEAR ABBY: Our son is 13 years old and a freshman in high school. A 12-year-old junior high girl will have a baby next June, and our son will be that baby's father.

Thank God he had the courage to bring the little girl to us and tell us. The girl's parents both work, drink and run around while the child stays home days (and many nights) alone, with no supervision whatsoever.

We went to the girl's parents, and they told us they would have our boy jailed for statutory rape if we didn't give them $1,000 in cash. My husband said he wouldn't get involved with blackmail. Then they suggested the kids get married in a state that allows kids their age to marry with parental consent. We refused.

We think it would be better for all concerned if the girl had her baby and gave it up for adoption. Are we doing right in refusing to consent to this marriage? — OHIO PARENTS

DEAR PARENTS: In my opinion, yes. The baby will be much better off in an adoptive home with parents who really want a child. You need a lawyer to acquaint you with your son's rights and obligations.

It may be a bit late to tell you that your son's education on "the birds and bees" must have been sadly neglected. But perhaps this will serve to warn other parents that this CAN and DOES occur.

DEAR ABBY: I am a 32-year-old man who is self-supporting, and although I didn't graduate from college, I did go for two years. I know that my spelling and grammar are far from perfect, but I'm not exactly illiterate.

My problem is my mother. She taught school before she was married, and now live in a distant state. When I write to her, she returns my letters with all the errors in spelling and grammar "corrected" with a red pencil!

At first I just ignored it, but I have had enough. Should I write to her and ask her to please quit correcting my letters? Or should I just quit writing?

My wife says, "Skip it. Your mother is probably getting senile."

Senile at 58? — BUGGED

DEAR BUGGED: It's doubtful. Why not look at it this way: Your mother is really doing you a favor by pointing out your mistakes. But if you're that bugged, level with her. (Old school teachers never die, they just lose their class.)

DEAR ABBY: My grandmother is the sweetest woman who ever lived. She had a stroke a couple of years ago and is quite old now. She is always talking about dying. When I am with her she tells me to be sure that Aunt G gets this and that Uncle B doesn't get anything. And she has told me repeatedly that she wants me to have her diamond brooch, her good dishes and silver, and she wants my husband to have Grandpa's gold watch. I know I am her favorite granddaughter, and she has told me repeatedly what she wants me to have.

Since her dying is inevitable, do I continue to tell her not to talk about it? Or should I be realistic and say, "Gram, I think you ought to write that down"? I don't want to appear grabby. — SPEECHLESS

DEAR SPEECHLESS: There's nothing "grabby" in suggesting that she "write it down." That's the only way she can be sure that her wishes will be carried out after she is.

L.A. courtrooms closed in spite of judicial backlog

By AL MURRELL
Staff Writer

There are more than 48,000 civil lawsuits awaiting trial in Los Angeles Superior Court, and that judicial logjam is going to continue because of the recent closure of eight courtrooms, say court officials.

The superior court's executive committee ordered eight civil trial departments across the county shut down this month in an attempt to operate within the budget established by the county board of supervisors.

Despite operating more departments than were authorized by the supervisors, and settling or trying some 40,000 cases, the number of civil cases awaiting trial has increased more than 7,300 in the last year.

So when the board refused to authorize the additional courtrooms, the committee was forced to close four in the Central District in downtown Los Angeles and one each in Long Beach, Torrance, Norwalk and Pasadena. Seven of the eight judicial officers — assigned judges and commissioners — who presided in the courts were dismissed.

Long Beach Judge George Francis, who orginally was one of the assigned judges scheduled to be dismissed, was allowed to stay at full salary after he volunteered to work for free.

But, because his department was "officially closed," his support personnel were transferred to other departments and he was forced to recruit volunteers to help him with the civil settlement conferences he conducts in chambers.

Superior Court Executive Officer Frank Zolin said during a recent interview the closures will save between $210,000 and $250,000 and that the court will finish the fiscal year ending June 30 between $60,000 and $75,000 over its $29 million budget.

"If we had been able to implement the closures Jan. 10, as we had hoped, we would have broken even," Zolin said.

He said the closures definitely are "going to accelerate the growth of the civil backlog . . . but there was nothing else we could do."

While the figures vary from district to district, the average civil lawsuit in superior court currently takes between three and 3½ years from the time it is filed until it gets to trial. Any suit not tried within five years of the filing date is dismissed unless the plaintiffs can show good cause to prevent it.

Francis Cholko, director of administrative services for the superior court, estimated the court closures "could conceivably increase the backlog by a couple of months between now and July 1."

County Supervisor James Hayes, who is chairman of the board's Courts Committee, said he will seek the restoration of the eight closed departments, plus any additional judges needed at the time, during the discussions of the 1977-78 budget, which is scheduled to go into effect July 1.

Both Zolin and Cholko said the closures will not increase the backlog of criminal cases "because criminal is given priority over civil." A criminal defendant has the right to be tried within 60 days of the date he is arraigned in Superior Court.

As of Dec. 31, 1976, there were 5,524 felony criminal cases pending trial in Superior Court, which was eight less than the December 1975 total.

In several of the court districts, including central and Van Nuys, criminal cases are continued to the full 60-day speedy trial deadline before they are sent to a trial court. And many times, they must be transferred to a civil department for trial to avoid having the charges dismissed. The situation in

Colleagues had lot of time for 'Whip'

By KRIS SHERMAN
Staff Writer

Del Whipple's fellow employes believe in taking care of their own.

So when Whipple, a 44-year-old plumber for the Lakewood Public Works Department, underwent open heart surgery last December, his colleagues decided to pitch in and help the Whipple family.

As it turned out, the most valuable thing they could give their friend and co-worker — who had exhausted all of his accumulated sick leave and vacation days and was ineligible for the city's new long-term disability plan — was their time.

And, with the blessing of the city council, they did just that last week through a unique plan that allowed them to donate unused vacation days to Whipple's account.

"ALL THE GUYS started asking, 'We've got enough days, why can't we donate them to Whip?' " said plumber's assistant Joe Narvaez.

"Sam (electrician Sam Crowell) sort of spearheaded the thing, and pretty soon everybody was talking to Gus (maintenance supervisor Robert 'Gus' Gesterling) about it, and he took our requests topside.

"The requests went through all the channels, the public works director (Alex Beanum), the personnel director (Bruce Penner) and the city administrator (Howard Chambers), and the council was asked to approve the transfer of days."

The council approved the unusual request last Tuesday by unanimous adoption of a resolution specifically pertaining to Whipple's case.

Following the vote, Mayor Jo Bennitt told the audience, "I'm extremely proud of our employes. Through their action, they have shown genuine compassion and concern for their fellow employe."

Narvaez said the workers' only problem now was that Whipple came back to work two weeks earlier than was planned, and he needed only six days added to his account. They were prepared to give much more.

"In fact," he said, "so many guys wanted to donate days that they wound up donating like four hours apiece so everybody could be a part of it.

"We wanted to put another 30 days on account for Whip — in case he needed them or so he could maybe have a vacation — but we weren't sure the council would go for that, so we settled for just giving him enough days to make up for the pay he would have lost," Narvaez explained.

WHIPPLE, who said he feels fine and is glad to be back at work, praised his friends for their action but added that he was not surprised by it.

"It's not a surprise, because they're a good bunch of boys, and we take care of our guys here, we always have," he explained. "While I was in the hospital, they took up a collection and gave us about $200 to help with the medical bills."

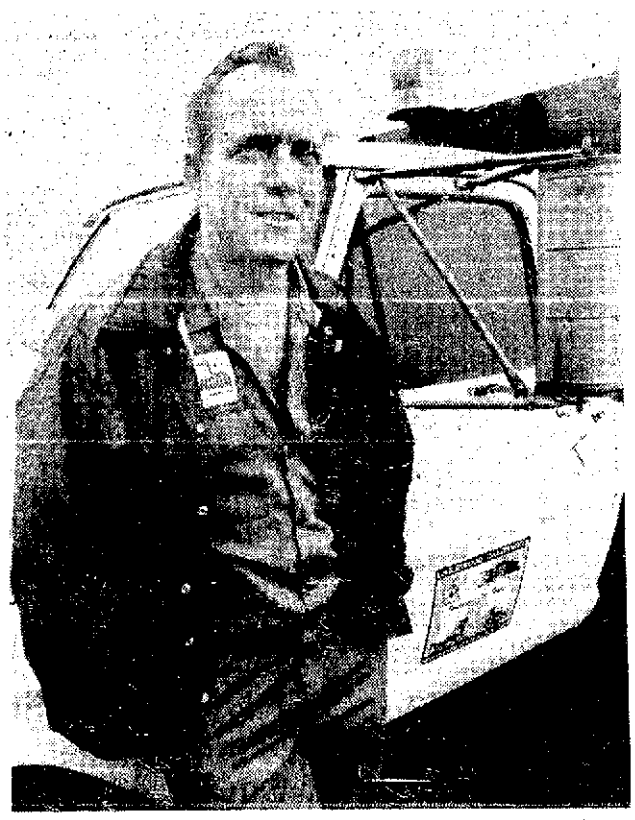

Though Whipple's medical bills mounted to about $21,000 during his hospitalization at St. Mary Medical Center from Nov. 14 to Dec. 15 and subsequent recovery, he said his health insurance paid all but $400.

Whipple said he suffered a heart attack Nov. 14 and underwent a triple-bypass operation Dec. 9. "The doctor said I did pretty well when I took my treadmill (test) about a month after the operation," the plumber added. "He was bragging about my progress to all of the nurses."

Whipple, a 13-year employe of the public works department, is married and has three children.

But according to his colleagues, the Whipple family numbers many more than five.

"It's a small city, so maybe it's easier to help someone here," said Narvaez. "Besides that, everybody likes Whip."

Three seek seat on L.B. poverty board

By JOE SEGURA
Staff Writer

Three central area community workers are hoping their experience will help get them elected Monday to one of two grass roots seats on Long Beach's new Community Action Agency, an advisory board on city poverty programs.

One of the candidates — Jody Casanovas, Emma Conley and Sandra Goulsby — will be selected by residents of the area during a special 3-8 p.m. election at the Central Long Beach Facilities Center, 1133 Rhea St.

Mrs. Conley, a mother of three and resident of Long Beach for 22 years, has been a teacher for 16 years in preschool and high schools, taught at the Head Start program at the Community Improvement League, received the American Legion Award in 1969, served as vice president of the Long Beach Legal Aid Foundation and is an active member of the local chapter of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People.

Board candidate raps school budget increase

By BOB HOUSER
Political Editor

Long Beach school board candidate Elliott J. Dixon charged Saturday that a $23-million school budget increase over the last three years "went into increased administrative costs . . . not for a substantial increase in the quality of education."

Dixon said the 32.33 per cent increase from $72 million to $95 million occurred while enrollment went down 3.42 per cent; the number of teachers and pupil service employes went down while the number of administrative employes went up, and administrative salaries went up 18.4 per cent while the number of pupil service employes went down 17.3 per cent.

Of the 42 unified districts in Los Angeles County, Long Beach ranks second highest in cost of contracted services, Dixon said, and second lowest in obtaining books and other educational materials.

Dixon also was critical of the means of access to board meetings, which he said should be held at night.

For permission to address a Monday board meeting, Dixon said, one must file a statement including name, address, telephone, name of the group represented, statement of

Explosion occurs when spark ignites gas mixture

Auto batteries' 'charge' can blind

By JANICE NELSON
Staff Writer

Several years ago, Tom Williams of Lawndale heard a noise beneath the hood of his Plymouth Road Runner. He pulled over, lifted the hood and peered in, his cigarette dangling precariously over the auto's battery.

Blam!

The cigarette had ignited a volatile mixture of hydrogen and oxygen gases that are released when a battery is charging.

A year and a half ago, Walt Dethlefs — a tow truck driver for City Tow Service — was using jumper cables to start a Volkswagen that had a dead battery. A spark ignited the gases emitted from the battery, resulting in an explosion that splashed sulfuric acid in his eyes and on his face and clothes.

Quick action averted blindness in his case, but others have not been so lucky.

Although such explosions are infrequent, the injuries they cause are often severe.

Among incidents of eye damage reported by the National Society for the Prevention of Blindness were the loss of sight by a man who was struck in the eye by a flying battery cap; a woman who suffered corneal laceration from flying fragments, and a man who required emergency surgery to repair retinal damage.

Joe Lucero, assistant manager of City Tow Service, warned that older Volkswagen batteries can be hazardous because of their location.

Situated beneath the rear passenger seat, the battery can explode if the cushion springs touch both positive and negative terminals simultaneously, he said.

"I've heard of numerous occasions when somebody puts an old battery in a VW without placing the protective cover over it, and a passenger gets in the back seat. The springs touch both terminals, and bongo! the battery blows up," he said.

He pointed out that somewhere along the line the protective cover which was designed to insulate the battery from the coils "gets tossed," creating this hazardous situation.

Bernard Krause, chief mechanic at Circle Motors, a Volkswagen dealership, disputed Lucero's contention.

"The only time I ever had a battery explode in my face was in 1963 — and that was due to my own stupidity.

"I disconnected the hot lead (the jumper cable from the positive charge terminal) before disconnecting the ground," creating a spark, he said. He added that he was not injured.

Volkswagens have had batteries under the rear seat since 1934, said the 20-year veteran Volk-

People Talk

F.C. Anderson

SOME ORANGES have it made. They star in still life water colors, are featured in fruit cocktails, swim in vodka screwdrivers, triple up to bring prosperity to players of slot machines. They luxuriate in bowls of sterling silver, hobnobbing with snooty, rosy-cheeked apples and high-faluting golden pears.

Not so the robust, thick-skinned Sunkist orange that made the irreparable error of falling into my hands at Memorial Hospital. Oblivious to the orange's beauty of form and quivering navel, indifferent to its dreams and sensitivity, I shot the orange full of holes.

It was justifiable orangecide. There isn't a court in the country that would convict me, for I was aided and abetted by Edith Fagan, L.V.N., a certified instructor in the use of syringes, needles and insulin injections.

The orange was a stand-in for my arms and legs and improbable areas of my anatomy while I learned to load and jab insulin in the accepted manner. Unlike me, the orange never cried "Ouch!" It just lay there silently on the bedside tray and absorbed all the sodium chloride solution I sent its way.

After heavy practice with the orange I was permitted — under Nurse Fagan's supervision — to administer my own insulin shots. Naturally, I klutzed it up by failing to swab the target area with alcohol or by penetrating the fatty skin with a slow push rather than a quick jab. Had I been shooting on a Marine firing range, the gunnery sergeant would have been waving me down with "Maggie's Drawers," that bane that dogs the trigger fingers of misfit military marksmen everywhere.

But Nurse Fagan's patience and fortitude proved more than equal to my maladministrations. Under her sterling guidance I finally soloed, attaining a degree of competence which permitted my release from the hospital without being a menace to myself or to any oranges unlucky enough to cross my path.

Edith Fagan, Licensed Vocational Nurse, is a column in herself. She began her nursing career a few years ago while in her late 40s, and her preparation for it wasn't easy. But then, nothing worthwhile ever is easy.

In 1944, Edith Fagan spent a semester at Long Beach City College. Then she married, raised a family and did the usual housewifely things that make for a happy home. Through those years, in the back of her mind, was the idea that she'd like to carve out a career for herself in the medical field.

But going back to the classroom and competing with students 20 and 30 years younger was a disquieting thought.

"Could I hack it? Is my brain too rusty after all these years? Am I setting an unattainable goal for myself?"

These were some of the questions she asked herself. She decided the only way to get any answers was to enroll in the Licensed Vocational Nursing program at City College and see what happened.

She burned lots of midnight oil. Many mornings she watched the dawn break, bleary eyed with reading and home work. It was tough, demanding mental discipline and careful budgeting of her time. It's difficult to combine college and homemaking, but Edith Fagan managed. She had hold of a dream and she wouldn't let go.

The Edith Fagan story is not unique, and I think we're a better society for it. More and more women are realizing their potential, expanding their horizons, and we are the gainers.

If Edith Fagan hadn't persevered in her commitment to nursing, I might never have learned to inject an orange with sodium chloride solution. I might not have had several days of good conversation and sunlight on the dreariest and rainiest of days.

There are times when it seems the world is at the mercy of the hurters, the despoilers and the takers. It's a glum thought, a cheerless and bleak prospect. Then we recognize that there is hope after all, for the healers are among us, doing their daily tasks and blessing our lives with good works.

Edith Fagan is one of the healers, someone who cares about people and works to make them feel better. Nurses aren't overpaid; they don't enter the profession because of the money. They're nurses because they care, because humanity needs them, because they have something of value to give — concern, compassion and care.

When you get blue and think the world has gone to pot, think of the healers, the teachers, the doers of charity, the unsung who work with the deaf, the blind and the lame. Think of them and feel better, for they are part of you — the best part.

Here's to Edith Fagan, L.V.N. — wife, mother, nurse and friend. I'd give her an orange in appreciation, but it's too bruised to travel.

There are more than 48,000 civil lawsuits awaiting trial in Los Angeles Superior Court, and that judicial logjam is going to continue because of the recent closure of eight courtrooms, say court officials.

The superior court's executive committee ordered eight civil trial departments across the county shut down this month in an attempt to operate within the budget established by the county board of supervisors.

Despite operating more departments than were authorized by the supervisors, and settling or trying some 40,000 cases, the number of civil cases awaiting trial has increased more than 7,300 in the last year.

So when the board refused to authorize the additional courtrooms, the committee was forced to close four in the Central District in downtown Los Angeles and one each in Long Beach, Torrance, Norwalk and Pasadena. Seven of the eight judicial officers — assigned judges and commissioners — who presided in the courts were dismissed.

Long Beach Judge George Francis, who orginally was one of the assigned judges scheduled to be dismissed, was allowed to stay at full salary after he volunteered to work for free.

But, because his department was "officially closed," his support personnel were transferred to other departments and he was forced to recruit volunteers to help him with the civil settlement conferences he conducts in chambers.

Superior Court Executive Officer Frank Zolin said during a recent interview the closures will save between $210,000 and $250,000 and that the court will finish the fiscal year ending June 30 between $60,000 and $75,000 over its $29 million budget.

"If we had been able to implement the closures Jan. 10, as we had hoped, we would have broken even," Zolin said.

He said the closures definitely are "going to accelerate the growth of the civil backlog . . . but there was nothing else we could do."

While the figures vary from district to district, the average civil lawsuit in superior court currently takes between three and 3½ years from the time it is filed until it gets to trial. Any suit not tried within five years of the filing date is dismissed unless the plaintiffs can show good cause to prevent it.

Francis Cholko, director of administrative services for the superior court, estimated the court closures "could conceivably increase the backlog by a couple of months between now and July 1."

County Supervisor James Hayes, who is chairman of the board's Courts Committee, said he will seek the restoration of the eight closed departments, plus any additional judges needed at the time, during the discussions of the 1977-78 budget, which is scheduled to go into effect July 1.

Both Zolin and Cholko said the closures will not increase the backlog of criminal cases "because criminal is given priority over civil." A criminal defendant has the right to be tried within 60 days of the date he is arraigned in Superior Court.

As of Dec. 31, 1976, there were 5,524 felony criminal cases pending trial in Superior Court, which was eight less than the December 1975 total.

In several of the court districts, including central and Van Nuys, criminal cases are continued to the full 60-day speedy trial deadline before they are sent to a trial court. And many times, they must be transferred to a civil department for trial to avoid having the charges dismissed. The situation in

Colleagues had lot of time for 'Whip'

Del Whipple's fellow employes believe in taking care of their own.

So when Whipple, a 44-year-old plumber for the Lakewood Public Works Department, underwent open heart surgery last December, his colleagues decided to pitch in and help the Whipple family.

As it turned out, the most valuable thing they could give their friend and co-worker — who had exhausted all of his accumulated sick leave and vacation days and was ineligible for the city's new long-term disability plan — was their time.

And, with the blessing of the city council, they did just that last week through a unique plan that allowed them to donate unused vacation days to Whipple's account.

"ALL THE GUYS started asking, 'We've got enough days, why can't we donate them to Whip?'," said plumber's assistant Joe Narvaez.

"Sam (electrician Sam Crowell) sort of spearheaded the thing, and pretty soon everybody was talking to Gus (maintenance supervisor Robert 'Gus' Gesterling) about it, and he took our requests topside.

"The requests went through all the channels, the public works director (Alex Beanum), the personnel director (Bruce Penner) and the city administrator (Howard Chambers), and the council was asked to approve the transfer of days."

The council approved the unusual request last Tuesday by unanimous adoption of a resolution specifically pertaining to Whipple's case.

Following the vote, Mayor Jo Bennitt told the audience, "I'm extremely proud of our employes. Through their action, they have shown genuine compassion and concern for their fellow employe."

Narvaez said the workers' only problem now was that Whipple came back to work two weeks earlier than was planned, and he needed only six days added to his account. They were prepared to give much more.

"In fact," he said, "so many guys wanted to donate days that they wound up donating like four hours apiece so everybody could be a part of it.

"We wanted to put another 30 days on account for Whip — in case he needed them or so he could maybe have a vacation — but we weren't sure the council would go for that, so we settled for just giving him enough days to make up for the pay he would have lost," Narvaez explained.

WHIPPLE, who said he feels fine and is glad to be back at work, praised his friends for their action but added that he was not surprised by it.

"It's not a surprise, because they're a good bunch of boys, and we take care of our guys here, we always have," he explained. "While I was in the hospital, they took up a collection and gave us about $200 to help with the medical bills."

Though Whipple's medical bills mounted to about $21,000 during his hospitalization at St. Mary Medical Center from Nov. 14 to Dec. 15 and subsequent recovery, he said his health insurance paid all but $400.

Whipple said he suffered a heart attack Nov. 14 and underwent a triple-bypass operation Dec. 9. "The doctor said I did pretty well when I took my treadmill (test) about a month after the operation," the plumber added. "He was bragging about my progress to all of the nurses."

Whipple, a 13-year employe of the public works department, is married and has three children.

But according to his colleagues, the Whipple family numbers many more than five.

"It's a small city, so maybe it's easier to help someone here," said Narvaez. "Besides that, everybody likes Whip."

Three seek seat on L.B. poverty board

By JOE SEGURA
Staff Writer

Three central area community workers are hoping their experience will help get them elected Monday to one of two grass roots seats on Long Beach's new Community Action Agency, an advisory board on city poverty programs.

One of the candidates — Jody Casanovas, Emma Conley and Sandra Goulsby — will be selected by residents of the area during a special 3-8 p.m. election at the Central Long Beach Facilities Center, 1133 Rhea St.

Mrs. Conley, a mother of three and resident of Long Beach for 22 years, has been a teacher for 16 years in preschool and high schools, taught at the Head Start program at the Community Improvement League, received the American Legion Award in 1969, served as vice president of the Long Beach Legal Aid Foundation and is an active member of the local chapter of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People.

Board candidate raps school budget increase

By BOB HOUSER
Political Editor

Long Beach school board candidate Elliott J. Dixon charged Saturday that a $23-million school budget increase over the last three years "went into increased administrative costs . . . not for a substantial increase in the quality of education."

Dixon said the 32.33 per cent increase from $72 million to $95 million occurred while enrollment went down 3.42 per cent; the number of teachers and pupil service employes went down while the number of administrative employes went up, and administrative salaries went up 18.4 per cent while the number of pupil service employes went down 17.3 per cent.

Of the 42 unified districts in Los Angeles County, Long Beach ranks second highest in cost of contracted services, Dixon said, and second lowest in obtaining books and other educational materials.

Dixon also was critical of the means of access to board meetings, which he said should be held at night.

For permission to address a Monday board meeting, Dixon said, one must file a statement including name, address, telephone, name of the group represented, statement of

Explosion occurs when spark ignites gas mixture

Auto batteries' 'charge' can blind

By JANICE NELSON
Staff Writer

Several years ago, Tom Williams of Lawndale heard a noise beneath the hood of his Plymouth Road Runner. He pulled over, lifted the hood and peered in, his cigarette dangling precariously over the auto's battery.

Blam!

The cigarette had ignited a volatile mixture of hydrogen and oxygen gases that are released when a battery is charging.

A year and a half ago, Walt Dethlefs — a tow truck driver for City Tow Service — was using jumper cables to start a Volkswagen that had a dead battery. A spark ignited the gases emitted from the battery, resulting in an explosion that splashed sulfuric acid in his eyes and on his face and clothes.

Quick action averted blindness in his case, but others have not been so lucky.

Although such explosions are infrequent, the injuries they cause are often severe.

Among incidents of eye damage reported by the National Society for the Prevention of Blindness were the loss of sight by a man who was struck in the eye by a flying battery cap; a woman who suffered corneal laceration from flying fragments, and a man who required emergency surgery to repair retinal damage.

Joe Lucero, assistant manager of City Tow Service, warned that older Volkswagen batteries can be hazardous because of their location.

Situated beneath the rear passenger seat, the battery can explode if the cushion springs touch both positive and negative terminals simultaneously, he said.

"I've heard of numerous occasions when somebody puts an old battery in a VW without placing the protective cover over it, and a passenger gets in the back seat. The springs touch both terminals, and bongo! the battery blows up," he said.

He pointed out that somewhere along the line the protective cover which was designed to insulate the battery from the coils "gets tossed," creating this hazardous situation.

Bernard Krause, chief mechanic at Circle Motors, a Volkswagen dealership, disputed Lucero's contention.

"The only time I ever had a battery explode in my face was in 1963 — and that was due to my own stupidity.

"I disconnected the hot lead (the jumper cable from the positive charge terminal) before disconnecting the ground," creating a spark, he said. He added that he was not injured.

Volkswagens have had batteries under the rear seat since 1934, said the 20-year veteran Volk-

SOME ORANGES have it made. They star in still life water colors, are featured in fruit cocktails, swim in vodka screwdrivers, triple up to bring prosperity to players of slot machines. They luxuriate in bowls of sterling silver, hobnobbing with snooty, rosy-cheeked apples and high-faluting golden pears.

Not so the robust, thick-skinned Sunkist orange that made the irreparable error of falling into my hands at Memorial Hospital. Oblivious to the orange's beauty of form and quivering navel, indifferent to its dreams and sensitivity, I shot the orange full of holes.

It was justifiable orangecide. There isn't a court in the country that would convict me, for I was aided and abetted by Edith Fagan, L.V.N., a certified instructor in the use of syringes, needles and insulin injections.

The orange was a stand-in for my arms and legs and improbable areas of my anatomy while I learned to load and jab insulin in the accepted manner. Unlike me, the orange never cried "Ouch!" It just lay there silently on the bedside tray and absorbed all the sodium chloride solution I sent its way.

After heavy practice with the orange I was permitted — under Nurse Fagan's supervision — to administer my own insulin shots. Naturally, I klutzed it up by failing to swab the target area with alcohol or by penetrating the fatty skin with a slow push rather than a quick jab. Had I been shooting on a Marine firing range, the gunnery sergeant would have been waving me down with "Maggie's Drawers," that bane that dogs the trigger fingers of misfit military marksmen everywhere.

But Nurse Fagan's patience and fortitude proved more than equal to my maladministrations. Under her sterling guidance I finally soloed, attaining a degree of competence which permitted my release from the hospital without being a menace to myself or to any oranges unlucky enough to cross my path.

Edith Fagan, Licensed Vocational Nurse, is a column in herself. She began her nursing career a few years ago while in her late 40s, and her preparation for it wasn't easy. But then, nothing worthwhile ever is easy.

In 1944, Edith Fagan spent a semester at Long Beach City College. Then she married, raised a family and did the usual housewifely things that make for a happy home. Through those years, in the back of her mind, was the idea that she'd like to carve out a career for herself in the medical field.

But going back to the classroom and competing with students 20 and 30 years younger was a disquieting thought.

"Could I hack it? Is my brain too rusty after all these years? Am I setting an unattainable goal for myself?"

These were some of the questions she asked herself. She decided the only way to get any answers was to enroll in the Licensed Vocational Nursing program at City College and see what happened.

She burned lots of midnight oil. Many mornings she watched the dawn break, bleary eyed with reading and home work. It was tough, demanding mental discipline and careful budgeting of her time. It's difficult to combine college and homemaking, but Edith Fagan managed. She had hold of a dream and she wouldn't let go.

The Edith Fagan story is not unique, and I think we're a better society for it. More and more women are realizing their potential, expanding their horizons, and we are the gainers.

If Edith Fagan hadn't persevered in her commitment to nursing, I might never have learned to inject an orange with sodium chloride solution. I might not have had several days of good conversation and sunlight on the dreariest and rainiest of days.

There are times when it seems the world is at the mercy of the hurters, the despoilers and the takers. It's a glum thought, a cheerless and bleak prospect. Then we recognize that there is hope after all, for the healers are among us, doing their daily tasks and blessing our lives with good works.

Edith Fagan is one of the healers, someone who cares about people and works to make them feel better. Nurses aren't overpaid; they don't enter the profession because of the money. They're nurses because they care, because humanity needs them, because they have something of value to give — concern, compassion and care.

When you get blue and think the world has gone to pot, think of the healers, the teachers, the doers of charity, the unsung who work with the deaf, the blind and the lame. Think of them and feel better, for they are part of you — the best part.

Here's to Edith Fagan, L.V.N. — wife, mother, nurse and friend. I'd give her an orange in appreciation, but it's too bruised to travel.

Fifth or Fief District?

When we recommended against election of City Council members by district, one of our concerns was that individual members might start looking at their districts as fiefdoms.

Based on Councilman Ernie Kell's actions on the application of Wilbur Lorbeer to develop a 1.3-acre vacant lot at the northeast corner of his Heartwell Park Golf Course lease, we wonder if Kell might be accepting the mantle of feudal lord.

Kell has been adamant against any development of the parcel, despite the fact that it is completely isolated from any park land, is immediately adjacent to two busy thoroughfares and is across the street from a shopping center.

THE LOT WAS LEFT undeveloped originally in order to see if more parking would be needed at the golf course. It has not been needed.

Kell appears to be running the show, apparently because the golf course is in his Fifth District — although it certainly is a citywide facility.

In 1961, the City of Long Beach decided the section of Heartwell Park south of Carson Street and immediately west of Los Coyotes Diagonal would be a good site for a three-par, 18-hole, night-lighted golf course. The city did not want to spend any money on the project, so put it out to bid.

Three bids were received, and Lorbeer and two partners were successful in winning the lease. They developed the golf course and built the clubhouse. Since then, Lorbeer has become the sole lessee. He has about $250,000 invested in the course facilities.

LARGELY BECAUSE of inflation, costs have increased and Lorbeer has lost about $5,000 each of the past two years. He has sought a reduction in his rent to the city and permission to develop some revenue-producing recreational activity on the 1.3-acre vacant lot — on which he has been paying rent and taxes for about 15 years. He has proposed to build eight to 12 racquetball courts on this lot.

Kell opposes any "commercial" development and contends lowering Lorbeer's rent would put him below the price offered by the other original bids. Our information from the city is that this is incorrect — although the point seems irrelevant, inasmuch as 15 years have passed and the economic situation has changed dramatically in that time.

Rent on leases, like taxes, should be adjusted up or down, as circumstances dictate. However, as most taxpayers know, "down," when referring to taxes or fees, doesn't seem to be a part of any politician's vocabulary.

Lorbeer still would be paying well above the market rates for similar facilities leased by government agencies.

The City Council asked the Park and Recreation commissions for their recommendations. The Recreation Commission voted to recommend approval of the development, so did the Municipal Golf Commission. The Park Commission, which has a policy of opposing any commercial development on land originally intended for park use, recommended against it.

Philosophically, the Park Commission attitude is generally sound, but it seems a head-in-the-clouds attitude in this specific case, considering that everything already is developed in the area except for the 1.3 acres which lies between Carson Street and the driving range, with Los Coyotes Diagonal on the east end and the golf-course parking lot on the west end.

LAST TUESDAY, the City Council's finance committee, of which Kell is chairman, voted to recommend to the full City Council that no further "commercial" development be allowed. With Kell indicating that this was in his district and he therefore knew best what was needed there, the council concurred. In addition, however, the council asked the city manager and city attorney to "come back with some recommendation on an appropriate lease, new bidding, or whatever would be necessary in order to see that we continue to have a golf course there."

Possibly the manager and attorney can bring in some new ideas, but we certainly question Kell's notion that he knows best because the course is in his district. The Heartwell Park Golf Course is not a Fifth District project. It is used by all residents of Long Beach and adjacent areas.

LORBEER DOES NOT pay rent and taxes just to the Fifth District. He pays them to the city. He says he has paid more than $1 million so far on his lease. In addition, he estimates he has paid more than $55,000 in taxes to Long Beach Unified School District.

We would hope the City Council reconsiders its stand of last Tuesday and decides that some recreational development that provides income to the lessee is reasonable on this isolated 1.3 acres. The alternative appears to be nine more years of a vacant lot at the corner of Carson Street and Los Coyotes Diagonal.

Restoring government morality

WASHINGTON — When Jimmy Carter was running for president, he lamented that America had been disgraced by government policies unworthy of her people. He would change these policies, he promised, and he would never do anything that would shame us.

He hadn't been in the White House long before he began taking several small steps to place morality above convenience, above hypocrisy. He condemned the abuse of human rights around the world from Rhodesia to South Korea.

He protested repeatedly the suppression of basic freedoms in the Soviet Union — the unmentionable corpse in the closet during the Nixon-Kissinger-Ford era. And lest these protests be thought empty formalities, he dramatized them by going out of his way to show respect for the great Russian spokesmen for freedom and decency. A personal letter was sent to Andrei Sakharov; the word went out that Alexsandr Solzhenitsyn and Vladimir Bukovsky will be welcome at Jimmy Carter's White House.

From these simple acts, a ripple of hope has started to spread the world over among oppressed people who keep alive a yearning for freedom. It is a hope that springs not from any expectation that we will liberate them, but from the knowledge that we are aware they exist, that we honor their struggle and that the great human tide is with them.

Consistent with this, President Carter seems determined to keep the FBI within the law and to keep the CIA away from covert activities. Murder, burglary, bribery, extortion, election rigging — all are out. Any other covert activity will require a written authorization with his signature on it, where it can be read by history and the special prosecutor.

Because of these beginnings of a policy that reconciles our immediate interests with our larger moral heritage, sophisticates and pragmatists of various persuasions have begun to lampoon Carter as a Boy Scout and a threat to international harmony (or at least to our automobile bumpers made of Rhodesian chrome).

In my own opinion, Carter is not at all naive. His policy not only is right, but it is also the best practical course. We have followed the pragmatists too far, too long.

It is bad enough that we stood mute before foreign despotism; it is intolerable that from refusing to see evil in front of our noses, we went on to practice it ourselves. We have made no permanent gains, and we have lost what was once our greatest strength. Our reputation for decency, once the beacon of the world, is now everywhere in tatters, and we are looked at as little better than the communists.

And an inevitable by-product haunts us. One by one, the schemes we designed for others, in competition with the Soviet KGB, have been turned against our own people and institutions.

THIS INSIDIOUS, corrosive process can be seen in embryo in the testimony given by the incomparable E. Howard Hunt as a prosecution witness in the trial of the White House plumbers for breaking into the office of Daniel Ellsberg's psychiatrist.

Hunt was asked what type of work he did during his long career with the CIA. "Oh," he replied with bored nonchalance, "subversion of prominent figures abroad, the overthrow of governments — that sort of thing." Judging from his testimony, it seemed to Hunt a logical progression to go from subverting foreign leaders to discrediting by illegal means an American public figure.

The CIA program of bribing politicians in other countries in order that they might support American interests has produced a similar boomerang. Over the years, we have chronicled how the CIA has corrupted foreign officials with wine, women and under-the-table cash.

On May 5, 1974, we explained that the CIA maintained a secret slush fund, which was known formally as "The Director's Contingency Fund." The CIA used money from this secret fund to play the stock market, thus raising additional money free of congressional control.

THE CONTINGENCY fund apparently provided the cash which was used to bribe world leaders. We named West Germany's Chancellor Willy Brandt as one of the surprising leaders who had taken money from the CIA.

We also reported from time to time on the CIA's effort to keep Jordan's King Hussein happy. We revealed on March 30, 1976, that the CIA had arranged a lavish party for the king in Hollywood. The dashing king took a fancy to one of the aspiring young actresses at the party. With the help of the CIA, he arranged to have her return with him to Jordan. We reported again on June 22, 1976, that the CIA provided Hussein "with female companions."

Now Americans are up in arms over the South Korean CIA's efforts to bribe American congressmen. The KCIA, like Iran's SAVAK and other foreign intelligence operations, was modeled after our own. These agencies learned about bribery from the CIA.

Conclusion: The CIA's determination to get down in the gutter and operate at the same level with the Soviet KGB has not paid off. The direct result is that the United States has lost, not gained, influence around the world.

There comes a time when, if we cannot be guided by principle, at least we ought to be deterred by shame.

Sex in the marketplace: American women at work

By SANDRA STENCEL
Editorial Research Reports

WASHINGTON — Responding to changing views of their role in society and inflationary pressures on family budgets, women are surging into the labor force faster than ever before. In the process, they are altering the whole U. S. job situation and complicating the new administration's efforts to put the nation's seven million unemployed back to work.

Some economists say the influx of women into the job market has put the nation on an unemployment treadmill, the result being that the number of people looking for jobs is growing faster than the economy can provide jobs.

"Their arguments are viciously sexist," retorts economic columnist Sylvia Porter, expressing the views of women's rights advocates.

They contend that economic necessity is behind the flood of women workers. Of the nearly 39 million women in the labor force, one out of eight is divorced or separated, over five million are married to men who earn less than $10,000 a year, and nearly three million have husbands who are unemployed or unable to work. It is also noted that U.S. unemployment rates have been higher for women than for men.

WOMEN HAVE MADE some inroads into professional and blue-collar jobs that up until recently have been largely male enclaves. About 23 per cent of all law students in the nation and approximately 25 per cent of the first-year medical students are women.

Among the nation's 1,300 biggest companies, there are about 400 women directors, in contrast to only 20 just five years ago. About five million women hold blue-collar jobs, from carpentry to coal mining.

Despite these gains, the number of women who have cracked the sex barriers is relatively small, and the sight of women at the bottom of mines, at the top of telephone poles, on the police beats or in military academies still draws the attention of the public and the news media.

For most women, going to work means taking a relatively low-skilled, low-paying job. The Department of Labor reports that the difference between men's and women's pay is wider today than it was 20 years ago. The average woman college graduate earned less last year than the average male high-school drop-out. More than one-third of all women workers — including many college graduates — are in clerical jobs.

Occupational segregation stems from many sources — discrimination, cultural conditioning and the personal desires of women themselves. Many employers still hold to the traditional view that men merit higher salaries and preference in hiring because they will not leave their jobs to get married or have children.

"The threat of discontinuity in a woman's worklife is perhaps the greatest single barrier to higher wages for young women," the new secretary of commerce, Juanita Kreps, wrote in her book, "Sex in the Marketplace: American Women at Work."

IN MANY INSTANCES, the barriers to women are not overt discrimination. Psychologists say working women are frequently handicapped by a weak self-image and lack of confidence. In a classic study in 1968, psychologist Matina Horner, now president of Radcliffe College, concluded that as a result of their childhood training, many women are hobbled by a "fear of success."

Margaret Hennig and Anne Jardim, co-directors of the Simmons College graduate program in management, found that women's attitudes toward work are totally different from men's and this impedes women's progress in the male-dominated corporate world. Men, they say, tend to have long-term career goals, while women are likelier to focus on short-term planning, largely because they have been brought up to think of careers conditionally — as an alternative to marriage.

This ambiguity causes women to make their career decisions late, about the age of 30 to 33, while men generally build the foundations of their careers while they are still in their twenties.

To change women's attitudes may take some time, and there are still other things that hinder women's participation in the labor force. Many working women have children to care for, and day-care facilities are expensive and frequently unavailable. And although men are doing more of the child rearing and housework these days, women still bear the brunt of it.

Despite all the difficulties, working women show no signs of abandoning their new roles in the work force. And more and more working women are demanding that society and their families adjust to the new realities of women's lives.

Restoring government morality

Jack Anderson
with
Les Whitten

WASHINGTON — When Jimmy Carter was running for president, he lamented that America had been disgraced by government policies unworthy of her people. He would change these policies, he promised, and he would never do anything that would shame us.

He hadn't been in the White House long before he began taking several small steps to place morality above convenience, above hypocrisy. He condemned the abuse of human rights around the world from Rhodesia to South Korea.

He protested repeatedly the suppression of basic freedoms in the Soviet Union — the unmentionable corpse in the closet during the Nixon-Kissinger-Ford era. And lest these protests be thought empty formalities, he dramatized them by going out of his way to show respect for the great Russian spokesmen for freedom and decency. A personal letter was sent to Andrei Sakharov; the word went out that Alexsandr Solzhenitsyn and Vladimir Bukovsky will be welcome at Jimmy Carter's White House.

From these simple acts, a ripple of hope has started to spread the world over among oppressed people who keep alive a yearning for freedom. It is a hope that springs not from any expectation that we will liberate them, but from the knowledge that we are aware they exist, that we honor their struggle and that the great human tide is with them.

Consistent with this, President Carter seems determined to keep the FBI within the law and to keep the CIA away from covert activities. Murder, burglary, bribery, extortion, election rigging — all are out. Any other covert activity will require a written authorization with his signature on it, where it can be read by history and the special prosecutor.

Because of these beginnings of a policy that reconciles our immediate interests with our larger moral heritage, sophisticates and pragmatists of various persuasions have begun to lampoon Carter as a Boy Scout and a threat to international harmony (or at least to our automobile bumpers made of Rhodesian chrome).

In my own opinion, Carter is not at all naive. His policy not only is right, but it is also the best practical course. We have followed the pragmatists too far, too long.

Wallinger
1977, INDEPENDENT, PRESS-TELEGRAM

It is bad enough that we stood mute before foreign despotism; it is intolerable that from refusing to see evil in front of our noses, we went on to practice it ourselves. We have made no permanent gains, and we have lost what was once our greatest strength. Our reputation for decency, once the beacon of the world, is now everywhere in tatters, and we are looked at as little better than the communists.

And an inevitable by-product haunts us. One by one, the schemes we designed for others, in competition with the Soviet KGB, have been turned against our own people and institutions.

THIS INSIDIOUS, corrosive process can be seen in embryo in the testimony given by the incomparable E. Howard Hunt as a prosecution witness in the trial of the White House plumbers for breaking into the office of Daniel Ellsberg's psychiatrist.

Hunt was asked what type of work he did during his long career with the CIA. "Oh," he replied with bored nonchalance, "subversion of prominent figures abroad, the overthrow of governments — that sort of thing." Judging from his testimony, it seemed to Hunt a logical progression to go from subverting foreign leaders to discrediting by illegal means an American public figure.

The CIA program of bribing politicians in other countries in order that they might support American interests has produced a similar boomerang. Over the years, we have chronicled how the CIA has corrupted foreign officials with wine, women and under-the-table cash.

On May 5, 1974, we explained that the CIA maintained a secret slush fund, which was known formally as "The Director's Contingency Fund." The CIA used money from this secret fund to play the stock market, thus raising additional money free of congressional control.

THE CONTINGENCY fund apparently provided the cash which was used to bribe world leaders. We named West Germany's Chancellor Willy Brandt as one of the surprising leaders who had taken money from the CIA.

We also reported from time to time on the CIA's effort to keep Jordan's King Hussein happy. We revealed on March 30, 1976, that the CIA had arranged a lavish party for the king in Hollywood. The dashing king took a fancy to one of the aspiring young actresses at the party. With the help of the CIA, he arranged to have her return with him to Jordan. We reported again on June 22, 1976, that the CIA provided Hussein "with female companions."

Now Americans are up in arms over the South Korean CIA's efforts to bribe American congressmen. The KCIA, like Iran's SAVAK and other foreign intelligence operations, was modeled after our own. These agencies learned about bribery from the CIA.

Conclusion: The CIA's determination to get down in the gutter and operate at the same level with the Soviet KGB has not paid off. The direct result is that the United States has lost, not gained, influence around the world.

There comes a time when, if we cannot be guided by principle, at least we ought to be deterred by shame.

Sex in the marketplace: American women at work

By SANDRA STENCEL
Editorial Research Reports

WASHINGTON — Responding to changing views of their role in society and inflationary pressures on family budgets, women are surging into the labor force faster than ever before. In the process, they are altering the whole U. S. job situation and complicating the new administration's efforts to put the nation's seven million unemployed back to work.

Some economists say the influx of women into the job market has put the nation on an unemployment treadmill, the result being that the number of people looking for jobs is growing faster than the economy can provide jobs.

"Their arguments are viciously sexist," retorts economic columnist Sylvia Porter, expressing the views of women's rights advocates.

They contend that economic necessity is behind the flood of women workers. Of the nearly 39 million women in the labor force, one out of eight is divorced or separated, over five million are married to men who earn less than $10,000 a year, and nearly three million have husbands who are unemployed or unable to work. It is also noted that U.S. unemployment rates have been higher for women than for men.

WOMEN HAVE MADE some inroads into professional and blue-collar jobs that up until recently have been largely male enclaves. About 23 per cent of all law students in the nation and approximately 25 per cent of the first-year medical students are women.

Among the nation's 1,300 biggest companies, there are about 400 women directors, in contrast to only 20 just five years ago. About five million women hold blue-collar jobs, from carpentry to coal mining.

Despite these gains, the number of women who have cracked the sex barriers is relatively small, and the sight of women at the bottom of mines, at the top of telephone poles, on the police beats or in military academies still draws the attention of the public and the news media.

For most women, going to work means taking a relatively low-skilled, low-paying job. The Department of Labor reports that the difference between men's and women's pay is wider today than it was 20 years ago. The average woman college graduate earned less last year than the average male high-school drop-out. More than one-third of all women workers — including many college graduates — are in clerical jobs.

Occupational segregation stems from many sources — discrimination, cultural conditioning and the personal desires of women themselves. Many employers still hold to the traditional view that men merit higher salaries and preference in hiring because they will not leave their jobs to get married or have children.

"The threat of discontinuity in a woman's worklife is perhaps the greatest single barrier to higher wages for young women," the new secretary of commerce, Juanita Kreps, wrote in her book, "Sex in the Marketplace: American Women at Work."

IN MANY INSTANCES, the barriers to women are not overt discrimination. Psychologists say working women are frequently handicapped by a weak self-image and lack of confidence. In a classic study in 1968, psychologist Matina Horner, now president of Radcliffe College, concluded that as a result of their childhood training, many women are hobbled by a "fear of success."

Margaret Hennig and Anne Jardim, co-directors of the Simmons College graduate program in management, found that women's attitudes toward work are totally different from men's and this impedes women's progress in the male-dominated corporate world. Men, they say, tend to have long-term career goals, while women are likelier to focus on short-term planning, largely because they have been brought up to think of careers conditionally — as an alternative to marriage.

This ambiguity causes women to make their career decisions late, about the age of 30 to 33, while men generally build the foundations of their careers while they are still in their twenties.

To change women's attitudes may take some time, and there are still other things that hinder women's participation in the labor force. Many working women have children to care for, and day-care facilities are expensive and frequently unavailable. And although men are doing more of the child rearing and housework these days, women still bear the brunt of it.

Despite all the difficulties, working women show no signs of abandoning their new roles in the work force. And more and more working women are demanding that society and their families adjust to the new realities of women's lives.

Art museum voting

Throwing art out to the citizenry is like throwing the fleeced lamb to the predator; everyone knows that. It should come as no surprise that Long Beach residents are soundly against an art musuem.

But let's be fair. Come on now, throw out some other topics to Town Hall meetings, including the Grand Prix (a boondoggle no one's wised up to yet), the Queen Mary, downtown marinas and the Sohio project. And, in retrospect, how about the new City Hall building. Who got a chance to turn thumbs down on that one? What real benefits do citizens get from that building?

If memory serves me correctly, a survey taken on the Grand Prix showed Long Beach citizens are against it. Why doesn't the City Council vote against it like they so magnanimously are going to do against the art museum.

So residents want recreation (whatever that means,) boating (for the affluent) and Dirty Mary-Crazy Larry car racing. No cultural wasteland here.

An art museum in Long Beach did seem an impossible dream, but what about the sacrificial Hubbard Building?

. . It seems that art for soul's sake, at least for me, will continue to come on rare weekends and require several tankfuls of gas to drive to Los Angeles or Pasadena.

Maybe we don't need a $15-million, award-winning building, but we do need an art museum. The council is urged not to completely abandon this "expendible" project so in the future the council can point to one thing and say it listened.

Sea water supply

Perhaps I am ignorant or I may have read or heard in the past why this idea is not feasible, but if so I can't remember.

In this day of sophisticated technology, why hasn't some bright group of chemists and scientists discovered a method to render sea water potable, or at least usable for irrigation purposes.

I suppose it might be important to reach the moon and other planets, though I really can't see why, except maybe to show the Russians we could be first.

I sincerely believe it is time to devote our brainpower to converting the great natural resources of this earth and once we are assured of independent energy, water and other human needs, then we can search space with a clear conscience.

AMA doesn't license

I read the article in the Feb. 21 Independent, Press-Telegram and sympathize with Dr. Hyman. I must tell you that Dr. Hyman is considered among the top neurosurgeons in our area and it would be a disaster if men of his caliber were forced to leave the practice of medicine.

I am writing in reference to remarks attributed to Mr. Howard Shelton, a Long Beach attorney. He makes reference to "a doctor having his license revoked by the American Medical Association."

As an attorney, Mr. Sheldon must know that the licensing of physicians is a State of California function. The State Board of Medical Examiners are appointed by the governor and are responsible to him. They and only they have the licensing function. The fact of the matter is that there are licensed physicians who are not members of the American Medical Association.

I read constantly about ills attributed to the AMA, such as restricting the number of doctors, fighting to keep foreign medical students and foreign doctors from our U.S. medical schools and hospitals respectively, as well as medical practice. Also, the AMA is accused of limiting the formation of new medical schools.

Actually, in the 20 years I have been a member, the only function they have served, as far as I know, is an educational source (medical journals and medical meetings, twice a year) and an informational source, in their newsletter and occasional mailings.

I frankly wish the AMA was stronger.

Free golf play

Congratulations, Long Beach! Once again you've proven yourself to be one of the all-time great bush cities.

To rescind free play of golf for the course crews and golf pros is absolutely unheard of in this country. And to base the decision on an interpretation of the Fair Political Practices Commission is interesting in itself.

Since when is a greenskeeper considered a politician and a city councilmen not? I've got to remember to start voting for the course crew and not the councilmen. I certainly hope my vote didn't elect the persons rendering this decision, if this is typical of their reasoning.

Was it taken into consideration that the crew plays during the slack time of the afternoon, and never if a paying customer is waiting — while the council members play during peak, popular times of early Saturday and Sunday mornings with many golfers patiently waiting?

Was the pride of workmanship each crew member feels about his home course taken into consideration?

Was it taken into consideration that many, if not all, employers grant concessions to their employes — such as discounts on their products?

Surely this interpretation was made without all aspects considered and another look at it is well warranted.

Keep out Alaskan oil

Your front-page news of Feb. 21 revealed that congressional investigations have uncovered 980 billion cubic feet of natural gas in the Gulf of Mexico that industry refuses to produce.

When this natural gas does become available to such areas in need as Southern California and especially Long Beach, just how will it be delivered when and if the Alaskan oil project petroleum flow is occupying the 30-inch pipelines that lead into that particular field of plenty?

The present theory seems to be to let Sohio use these pipelines for profit and let the Southern California area shift to high-sulphur fuel, thereby causing more ill health and deaths for Long Beach residents.

We say, place this Alaskan oil project elsewhere and keep Southern California supplied with natural gas, the clean fuel which it surely needs, and promote health, not illness and death for our residents.

Industry needs more natural gas. This is where jobs are created and not by the Alaskan oil project and the very few jobs that it promises!

The time has come for some rational judgment, and we believe that this Alaskan oil project, burdened as it is with earthquake potential and pollution consequences, should be shelved, particularly now that we know about the huge, untapped reservoir of natural gas in the Gulf of Mexico.

Will it be survival or demise for the people of this local area?

Move oil terminal

Whenever I think of the Sansinean, I feel uneasy about the site chosen for the Sohio oil terminal, because my home is less than two miles away.

As I watched a Navy vessel receiving a death-dealing cargo from barges on Feb. 16, I wondered how many people are aware that the terminal site is midway between two designated explosive anchorages. With this setup, we are just asking for heavy casualties here on shore.

To rid us of this ugly menace, let the oil terminal be located a safe eight or 10 miles south of the breakwater. Huge barges could be moored there to receive the oil and feed it into pipelines leading ashore.

A way to save water

Rather than use fresh water to flush toilets, why not pump bath water up to an elevation above the toilet reservoir where it would flow by gravity to the toilet for flushing? This also could use water from the lavatory and laundry. Chemicals such as chlorine could be added to prevent a health hazard. I believe this whole unit could be made of plastic, even the storage tank.

Whose meeting?

The concept of a town-hall meeting for each council district is an excellent idea and should be continued on a regular basis. I attended the town-hall meeting of Councilman Edgerton's Second District on Feb. 14 and was quite disturbed about a number of things which occurred.

First, the meeting was not held in the Second District. It was held at the Lions Club in Belmont Shore. I believe the purpose of a local town-hall meeting was defeated by holding it out of the district concerned.

Upon arriving at the Lions Club at the appointed time, imagine my chagrin when I discovered I was actually attending a meeting of the Beach Area Concerned Citizens (BACC) rather than one chaired by the Second District councilman. Considering the proposed nature of the meeting, the manner by which the BACC chairman assumed control and manipulated the meeting was, to be charitable, obscene.

To my knowledge, the BACC meeting was never adjourned, and the chairman and officers remained on the rostrum throughout the entire meeting. The BACC chairman conducted the meeting, recognized the speakers and fielded questions diretly to public officials. He even requested donations for the BACC treasury during the meeting.

The Beach Area Concerned Citizens were listed as co-sponsors for Councilman Edgerton's meeting, but this does not give them the prerogative to assume the duties of a public official. The right and duty to chair the meeting belonged to Councilman Edgerton and he should have exercised that right and duty.

I do not understand why Councilman Edgerton needed a co-sponsor for his meeting. When did it become necessary for a public official to require or accept sponsorship from any activist organization in conducting public business? Should the town-hall meetings be a financial burden on the individual councilman, sufficient moneys should be provided from city funds to cover expenses.

The councilmen must be independent of the influence of activist organizations when they conduct their meetings. Only then will the opportunity be afforded for all to be heard.

A school that cares

We read Monday's article from Doug Skare, principal at MacArthur School. We were truly moved by his statements about Doug France's visit to MacArthur. Mr. Skare wrote that Doug France touched many young lives in a special way. Mr. Skare, as principal, touches those same young lives every day and receives very little recognition.

Our 10-year-old son was in the hospital. One of his visitors was Mr. Doug Skare. He was very concerned and stopped by to say hello and to drop off a yellow Hot Wheel model car for our son. How many men with his busy schedule would take the time to do this for one little boy? This is only one item in a long list about Mr. Skare and the teachers at MacArthur.

There are no words for my wife and I to thank this man and the many teachers who work with him and make MacArthur school the school that it is — a school that cares.

I, too, am retired and play golf at least four times a week, and have done so for 20 months. I have found that the starters at Recreation Park 9-Hole Course are great guys and very cooperative. And that goes for all the personnel there.

Clutter's column

The Saturday edition of the I, P-T was once very dull. No Sydney Harris, George Robeson, Anderson nor Epley, not even Dear Abby. Then a new religion editor came on the scene in the person of Mark Clutter, bringing life and color to our Saturday newspaper.

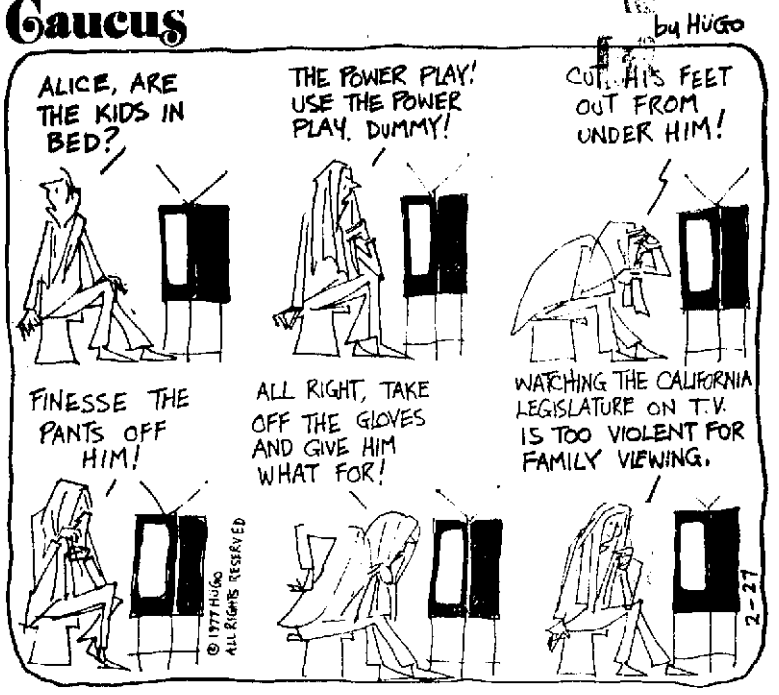

I'm sure every newspaper offers good reliable reporting of religious news and church events in the community. However, the I, P-T was singularly blessed to have a religion page that readers — religious or otherwise — eagerly turned to each week to discover whose ecclesiastical toes were being stepped on, in a reverent manner, of course.

Mark Clutter can be sentimental in writing about his mother the minister; he can be caustic in his comments on troubles within the Missouri Lutheran Synod and on the troublesome Rabbi Kahane; he can be philosophical about the present mood in America and the need for tolerance and moderation in our society; he can be inconsistent in his personal views on Noah and the Ark, as a recent example. In short, he is controversial.

Perhaps I would be less disturbed if I could feel sure that his column "People and Ideas" has not been discontinued for precisely this reason.

On postal service

In answer to the letter, "Air mail special" (Feb. 22), I don't think it's anything to cheer about upon receiving a letter from Boston in two days. That should be standard procedure in this day and age.

On these non-stop flights from LAX (Los Angeles International Airport) to Logan Airport, Boston, flight time is four hours, 20 minutes.

Practically all first-class mail goes via air, thus the discontinuance of sale of the air-mail stamps.

May I add, in agreement, that the postal service is very good; this being in reference to our branch office at Fourth Street and Loma Avenue.

Town Hall meetings

Last Sunday's (2/20) front-page article on the proposed new art museum credited the series of town hall meetings held in each councilmanic district with being the key factor in determining how our city representatives would ultimately vote on this issue.

The implication here is awesome, to say the least, as we contemplate a few hundred Long Beach residents "tipping the scales" in decisions which have a far-reaching effect for some 350,000 other city dwellers.

If the opinions advanced in these meetings are to carry that much weight, it is essential that, in each instance, those in attendance represent a true cross-section of the district residents.

I submit that this was not the case in the First District town hall meeting held in the council chambers on the evening of Feb. 8 where perhaps 50 of the district's 38,000 residents were in attendance.

With one or two exceptions, each speaker who went to the podium represented a special interest group whose concerns were almost exclusively economic in nature. These were the people who were aware of the meeting and its agenda and who came prepared to press for their pet projects. Human concerns, with the exception of police protection, were scarcely touched upon.

I found myself in disagreement with much of what was said. However, short notice (from a neighbor) and sketchy information regarding the meeting precluded my being adequately prepared to take the podium.

To me, it was an unsettling experience and I was troubled by the thought that this was not a truly representative group — that there was a whole body of public opinion that wasn't being heard.

I don't know the solution. I do know that this type meeting needs to be better publicized than was this one. In the case of the First District, consideration should be given to holding at least one of them in the daylight hours because of the number of older residents who no longer drive nor attend night events.

Of one thing I am sure — if these forums are to furnish the guidelines from which the city manager and City Council chart our course, we most certainly need more rank and file citizen input than was in evidence the night I attended.

Tax bill for renters

When two people buy the same kind of car, belong to the same lodge or club, etc., no one argues that one should pay more than the other, or not pay anything.

So, when two people belong to the same government, why do some think that one should pay more, like with property owners; or pay nothing, like with renters?

Some argue that renters pay property tax. Others say they don't. So why not send both owners and renters a tax bill each year? Who would object? Those who don't receive tax bills now?

In the past two weeks, two things have driven home to me part of what has happened to this nation of ours in my lifetime.

1. A CalTrans official stated for publication that the replacement cost of some plants precluded any water conservation efforts on the part of CalTrans.

2. Today (Feb. 21) is a holiday primarily for civil servants — and the freeways and surface streets appeared to have only one-half the normal taffic.

Bounce these two items about and see if it doesn't appear that the tail is now wagging the dog.

Living it up

It costs $2,200 to introduce a bill in the California Legislature. At the 1975-76 session, 7,058 bills were allegedly introduced in the Senate and Assembly. Only 2,171 actually became law. Of the remaining 4,887, a high percentage were considered a waste of time and thrown into the hopper to make the solons look good back in their districts.

California senators prefer big cars and many assemblymen (reportedly) have ordered new cars. We foot most of the bill for this largesse, in addition to paying for the gasoline and maintenance.

According to another news item, the Senate spent $11.9 million last year for salaries, travel, car leasing and maintenance, telephone calls, office supplies, newsletters and other expenses, 6 per cent over the 1975 total of $11.25 million.

Any day soon we can expect a cry from Sacramento for higher taxes. Is it any wonder?

To rescind free play of golf for the course crews and golf pros is absolutely unheard of in this country. And to base the decision on an interpretation of the Fair Political Practices Commission is interesting in itself.

Since when is a greenskeeper considered a politician and a city councilmen not? I've got to remember to start voting for the course crew and not the councilmen. I certainly hope my vote didn't elect the persons rendering this decision, if this is typical of their reasoning.

Was it taken into consideration that the crew plays during the slack time of the afternoon, and never if a paying customer is waiting — while the council members play during peak, popular times of early Saturday and Sunday mornings with many golfers patiently waiting?

Was the pride of workmanship each crew member feels about his home course taken into consideration?

Was it taken into consideration that many, if not all, employers grant concessions to their employes — such as discounts on their products?

Surely this interpretation was made without all aspects considered and another look at it is well warranted.

Keep out Alaskan oil

Your front-page news of Feb. 21 revealed that congressional investigations have uncovered 980 billion cubic feet of natural gas in the Gulf of Mexico that industry refuses to produce.

When this natural gas does become available to such areas in need as Southern California and especially Long Beach, just how will it be delivered when and if the Alaskan oil project petroleum flow is occupying the 30-inch pipelines that lead into that particular field of plenty?

The present theory seems to be to let Sohio use these pipelines for profit and let the Southern California area shift to high-sulphur fuel, thereby causing more ill health and deaths for Long Beach residents.

We say, place this Alaskan oil project elsewhere and keep Southern California supplied with natural gas, the clean fuel which it surely needs, and promote health, not illness and death for our residents.

Industry needs more natural gas. This is where jobs are created and not by the Alaskan oil project and the very few jobs that it promises!

The time has come for some rational judgment, and we believe that this Alaskan oil project, burdened as it is with earthquake potential and pollution consequences, should be shelved, particularly now that we know about the huge, untapped reservoir of natural gas in the Gulf of Mexico.

Will it be survival or demise for the people of this local area?

Move oil terminal

Whenever I think of the Sansinean. I feel uneasy about the site chosen for the Sohio oil terminal, because my home is less than two miles away.

As I watched a Navy vessel receiving a death-dealing cargo from barges on Feb. 16, I wondered how many people are aware that the terminal site is midway between two designated explosive anchorages. With this setup, we are just asking for heavy casualties here on shore.

To rid us of this ugly menace, let the oil terminal be located a safe eight or 10 miles south of the breakwater. Huge barges could be moored there to receive the oil and feed it into pipelines leading ashore.

A way to save water

Rather than use fresh water to flush toilets, why not pump bath water up to an elevation above the toilet reservoir where it would flow by gravity to the toilet for flushing? This also could use water from the lavatory and laundry. Chemicals such as chlorine could be added to prevent a health hazard. I believe this whole unit could be made of plastic, even the storage tank.

Whose meeting?

The concept of a town-hall meeting for each council district is an excellent idea and should be continued on a regular basis. I attended the town-hall meeting of Councilman Edgerton's Second District on Feb. 14 and was quite disturbed about a number of things which occurred.

First, the meeting was not held in the Second District. It was held at the Lions Club in Belmont Shore. I believe the purpose of a local town-hall meeting was defeated by holding it out of the district concerned.

Upon arriving at the Lions Club at the appointed time, imagine my chagrin when I discovered I was actually attending a meeting of the Beach Area Concerned Citizens (BACC) rather than one chaired by the Second District councilman. Considering the proposed nature of the meeting, the manner by which the BACC chairman assumed control and manipulated the meeting was, to be charitable, obscene.

To my knowledge, the BACC meeting was never adjourned, and the chairman and officers remained on the rostrum throughout the entire meeting. The BACC chairman conducted the meeting, recognized the speakers and fielded questions diretly to public officials. He even requested donations for the BACC treasury during the meeting.

The Beach Area Concerned Citizens were listed as co-sponsors for Councilman Edgerton's meeting, but this does not give them the prerogative to assume the duties of a public official. The right and duty to chair the meeting belonged to Councilman Edgerton and he should have exercised that right and duty.

I do not understand why Councilman Edgerton needed a co-sponsor for his meeting. When did it become necessary for a public official to require or accept sponsorship from any activist organization in conducting public business? Should the town-hall meetings be a financial burden on the individual councilman, sufficient moneys should be provided from city funds to cover expenses.

The councilmen must be independent of the influence of activist organizations when they conduct their meetings. Only then will the opportunity be afforded for all to be heard.

A school that cares

We read Monday's article from Doug Skare, principal at MacArthur School. We were truly moved by his statements about Doug France's visit to MacArthur. Mr. Skare wrote that Doug France touched many young lives in a special way. Mr. Skare, as principal, touches those same young lives every day and receives very little recognition.

Our 10-year-old son was in the hospital. One of his visitors was Mr. Doug Skare. He was very concerned and stopped by to say hello and to drop off a yellow Hot Wheel model car for our son. How many men with his busy schedule would take the time to do this for one little boy? This is only one item in a long list about Mr. Skare and the teachers at MacArthur.

There are no words for my wife and I to thank this man and the many teachers who work with him and make MacArthur school the school that it is — a school that cares.

Starters great guys

I, too, am retired and play golf at least four times a week, and have done so for 20 months. I have found that the starters at Recreation Park 9-Hole Course are great guys and very cooperative. And that goes for all the personnel there.

My friends and I have never had any trouble getting a starting time. If you don't like the rules of the links, build your own course. Starters are human beings and it's a tough job dealing with the public.

Surely Harold A. Mirk (I, P-T letters 2/17) must know that car dealers apparently do not believe in shortages of any sort. One has only to drive at night down Long Beach Boulevard to notice that it is, as always, bright as day. Truly an unbelievable waste of electricity.

Clutter's column

The Saturday edition of the I, P-T was once very dull. No Sydney Harris, George Robeson, Anderson nor Epley, not even Dear Abby. Then a new religion editor came on the scene in the person of Mark Clutter, bringing life and color to our Saturday newspaper.

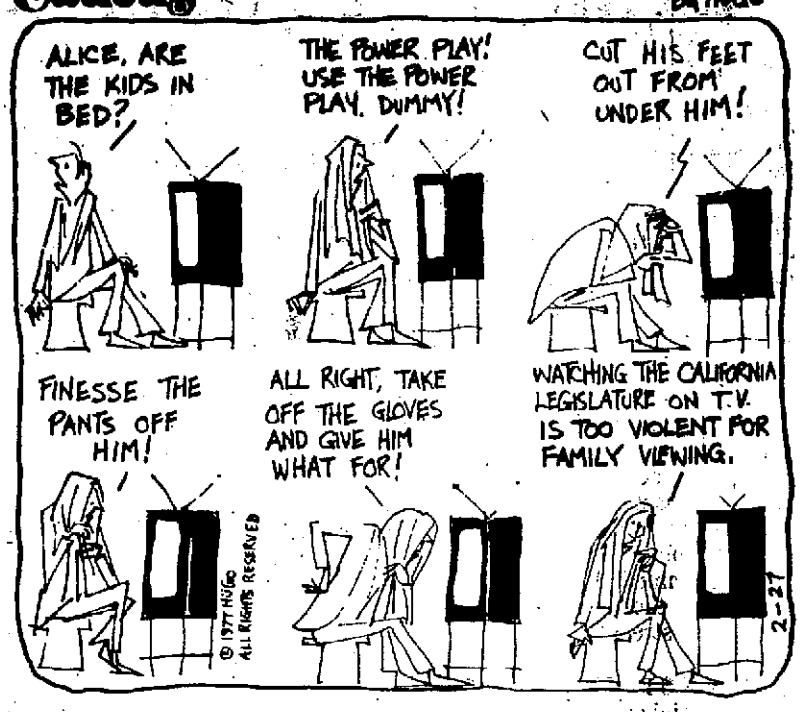

I'm sure every newspaper offers good reliable reporting of religious news and church events in the community. However, the I, P-T was singularly blessed to have a religion page that readers — religious or otherwise — eagerly turned to each week to discover whose ecclesiastical toes were being stepped on, in a reverent manner, of course.

Mark Clutter can be sentimental in writing about his mother the minister; he can be caustic in his comments on troubles within the Missouri Lutheran Synod and on the troublesome Rabbi Kahane; he can be philosophical about the present mood in America and the need for tolerance and moderation in our society; he can be inconsistent in his personal views on Noah and the Ark, as a recent example. In short, he is controversial.

Perhaps I would be less disturbed if I could feel sure that his column "People and Ideas" has not been discontinued for precisely this reason.

On postal service

In answer to the letter, "Air mail special" (Feb. 22), I don't think it's anything to cheer about upon receiving a letter from Boston in two days. That should be standard procedure in this day and age.

On these non-stop flights from LAX (Los Angeles International Airport) to Logan Airport, Boston, flight time is four hours, 20 minutes.

Practically all first-class mail goes via air, thus the discontinuance of sale of the air-mail stamps.

May I add, in agreement, that the postal service is very good; this being in reference to our branch office at Fourth Street and Loma Avenue.

Town Hall meetings

Last Sunday's (2/20) front-page article on the proposed new art museum credited the series of town hall meetings held in each councilmanic district with being the key factor in determining how our city representatives would ultimately vote on this issue.

The implication here is awesome, to say the least, as we contemplate a few hundred Long Beach residents "tipping the scales" in decisions which have a far-reaching effect for some 350,000 other city dwellers.

If the opinions advanced in these meetings are to carry that much weight, it is essential that, in each instance, those in attendance represent a true cross-section of the district residents.

I submit that this was not the case in the First District town hall meeting held in the council chambers on the evening of Feb. 8 where perhaps 50 of the district's 38,000 residents were in attendance.

With one or two exceptions, each speaker who went to the podium represented a special interest group whose concerns were almost exclusively economic in nature. These were the people who were aware of the meeting and its agenda and who came prepared to press for their pet projects. Human concerns, with the exception of police protection, were scarcely touched upon.

I found myself in disagreement with much of what was said. However, short notice (from a neighbor) and sketchy information regarding the meeting precluded my being adequately prepared to take the podium.

To me, it was an unsettling experience and I was troubled by the thought that this was not a truly representative group — that there was a whole body of public opinion that wasn't being heard.

I don't know the solution. I do know that this type meeting needs to be better publicized than was this one. In the case of the First District, consideration should be given to holding at least one of them in the daylight hours because of the number of older residents who no longer drive nor attend night events.

Of one thing I am sure — if these forums are to furnish the guidelines from which the city manager and City Council chart our course, we most certainly need more rank and file citizen input than was in evidence the night I attended.

Tax bill for renters

When two people buy the same kind of car, belong to the same lodge or club, etc., no one argues that one should pay more than the other, or not pay anything.

So, when two people belong to the same government, why do some think that one should pay more, like with property owners; or pay nothing, like with renters?

Some argue that renters pay property tax. Others say they don't. So why not send both owners and renters a tax bill each year? Who would object? Those who don't receive tax bills now?

1. A CalTrans official stated for publication that the replacement cost of some plants precluded any water conservation efforts on the part of CalTrans.

2. Today (Feb. 21) is a holiday primarily for civil servants — and the freeways and surface streets appeared to have only one-half the normal taffic.

Bounce these two items about and see if it doesn't appear that the tail is now wagging the dog.

Living it up

It costs $2,200 to introduce a bill in the California Legislature. At the 1975-76 session, 7,058 bills were allegedly introduced in the Senate and Assembly. Only 2,171 actually became law. Of the remaining 4,887, a high percentage were considered a waste of time and thrown into the hopper to make the solons look good back in their districts.

California senators prefer big cars and many assemblymen (reportedly) have ordered new cars. We foot most of the bill for this largesse, in addition to paying for the gasoline and maintenance.

According to another news item, the Senate spent $11.9 million last year for salaries, travel, car leasing and maintenance, telephone calls, office supplies, newsletters and other expenses, 6 per cent over the 1975 total of $11.25 million.

Any day soon we can expect a cry from Sacramento for higher taxes. Is it any wonder?

Eight courtrooms closed despite judicial backlog

the Long Beach courthouse is different from the other districts in that most of the judges hear both civil and criminal cases.

According to the district attorney's office, only about 10 per cent of felony criminal cases filed in the county actually go to trial. The other 90 per cent result in guilty pleas, many of which are negotiated through plea bargaining.

Steve Hough, acting deputy in charge of the public defender's office in Long Beach, said the court system is so jammed up now, that it would collapse if only a fourth of the defendants in felony cases throughout the county demanded their rights to jury trials.

With the criminal caseload more than doubled, Hough said, civil trial departments would be forced to abandon their cases in an attempt to conduct trials in time to satisfy the defendants' rights to speedy trials, and the criminal overflow would push the civil backlog to its five-year bursting point.

Zolin said that if the civil backlog continues to increase at its present rate and nothing is done to increase the court time available to try cases, nearly all major lawsuits will be pushing the five-year dismissal deadline within the next couple of years.

While county and court officials agree the situation in the court system is critical, they do not agree on how to solve the problem.

Supervisors Hayes and Kenneth Hahn believe consolidating the superior, municipal and justice courts into a single system would not only provide more efficient use of court time, but also would save millions of dollars. They say it would eliminate the need for additional judges.

Zolin, to the contrary, thinks "a consolidation into a single court might reduce our efficiency because of a lack of coordination and communication."

Zolin said it is difficult to coordinate the actions of the county's 171 superior court judges, and it would be almost impossible if all the courts were combined into one.

"A consolidation into a single court might reduce our efficiency because of a lack of coordination and communication."

Hahn said one of the problems with handling judges is that they are all independent elected officials. He would like to see the presiding judge given the power to discipline the other judicial officers. Under the present system, the only disciplinary power held by the presiding judge is that he 'can transfer a judge to a less desirable district.

While he was a state assemblyman in 1971, Hayes introduced a series of bills to consolidate the courts into a single jurisdiction which would have been administered on a statewide level by the California Judicial Council.

The bills were passed overwhelmingly in the Assembly, but failed by one vote in the Senate Judiciary Committee.

Under the proposals, which Hayes hopes will be reintroduced during the current legislative session, all filing fees would be uniform throughout the state and would be paid into a state court fund.

Uniform filing fees and the efficient uses of judges would go a long way toward making the system self-supporting, Hayes said.

Legislative Analyst A. Alan Post said at the time that property taxpayers would be saved approximately $80 million annually if the state were to take over the courts.

Hahn said one reason many superior court judges are opposed to consolidating the courts is that all of the municipal court judges would be automatically elevated "without having to come up through the ranks."

He said, "Some of the municipal court judges in favor of consolidation change their minds when they are elevated. They like being 'superior.'"

He also said some of the municipal court judges make better judicial decisions than some superior court judges. It is a myth that superior court judges are automatically better than municipal court judges, he said. "It's the man, not the court, which makes the difference."

Hahn, who was chairman of the board's Courts Committee for 16 of his 24 years as a supervisor, said the consolidation of the courts would evenly distribute the workload among the judges and that is what must be done.

"Some of the municipal court judges in favor of consolidation change their minds whey they are elevated. They like being 'superior'!"

He said that while "some of the judges work very hard, others have little to do and are finished by 2 o'clock. If the courts were consolidated, all of the judges would be handling their fair share of the judicial workload."

If the courts were consolidated, arraignments and preliminary hearings now conducted in municipal court in felony cases could be eliminated, thereby freeing many judges to handle trials, he said.

There are many other court reforms, far less radical than the consolidation, that could be made by the Legislature to help ease the situation.

The proposals, which have been suggested many times but never enacted, include:

—The elimination of jury trials for civil lawsuits, which would greatly reduce the court time required to hear them.

—Reducing the size of juries from 12 to six in all but serious criminal cases. "What makes 12 a magic number?" Long Beach Superior Court Supervising Judge Carroll M. Dunnum asked rhetorically in a recent interview.

—Eliminating the right to a jury trial on minor traffic violations. "Any person who runs a boulevard stop sign can demand a jury trial and tie up a courtroom," Hahn said.

—Allowing uncontested divorce actions and child custody cases to be handled through the county clerk's office instead of through the courts.

Another alternative would be to keep the courts open nights and weekends, which would reduce the caseload substantially. However, the cost probably would be prohibitive in a county already faced with financial difficulties.

Presiding Judge William P. Hogoboom says a new settlement procedure being considered would save court time.

Hogoboom said that under the plan some settlement conferences for civil suits would be presided over by private attorneys who would volunteer to work one day a month. The procedure would free judges for trials.

There currently are 50 vacant courtrooms in the county, and that number will climb to 64 when the new courthouse in Compton opens in the spring of 1978.

"If the courts were consolidated, all of the judges would be handling their fair share of the judicial workload."

Yet the court is unable to use them to break up its judicial logjam because all 171 judgeships authorized by the Legislature have been filled and the supervisors refuse to authorize any additional commissioners.

"Having worked in the county for such a long time, I am familar with people from all walks of life," Mrs. Conley said. "I am always eager to improve and see others improve.

"I am particularily interested in urban affairs and in local government," she added.

Mrs. Conley said there is a need for a 24-hour emergency center that can help people in a variety of social problems and for a parent coordinator to work with the schools and parents.

"Many mothers don't understand how to handle family situations and have difficulty coping with their children. The parent coordinator could assist in advising to improve the home situation."

Mrs. Goulsby, a mother of two, is studying public administration at Long Beach City College. She was a member of the Long Beach Commission on Economic Opportunities, which has been phased out.

"My reason for running is to try to get more community input into the affairs of Long Beach," Mrs. Goulsby said. "I feel that all too often people in this area are not aware of the money spent by city hall on the low-income.

"We have too much black-on-black crime in this area," she added. "There is a lack of programs for the youth of this city and this is part of the reason why we have so much crime because they have nothing to do."

The third candidate, Mrs. Casanovas, is a newcomer to Long Beach, but she feels that her two-month residency should not be a factor against her chances.

"I have experience working at the grass roots level that would be important to get people involved at the local level," she said. "And it's important that more people get involved in local matters that affect their lives."

Mrs. Casanovas, from New York, has experience as a volunteer counselor for inmates and families of inmates. She taught remedial reading to elementary school children and intends to work for a master's degree in bilingual and bicultural education at Long Beach State University.

"I don't think the short time I have been here should deter anyone from voting for me," she adds. "Human relations are all the same, regardless of the location they're from."

Special state award won by Cerritos park

The new Heritage Park in the city of Cerritos has been judged as the state's best "special facility" by the California Parks and Recreation Society's environmental awards committee.

The 15-acre park, which will be dedicated next Sunday, was judged "a most unique and unusual project" by the awards committee.

Judges based the award on the utilization of the land, the project design, construction techniques and the consideration that the park "meets the needs of the community."

The award will be presented Monday at 6 p.m. during the CPRS awards and installation banquet at the Disneyland Hotel.

Cerritos also won an award last year, for Liberty Park, judged the best park in the state.

swagen mechanic. He said he had never heard of a battery blowing up under a seat as Lucero described.

But representatives of towing agencies agree that most battery accidents are caused by an inadvertent spark, and the NSPB offered this procedure for the safe use of jumper cables:

—Remove the caps from both batteries to allow the dangerous gases to escape.

—Connect the red clamp of the jumper cable to the positive (+) pole of the dead battery.

—Connect the other end of the same cable to the positive pole of the booster battery.

—Connect the second cable to the negative (-) pole of the booster battery.

—Finally, clamp the other end to the engine block of the vehicle with the dead battery on the side away from the battery.

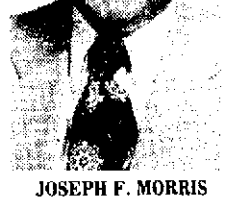

The stalled car and the car containing the live booster battery should not touch in any way, the clips on the red cable should not make accidental contact with any part of either car and smoking should be prohibited while working with the cables.

After starting the disabled car, the cable from the engine block should be removed first, then the other end from the booster battery. The red cable should be disconnected from the now-recharging battery, then from the booster battery.

If, in spite of these precautions an accident does occur and sulfuric acid splashes in a person's eyes, quick action can prevent tragedy, Ronald Stewart, an emergency room doctor at Long Beach Memorial Hospital said.

"The chief concern is to cleanse the patient's eyes in the event the corrosive material has gotten in them.

"Wash the eyes out with clear water — even before you call an ambulance," he stressed.

Public meet set on 'car row,' mall

The fate of Long Beach Boulevard, the city's "car row," will be the subject of a special meeting of the city's newly established Economic Development Commission Thursday.

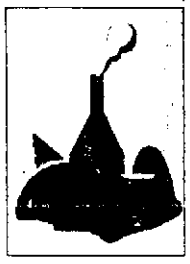

The 15-member body, which was formed to advise the city on matters of economic development, will conduct the meeting at the headquarters of Boulevard Buick, 1881 Long Beach Blvd.

THE SESSION, which will get under way at 4:30 p.m., will consider the problems of auto dealers along the street and take up a recent proposal to establish an auto mall near Willow Street and Redondo Avenue.

Public comment from residents and businessmen of the area will be accepted.

The City Council recently decided to take a cautious approach to the mall proposal, indicating that a pullout of businesses from Long Beach Boulevard could have serious adverse effects on the area.

The car dealers appear to be split on the issue and Thursday's meeting is expected to reflect that schism.

He said the agenda, released at noon Friday, "won't give you much of a clue as to what matters are coming up. If you get past all of that and attempt to go to a meeting, you will first have to find it: some are held at the college and some at the board headquarters.

"You'll be barred for more than an hour from the 2:45 p.m. closed 'executive session' and won't learn what happened behind the closed doors. You'll sit through a 4 p.m. 'committee of the whole' meeting before the 4:15 p.m. 'regular meeting' begins. The 'regular meeting' is often less than five minutes long, with no public input."

Dixon said board members may interrupt a speaker at any time to "clarify" the discussion.

He cited his endorsement by the Teachers Association of Long Beach and the Long Beach Area California School Employes Association, "those who know the schools best and care about the kids."

The board election will be March 15. Incumbents Elizabeth Wallace and James Zarifes, seeking re-election, face challenges by seven other candidates.

Eight courtrooms closed despite judicial backlog

the Long Beach courthouse is different from the other districts in that most of the judges hear both civil and criminal cases.

According to the district attorney's office, only about 10 per cent of felony criminal cases filed in the county actually go to trial. The other 90 per cent result in guilty pleas, many of which are negotiated through plea bargaining.

Steve Hough, acting deputy in charge of the public defender's office in Long Beach, said the court system is so jammed up now, that it would collapse if only a fourth of the defendants in felony cases throughout the county demanded their rights to jury trials.

With the criminal caseload more than doubled, Hough said, civil trial departments would be forced to abandon their cases in an attempt to conduct trials in time to satisfy the defendants' rights to speedy trials, and the criminal overflow would push the civil backlog to its five-year bursting point.

Zolin said that if the civil backlog continues to increase at its present rate and nothing is done to increase the court time available to try cases, nearly all major lawsuits will be pushing the five-year dismissal deadline within the next couple of years.

While county and court officials agree the situation in the court system is critical, they do not agree on how to solve the problem.

Supervisors Hayes and Kenneth Hahn believe consolidating the superior, municipal and justice courts into a single system would not only provide more efficient use of court time, but also would save millions of dollars. They say it would eliminate the need for additional judges.

Zolin, to the contrary, thinks "a consolidation into a single court might reduce our efficiency because of a lack of coordination and communication."

Zolin said it is difficult to coordinate the actions of the county's 171 superior court judges, and it would be almost impossible if all the courts were combined into one.

"A consolidation into a single court might reduce our efficiency because of a lack of coordination and communication."

Hahn said one of the problems with handling judges is that they are all independent elected officials. He would like to see the presiding judge given the power to discipline the other judicial officers. Under the present system, the only disciplinary power held by the presiding judge is that he can transfer a judge to a less desirable district.

While he was a state assemblyman in 1971, Hayes introduced a series of bills to consolidate the courts into a single jurisdiction which would have been administered on a statewide level by the California Judicial Council.

The bills were passed overwhelmingly in the Assembly, but failed by one vote in the Senate Judiciary Committee.

Under the proposals, which Hayes hopes will be reintrodueed during the current legislative session, all filing fees would be uniform throughout the state and would be paid into a state court fund.

Uniform filing fees and the efficient uses of judges would go a long way toward making the system self-supporting, Hayes said.

Legislative Analyst A. Alan Post said at the time that property taxpayers would be saved approximately $80 million annually if the state were to take over the courts.

Hahn said one reason many superior court judges are opposed to consolidating the courts is that all of the municipal court judges would be automatically elevated "without having to come up through the ranks."

He said, "Some of the municipal court judges in favor of consolidation change their minds when they are elevated. They like being 'superior.'"

He also said some of the municipal court judges make better judicial decisions than some superior court judges. It is a myth that superior court judges are automatically better than municipal court judges, he said. "It's the man, not the court, which makes the difference."

Hahn, who was chairman of the board's Courts Committee for 16 of his 24 years as a supervisor, said the consolidation of the courts would evenly distribute the workload among the judges and that is what must be done.

"Some of the municipal court judges in favor of consolidation change their minds whey they are elevated. They like being 'superior'!"

He said that while "some of the judges work very hard, others have little to do and are finished by 2 o'clock. If the courts were consolidated, all of the judges would be handling their fair share of the judicial workload."

If the courts were consolidated, arraignments and preliminary hearings now conducted in municipal court in felony cases could be eliminated, thereby freeing many judges to handle trials, he said.

There are many other court reforms, far less radical than the consolidation, that could be made by the Legislature to help ease the situation.

The proposals, which have been suggested many times but never enacted, include:

—The elimination of jury trials for civil lawsuits, which would greatly reduce the court time required to hear them.

—Reducing the size of juries from 12 to six in all but serious criminal cases. "What makes 12 a magic number?" Long Beach Superior Court Supervising Judge Carroll M. Dunnum asked rhetorically in a recent interview.

—Eliminating the right to a jury trial on minor traffic violations. "Any person who runs a boulevard stop sign can demand a jury trial and tie up a courtroom," Hahn said.

—Allowing uncontested divorce actions and child custody cases to be handled through the county clerk's office instead of through the courts.

Another alternative would be to keep the courts open nights and weekends, which would reduce the caseload substantially. However, the cost probably would be prohibitive in a county already faced with financial difficulties.

Presiding Judge William P. Hogoboom says a new settlement procedure being considered would save court time.

Hogoboom said that under the plan some settlement conferences for civil suits would be presided over by private attorneys who would volunteer to work one day a month. The procedure would free judges for trials.

There currently are 50 vacant courtrooms in the county, and that number will climb to 64 when the new courthouse in Compton opens in the spring of 1978.

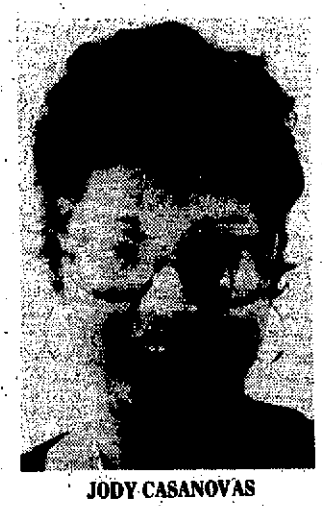

"If the courts were consolidated, all of the judges would be handling their fair share of the judicial workload."

Yet the court is unable to use them to break up its judicial logjam because all 171 judgeships authorized by the Legislature have been filled and the supervisors refuse to authorize any additional commissioners.

JODY CASANOVAS

SANDRA GOULSBY

"Having worked in the county for such a long time, I am familar with people from all walks of life," Mrs. Conley said. "I am always eager to improve and see others improve.

"I am particularily interested in urban affairs and in local government," she added.

Mrs. Conley said there is a need for a 24-hour emergency center that can help people in a variety of social problems and for a parent coordinator to work with the schools and parents.

"Many mothers don't understand how to handle family situations and have difficulty coping with their children. The parent coordinator could assist in advising to improve the home situation."

Mrs. Goulsby, a mother of two, is studying public administration at Long Beach City College. She was a member of the Long Beach Commission on Economic Opportunities, which has been phased out.

"My reason for running is to try to get more community input into the affairs of Long Beach," Mrs. Goulsby said. "I feel that all too often people in this area are not aware of the money spent by city hall on the low-income.

"We have too much black-on-black crime in this area," she added. "There is a lack of programs for the youth of this city and this is part of the reason why we have so much crime because they have nothing to do."

The third candidate, Mrs. Casanovas, is a newcomer to Long Beach, but she feels that her two-month residency should not be a factor against her chances.

"I have experience working at the grass roots level that would be important to get people involved at the local level," she said. "And it's important that more people get involved in local matters that affect their lives."

Mrs. Casanovas, from New York, has experience as a volunteer counselor for inmates and families of inmates. She taught remedial reading to elementary school children and intends to work for a master's degree in bilingual and bicultural education at Long Beach State University.

"I don't think the short time I have been here should deter anyone from voting for me," she adds. "Human relations are all the same, regardless of the location they're from."

Special state award won by Cerritos park

The new Heritage Park in the city of Cerritos has been judged as the state's best "special facility" by the California Parks and Recreation Society's environmental awards committee.

The 15-acre park, which will be dedicated next Sunday, was judged "a most unique and unusual project" by the awards committee.

Judges based the award on the utilization of the land, the project design, construction techniques and the consideration that the park "meets the needs of the community."

The award will be presented Monday at 6 p.m. during the CPRS awards and installation banquet at the Disneyland Hotel.

Cerritos also won an award last year, for Liberty Park, judged the best park in the state.

Explosive 'charge' of car battery can blind

swagen mechanic. He said he had never heard of a battery blowing up under a seat as Lucero described.

But representatives of towing agencies agree that most battery accidents are caused by an inadvertent spark, and the NSPB offered this procedure for the safe use of jumper cables:

—Remove the caps from both batteries to allow the dangerous gases to escape.

—Connect the red clamp of the jumper cable to the positive (+) pole of the dead battery.

—Connect the other end of the same cable to the positive pole of the booster battery.

—Connect the second cable to the negative (-) pole of the booster battery.

—Finally, clamp the other end to the engine block of the vehicle with the dead battery on the side away from the battery.

The stalled car and the car containing the live booster battery should not touch in any way, the clips on the red cable should not make accidental contact with any part of either car and smoking should be prohibited while working with the cables.

After starting the disabled car, the cable from the engine block should be removed first, then the other end from the booster battery. The red cable should be disconnected from the now-recharging battery, then from the booster battery.

If, in spite of these precautions an accident does occur and sulfuric acid splashes in a person's eyes, quick action can prevent tragedy, Ronald Stewart, an emergency room doctor at Long Beach Memorial Hospital said.

"The chief concern is to cleanse the patient's eyes in the event the corrosive material has gotten in them.

"Wash the eyes out with clear water — even before you call an ambulance," he stressed.

the subject and action requested by 10 a.m. Friday. Meeting visitors must sign in and wear visitors' badges.

He said the agenda, released at noon Friday, "won't give you much of a clue as to what matters are coming up. If you get past all of that and attempt to go to a meeting, you will first have to find it; some are held at the college and some at the board headquarters.

"You'll be barred for more than an hour from the 2:45 p.m. closed 'executive session' and won't learn what happened behind the closed doors. You'll sit through a 4 p.m. 'committee of the whole' meeting before the 4:15 p.m. 'regular meeting' begins. The 'regular meeting' is often less than five minutes long, with no public input."

Dixon said board members may interrupt a speaker at any time to "clarify" the discussion.

"Some charges, complaints or criticisms won't be heard at all," he said, and others must be presented to the board in writing, signed and certified.

He cited his endorsement by the Teachers Association of Long Beach and the Long Beach Area California School Employes Association, "those who know the schools best and care about the kids."

The board election will be March 15. Incumbents Elizabeth Wallace and James Zarifes, seeking re-election, face challenges by seven other candidates.

ANDERSON GIFT

Rep. Glenn M. Anderson, D-Harbor City, Long Beach, announced he will contribute $7,000 of his $12,900 congressional salary increase to two charities, the American Cancer Society and the American Heart Association, each receiving $3,500.

"I regret that we did not have an opportunity to vote on this pay raise. I believe that the increase in our salaries is excessive," Anderson said.

HANNAFORD ACT

Rep. Mark Hannaford, D-Long Beach, West Orange County, has introduced legislation to require major federal regulatory agencies to "self-destruct" unless each agency can demonstrate to Congress the value of its continued existence.

"Earlier this year I introduced the Government Economy and Spending Reform Act, which would require the adoption of 'zero base' budgeting procedures for all federal agencies," Hannaford said. "I think this additional legislation will go even further in controlling the bureaucratic inertia which sweeps regulatory agencies merrily along regardless of their overall performance record."

34TH GOP

School board candidates Edward Gallagher, Elizabeth Wallace, Elliott Dixon and Wayne Roy have been invited to speak at the 1 p.m., March 9, meeting of the 34th Congressional District Republican Women Federated in the Women's City Club, 1309 E. Third St., Long Beach. The public is invited.

DEMO STUDY CLUB

The Sohio proposal for an oil terminal in Long Beach to receive Alaskan oil will be discussed at the 11 a.m., Friday meeting of the Democratic Women's Study Club in the Lafayette Hotel.

David Elder, special projects director of the Long Beach Harbor Department, will speak for the development. Jan Smutny-Jones, an environmentalist, will give "another view," said club program chairman Zita Remley.

Loretta Bachman, study hour chairman, will lead a discussion of capital punishment. The public is invited.

JOSEPH F. MORRIS

Western Post Office chief to be speaker

Western Regional Postmaster General Joseph F. Morris will speak to the Concerned Mailers of Southern California at a luncheon meeting March 8 at the Queensway Hilton. The public is invited.

Morris has been with the U.S. Postal service for 27 years and directs more than 4,000 post offices and 110,000 postal employes in 13 Western states and the Pacific islands.

Concerned Mailers of Southern California is a group of Southland business and civic leaders interested in furthering efficiency in the Postal Service.

For more information and reservations, call the customer service office at the Long Beach Post Office, 435-4418.

Public meet set on 'car row,' mall

The fate of Long Beach Boulevard, the city's "car row," will be the subject of a special meeting of the city's newly established Economic Development Commission Thursday.

The 15-member body, which was formed to advise the city on matters of economic development, will conduct the meeting at the headquarters of Boulevard Buick, 1881 Long Beach Blvd.

THE SESSION, which will get under way at 4:30 p.m., will consider the problems of auto dealers along the street and take up a recent proposal to establish an auto mall near Willow Street and Redondo Avenue.

Public comment from residents and businessmen of the area will be accepted.

The City Council recently decided to take a cautious approach to the mall proposal, indicating that a pullout of businesses from Long Beach Boulevard could have serious adverse effects on the area.

The car dealers appear to be split on the issue and Thursday's meeting is expected to reflect that schism.

At Bellflower City Council meeting

Half-way home hearing set

The future site of Little House, an established half-way home for women alcoholics, will be the subject of a public hearing Monday during the Bellflower City Council meeting.

Harvey Jacobs, 9710 Harvard St., has appealed Planning Commission approval of a permit allowing the facility to move to new quarters in his neighborhood.

Little House, operated by the Southeast Council of Alcoholism and Drug Problems, Inc., hopes to move from its rented 27-bed facility at 17224 Downey Ave. to 9712-9718 Harvard St.

Jacobs contends that Little House fails to meet permit conditions of the municipal code.

The city Planning Commission, however, voted unanimously to approve the permit at its Jan. 17 meeting.

Other major items on Monday's agenda include consideration of an amendment to the city's sign ordinance which would prohibit billboards within 300 feet of each other.

The council also will discuss possible participation in the county's Housing Assistance Payment Program. Federally funded, the program provides rent subsidies for eligible families.

Among those eligible are the elderly, the handicapped and the disabled who meet minimum income requirements.

The meeting will begin at 7:30 p.m. in Bellflower City Hall, 9835 E. Belmont St.

'Impossible Dream' only dream for blacks

(On Feb. 6, in a story carried in The Independent, Press-Telegram, Arthur Ashe, the black tennis player, advised black parents to send their children to the library rather than the playing field. He said that only one black child in a thousand could reach major-league level in a professional sport, that black parents "must instill a desire for learning alongside the desire to be Walt Frazier." This story is in response to Ashe's article. Marvin S. Dent Jr. is tennis coach at New York's City College and a black parent.)

NEW YORK — I have always been impressed with your "tunnel vision." Your open letter to black parents should earn you indubitably the myopic championship of our time.

It was significant that your observations were realized in your sophomore year at UCLA. It seems you were not aware of the reasons you were there or how you got there.

You were there because you were handpicked to play tennis. Unlike Kareem Abdul-Jabbar (who like yourself was well read but went to UCLA to play basketball), you participate in a sport that requires money. Even though you do not mention it very often, you got there on the aid of black money first and black sacrifice (remember Joe Williams and Red Cunningham?).

We agree that emulation is part of our culture, regardless of color or ethnicity — but to what degree. Let's examine.

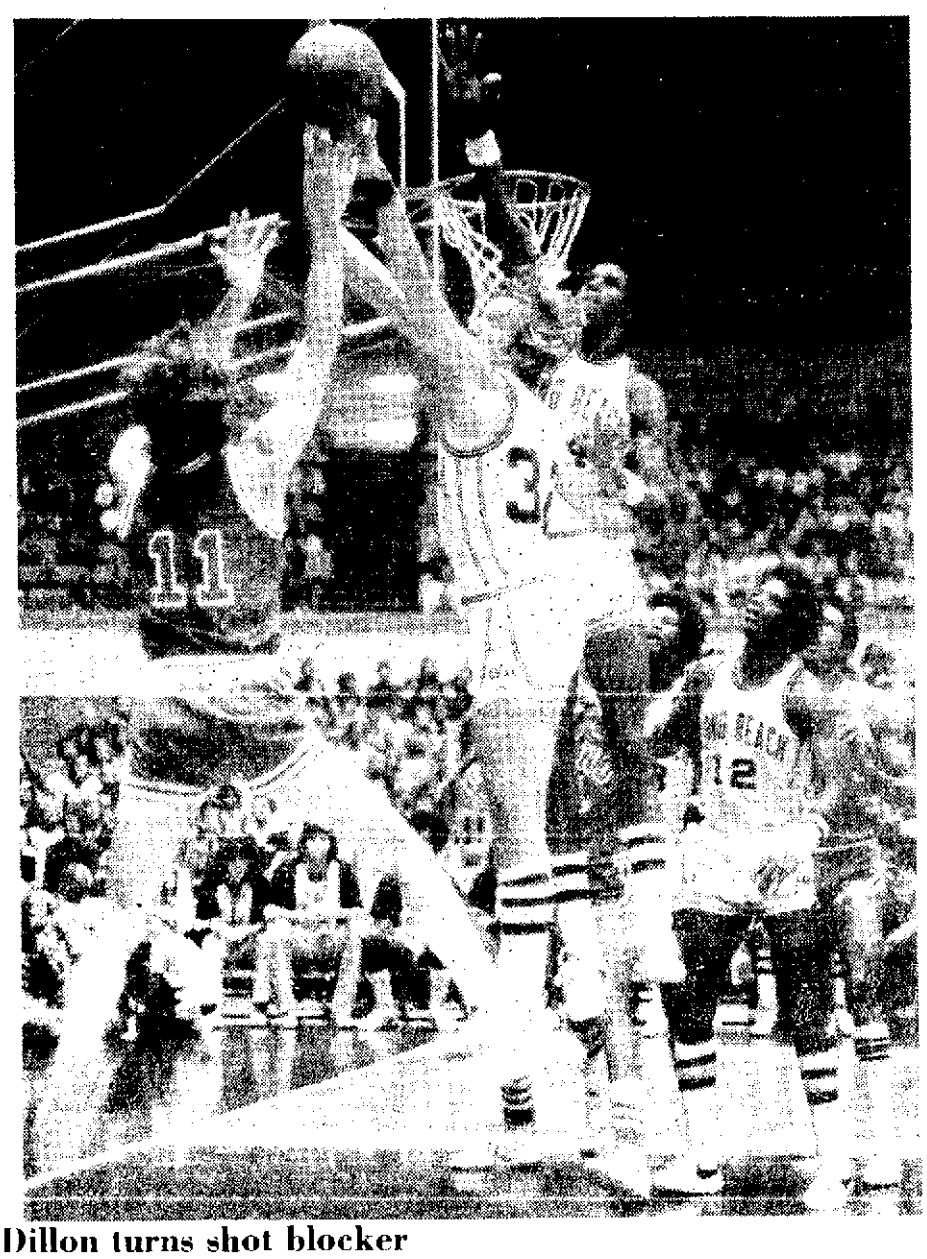

If you could take a plane ride over medieval Europe at about 2,000 feet, you would discover that in every village, the largest structure would be the house of worship, most likely built on the sweat of the peasants.

Take that same ride today, but not at 2,000 feet because you might hit the houses of worship — the Astrodome, Superdome, etc.

These places are built for the gods to play, and if we are part of the culture, there is no escape from some influence. What kind of influence? Blacks do not support any of these stadia on a large scale; in fact, most are being built in white suburbia. Blacks generally are not moved by whether the Buffalo Bills won or lost. Their question is, "Did O.J. dance?"

What you refer to as the Impossible Dream is the only dream in town. That dream is to aspire by whatever means possible. For obvious reasons, blacks choose the area requiring the least amount of capital input — sports included.

For Dwight Jones, basketball has at least one constant.

"It's always nice when you win," says Jones.

Thus, things are "nice" today at Long Beach State for the eighth year in a row.

That's how long Long Beach State basketball teams have been winning Pacific Coast Athletic Association championships.

They got No. 8 Saturday night by dismantling a beleaguered Fresno State, 85-46, before 5,229 Long Beach Arena onlookers, including former 49er consensus all-America Ed Ratleff, presently a member of the NBA's Houston Rockets. Ratleff was honored at halftime.

As they did with No. 7, the 49ers will have to share their current crown.

San Diego State earned a first-place tie with the 49ers by nipping Pacific, 64-63, Saturday night. The Aztecs and 49ers finished 9-3.

"You have to give San Diego credit," said Jones. "We did what we had to do tonight, beat Fresno, and they did what they had to do, win at Pacific. That's quite an accomplishment."

Although the final score certainly disguises the fact, there was a time when it appeared that surviving Saturday night would be quite an accomplishment for the 49ers.

They got their first basket of the game at 19:26 on their pet play, a pass from Dale Dillon to high post Clarence Ruffen, who, if the play works, then passes to Lloyd McMillian for a lay-in.

The series worked that simply against the Bulldogs, McMillian scoring on a slam-dunk, but it was nearly five minutes beore the 49ers were able to score again.

"Fresno is as physical as any team in the conference," said Jones, "and they took us out of a few things we were trying to do."

Pass the ball, for example. The 49ers had seven turnovers in the aforementioned five-minute drought.

But the issue was not as threatening as it might have been.

The 49ers were just as rough defensively when Fresno had the ball and the Bulldogs, who committed five ball-handling errors themselves, led only 7-2 when McMillian produced Long Beach's second field goal on a 15-foot jump shot.

The contest was tied at 7, 9, 11 and 13 before Long Beach, 19-7 on the season, took the lead for good on a pair of free throws by Richard Johnson.

Long Beach led by 11 at intermission and used a swarming defense to put the bite on the Bulldogs in the second half.

The 49ers limited Fresno to eight points in the first nine minutes of the last half and were leading 59-30 when reserve David Nikitin got the Bulldogs their 10th point of the half at 10:39.

Stop the music, UCLA still has to beat USC

By GARY RAUSCH
Staff Writer

With Gene Bartow calling the tunes and Marques Johnson orchestrating like a Leonard Bernstein, UCLA played championship music again Saturday night, recording its 11th successive Pacific-8 Conference basketball title.

Or so it thought.

The Bruins only clinched another trip to the NCAA tournament with their 91-69 rout of California. Fifteen minutes after walking off the Pauley Pavilion floor for their final time this season, they received that long-awaited score from Seattle: Washington 74, Oregon 62.

It was an error.

Somewhere between all the thank yous to the UCLA faithful in the crowd of 12,512 plus seniors Johnson, Jimmy Spillane and Wilbert Olinde, head coach Bartow offered a bouquet to someone many miles away.

"What a great way to win the conference and end the regular season," he was saying. Then his voice sort of trailed off for a moment.

"You kow, I've always liked Marv Harshamn, too," he smiled, "not as much as George Raveling, though."

Pac-8 standings

	League W	L	Pct.	Overall W	L
UCLA	10	1	.909	20	4
Oregon	9	3	.692	18	6
Oregon St.	8	5	.615	19	7
Washington	7	5	.538	15	10
California	6	6	.500	17	13
Stanford	2	10	.166	6	19
USC	2	11	.154	6	17

Saturday's Results
UCLA 91, Cal 69
USC 105, Stanford 84
Oregon 61, Washington 60
Oregon St. 62, Washington St. 74

Better save something for Ralph Miller, Gene.

Thursday evening, Bartow had thanked the Washington State coach for the Cougars' upset of Oregon. Saturday the pearls were sent to the Huskies.

"I believed all along we'd win this thing," Bartow continued, "and I knew it would take an unbelieveable effort for Oregon to gain a split in Washington.

"Anybody winning at Washington and Washington State this year with the type of teams they had would have to be some kind of good. We got out with a split."

Bartow sighed, loosend his tie and sighed again.

"I'm just glad it's over. Boy am I glad it's over."

Stop the presses, stop the music.

Amidst the dancing and merrymaking, slowly filtering into the arena was a report the Ducks had pulled out a 61-60 triumph.

At 10:30 p.m., neither Bartow nor any of his players were still around to retract all those glittering quotes. Suffice to say some of them are in a state of shock today.

Chalk up one error to faulty communications.

What remains now is a possible dead-heat for the Pac-8 crown with one game remaining. The Bruins, though, have clinched at least a tie and close out next week against USC. Oregon plays Oregon State.

Johnson received one of the loudest and longest standing ovations in Pauley Pavilion history. He deserved it after scoring a career-high 37 points, which included shots of every description.

In his greatest scoring effort as a Bruin, the splendid all-America found the net 17 times in 22 attempts from the field and 3 of 5

Arnold, Carfino on tear as USC wins

By DAVID FERRELL
Staff Writer

At the tail end of a dismal season, USC apparently found its three requisites for victory Saturday against Stanford.

One was a weak opponent. The other two were reserves Neil Arnold and Don Carfino.

Picking up for absent starters Marv Safford and Cleve Porter, Arnold and Carfino sparked the Trojans to an easy 105-84 win, their second in 13 Pacific-8 games. It left USC one-half game behind Stanford (2-10) in the conference cellar.

After Safford flew home Friday following the death of his sister, and with Porter suffering a throat ailment, the Trojans' prospects for escaping a last-place season appeared dim — particularly since USC ends its season next week against UCLA.

But Arnold, a sophomore out of Wilson High, got the Trojans' offense working by scoring 10 of his 16 points in the first half.

Then Carfino, a freshman from St. John Bosco, scored 13 of his 18 points in the second half to lead the Trojans' attack after Arnold was benched with four fouls.

Even without two starters, USC

Sargent has big night for Kings

DETROIT (AP) — Kings defenseman Gary Sargent scored two goals and assisted on two others Saturday night, leading coach Bob Pulford's skaters to a 4-3 National Hockey League victory over the Detroit Red Wings in a penalty-filled game.

Referee Bruce Hood called 27 penalties totalling 76 minutes, and Los Angeles scored three power-play goals. Only two nights earlier the Kings and Vancouver were assessed 142 penalty minutes during their brawl-filled contest.

Sargent scored a power play for the only goal of the first period, then set up Bob Berry's ninth goal at 7:14 of the second period to double the Kings' lead.

Detroit needed only 12 seconds to tie the score. Al Cameron scored at 19:31 followed by rookie Bob Ritchie, who collected his third goal in as many games at 19:43.

The Red Wings kept up the pressure in the third period and clicked on Bill Lochead's rinklong skating effort to go ahead at 2:45.

But two more Detroit penalties proved the team's undoing. Butch Goring tied the score again at 3-3 with his 26th goal after taking a perfect pass from Sargent at 4:23.

Then Sargent netted a 30-foot drive at 9:07 for his 10th goal of the season on a combination passing effort with Goring and Mike Murphy, giving the Kings their fourth win in five games with Detroit this season. The other ended in a tie.

The win improved the Kings' season road record to 9-15-6 and enabled L.A. to remain seven points behind Pittsburgh in the struggle for second place in the Norris Division. The Kings enjoy a nine-point cushion over fourth-place Washington.

The contest was tied at 7, 9, 11 and 13 before Long Beach, 19-7 on the season, took the lead for good on a pair of free throws by Richard Johnson.

Long Beach led by 11 at intermission and used a swarming defense to put the bite on the Bulldogs in the second half.

The 49ers limited Fresno to eight points in the first nine minutes of the last half and were leading 59-30 when reserve David Nikitin got the Bulldogs their 10th point of the half at 10:39.

Sargent has big night for Kings

DETROIT (AP) — Kings defenseman Gary Sargent scored two goals and assisted on two others Saturday night, leading coach Bob Pulford's skaters to a 4-3 National Hockey League victory over the Detroit Red Wings in a penalty-filled game.

Referee Bruce Hood called 27 penalties totalling 76 minutes, and Los Angeles scored three power-play goals. Only two nights earlier the Kings and Vancouver were assessed 142 penalty minutes during their brawl-filled contest.

Sargent scored a power play for the only goal of the first period, then set up Bob Berry's ninth goal at 7:14 of the second period to double the Kings' lead.

Detroit needed only 12 seconds to tie the score. Al Cameron scored at 19:31 followed by rookie Bob Ritchie, who collected his third goal in as many games at 19:43.

The Red Wings kept up the pressure in the third period and clicked on Bill Lochead's rinklong skating effort to go ahead at 2:43.

But two more Detroit penalties proved the team's undoing. Butch Goring tied the score again at 3-3 with his 26th goal after taking a perfect pass from Sargent at 4:23.

Then Sargent netted a 30-foot drive at 9:07 for his 10th goal of the season on a combination passing effort with Goring and Mike Murphy, giving the Kings their fourth win in five games with Detroit this season. The other ended in a tie.

The win improved the Kings' season road record to 9-15-6 and enabled L.A. to remain seven points behind Pittsburgh in the struggle for second place in the Norris Division. The Kings enjoy a nine-point cushion over fourth-place Washington.

Stop the music, UCLA still has to beat USC

By GARY RAUSCH
Staff Writer

With Gene Bartow calling the tunes and Marques Johnson orchestrating like a Leonard Bernstein, UCLA played championship music again Saturday night, recording its 11th successive Pacific-8 Conference basketball title.

Or so it thought.

The Bruins only clinched another trip to the NCAA tournament with their 91-69 rout of California. Fifteen minutes after walking off the Pauley Pavilion floor for their final time this season, they received that long-awaited score from Seattle: Washington 74, Oregon 62.

It was an error.

Somewhere between all the thank yous to the UCLA faithful in the crowd of 12,512 plus seniors Johnson, Jimmy Spillane and Wilbert Olinde, head coach Bartow offered a bouquet to someone many miles away.

"What a great way to win the conference and end the regular season," he was saying. Then his voice sort of trailed off for a moment.

"You kow, I've always liked Marv Harshamn, too," he smiled.

"Not as much as George Raveling, though."

Better save something for Ralph Miller, Gene.

Thursday evening, Bartow had thanked the Washington State coach for the Cougars' upset of Oregon. Saturday the pearls were sent to the Huskies.

"I believed all along we'd win this thing," Bartow continued, "and I knew it would take an unbelieveable effort for Oregon to gain a split in Washington.

"Anybody winning at Washington and Washington State this year with the type of teams they had would have to be some kind of good. We got out with a split."

Bartow sighed, loosend his tie and sighed again.

"I'm just glad it's over. Boy am I glad it's over."

Stop the presses, stop the music.

Amidst the dancing and merry-making, slowly filtering into the arena was a report the Ducks had pulled out a 61-60 triumph.

At 10:30 p.m., neither Bartow nor any of his players were still around to retract all those glittering quotes. Suffice to say some of them are in a state of shock today.

Chalk up one error to faulty communications.

What remains now is a possible dead-heat for the Pac-8 crown with one game remaining. The Bruins, though, have clinched at least a tie and close out next week against USC. Oregon plays Oregon State.

Johnson received one of the loudest and longest standing ovations in Pauley Pavilion history. He deserved it after scoring a career-high 37 points, which included shots of every description.

In his greatest scoring effort as a Bruin, the splendid all-America found the net 17 times in 22 attempts from the field and 3 of 5

Arnold, Carfino on tear as USC wins

By DAVID FERRELL
Staff Writer

At the tail end of a dismal season, USC apparently found its three requisites for victory Saturday against Stanford.

One was a weak opponent. The other two were reserves Neil Arnold and Don Carfino.

Picking up for absent starters Mary Safford and Cleve Porter, Arnold and Carfino sparked the Trojans to an easy 105-84 win, their second in 13 Pacific-8 games. It left USC one-half game behind Stanford (2-10) in the conference cellar.

After Safford flew home Friday following the death of his sister, and with Porter suffering a throat ailment, the Trojans' prospects for escaping a last-place season appeared dim — particularly since USC ends its season next week against UCLA.

But Arnold, a sophomore out of Wilson High, got the Trojans' offense working by scoring 10 of his 16 points in the first half.

Then Carfino, a freshman from St. John Bosco, scored 13 of his 18 points in the second half to lead the Trojans' attack after Arnold was benched with four fouls.

Even without two starters, USC

All-star alums blank Lakewood

Lakewood High's Alumni, boosting a starting lineup of seven professional players, blanked the Lancer varsity, 6-0, Saturday night at Mae Boyar Park.

Tony Muser of the Baltimore Orioles captained the old alumns who scored four runs in the fifth inning, the big blow being a bases-loaded double by Larry Martinez.

Seven pitchers, including a trio of former all-CIF selections — Greg Herman, Tom Lederer and Stan Williams — shared in the shutout.

from the free throw line. In addition, he picked off 13 rebounds — one less than game leader David Greenwood — and handed out three assists.

Near the end, the muscular forward couldn't get rid of the basketball. His teammates kept giving it back.

Once he and Spillane played give-and-take down the court until Spillane was in perfect position for a fastbreak layup. Instead, Spillane fed Johnson for what would have been his sixth assist of the night — courtesy of another slam dunk.

But Spillane was whistled for running over Cal guard John Caselli and fouled out on the play. Johnson losing the basket.

Spillane and Greenwood each scored 14 points, the only other Bruins in double figures.

Bartow received excellent play from his bench, notably Ray Townsend and Kiki Vandeweghe. But the night belonged to Johnson.

"I was really emotional tonight," he said afterward. "I was concentrating extra hard, especially in the first half when the game was tight."

California never led and was greatly hampered without talented Gene Ransom in the starting lineup. The high-scoring guard was late for a mid-day team meeting and spent the first 1:39 riding the bench.

When he appeared the Bruins were leading, 13-6. UCLA stretched that to 28-16, half of those points from Johnson.

The margin at intermission was five points after Cal had sliced a 12-point gap to three (34-31).

The second half was mostly Tom Schneiderjohn from the Cal side. He scored 14 points on soft jumpers to finish with 28. Unfortunately he and forwards Doug True and Ray Murray were overmatched on the backboards, 52-38, and therein was a vital factor.

49ERS WIN—

Long Beach responded with a three-point play from Johnson, who made a spectacular, spinning layin off a pass from Dillon, and then converted the free throw.

Things went remarkably well for Long Beach offensively, too, in that span. The 49ers converted two three-point plays and got two field goals off jump balls when first Dillon and then Johnson tipped the ball to McMillian, who turned to score lay-ins.

McMillian scored 18 points, freshman Michael Wiley added 15 and Johnson 14 as the 49ers' got scoring from 11 of the 13 cagers who played. Fresno had only one player, Eddie Adams (19), in double figures.

Clarence Ruffen (10) and McMillian (9) led Long Beach to a staggering 55-33 domination of the backboards.

But it was the defense that delighted Jones most. Only four minutes remained when Fresno finally scored its 40th point and there were only 2:57 left when the Bulldogs got to 42.

"That was probably our best defensive effort of the year," said Jones, whose troops are idle until they meet a yet to be determined foe in the PCAA tournament Saturday night at the Anaheim Convention Center.

The other six teams in the conference play qualifying games Wednesday night for the right to join the 49ers at Anaheim. Those games have Fresno at San Diego; Santa Barbara at San Jose and Pacific at Fullerton.

Long Beach's Saturday night opponent will be determined by the outcome of the first-round games.

The winner of the PCAA tournament qualifies for the first round of the NCAA playoffs at Pocatello, Idaho on Saturday, Mar. 12.

Johnson says the 49ers don't care who they meet in the PCAA tournament.

"We're glad to be going to the tournament," said Johnson, noting that the 49ers were barred from that activity last season because they were on NCAA probation.

"It doesn't matter who we play," added Johnson, "as long as we play defense the way we did tonight. If we do that, we'll be all right."

UCLA BREEZES—

from the free throw line. In addition, he picked off 13 rebounds — one less than game leader David Greenwood — and handed out three assists.

Near the end, the muscular forward couldn't get rid of the basketball. His temmates kept giving it back.

Once he and Spillane played give-and-take down the court until Spillane was in perfect position for a fastbreak layup. Instead, Spillane fed Johnson for what would have been his sixth assist of the night — courtesy of another slam dunk.

But Spillane was whstled for running over Cal guard John Caselli and fouled out on the play, Johnson losing the basket.

Spillane and Greenwood each scored 14 points, the only other Bruins in double figures.

Bartow received excellent play from his bench, notably Ray Townsend and Kiki Vandeweghe. But the night belonged to Johnson.

"I was really emotional tonight," he said afterward. "I was concentrating extra hard, especially in the first half when the game was tight."

California never led and was greatly hampered without talented Gene Ransom in the starting lineup. The high-scoring guard was late fora mid-day team meeting and spent the first 4:39 riding the bench.

When he appeared the Bruins were leading, 13-6. UCLA stretched that to 28-16, half of those points from Johnson.

The margin at intermission was five points after Cal had sliced a 12-point gap to three (34-31).

The second half was mostly Tom Schneiderjohn from the Cal side. He scored 14 points on soft jumpers to finish with 28. Unfortunately he and forwards Doug True and Ray Murray were overmatched on the backboards, 52-38, and therein was a vital factor.

Long Beach responded with a three-point play from Johnson, who made a spectacular, spinning layin off a pass from Dillon, and then converted the free throw.

Things went remarkably well for Long Beach offensively, too, in that span. The 49ers converted two three-point plays and got two field goals off jump balls when first Dillon and then Johnson tipped the ball to McMillian, who turned to score lay-ins.

McMillian scored 18 points, freshman Michael Wiley added 15 and Johnson 14 as the 49ers' got scoring from 11 of the 13 cagers who played. Fresno had only one player, Eddie Adams (19), in double figures.

Clarence Ruffen (10) and McMillian (9) led Long Beach to a staggering 55-33 domination of the backboards.

But it was the defense that delighted Jones most. Only four minutes remained when Fresno finally scored its 40th point and there were only 2:57 left when the Bulldogs got to 42.

"That was probably our best defensive effort of the year," said Jones, whose troops are idle until they meet a yet to be determined foe in the PCAA tournament Saturday night at the Anaheim Convention Center.

The other six teams in the conference play qualifying games Wednesday night for the right to join the 49ers at Anaheim. Those games have Fresno at San Diego; Santa Barbara at San Jose and Pacific at Fullerton.

Long Beach's Saturday night opponent will be determined by the outcome of the first-round games.

The winner of the PCAA tournament qualifies for the first round of the NCAA playoffs at Pocatello, Idaho on Saturday, Mar. 12.

Johnson says the 49ers don't care who they meet in the PCAA tournament.

"We're glad to be going to the tournament," said Johnson, noting that the 49ers were barred from that activity last season because they were on NCAA probation."

"It doesn't matter who we play," added Johnson, "as long as we play defense the way we did tonight. If we do that, we'll be all right."

Other Reggie doffs hat to Jackson, but...

REGGIE SMITH

...no ego problem comparing abilities

RICH ROBERTS

Who's who in sports?
Richard.
Petty.
Right. Jerry.
West.
Okay. Reggie.
Jackson.
Wrong. Smith.
Who?

"I've got to take my hat off to him," says Carl Reginald Smith, Dodger outfielder, not to be confused with Reginald Martinez Jackson, Yankee, at least for this season.

"He's made himself well-known, he's quite outspoken, and being in the World Series with the A's all those years did not hurt him.

"But I have no ego problem in trying to compare with him. I'm very proud of my statistics and the things I've been able to accomplish. It's a matter of personalities. He needs that. But I'm going to do it my way."

> "I've been fortunate in my career. A lot of good things have happened to me. Now I have a chance to play before the hometown folks when I'm at my best. How many players can do that?"

STILL, THE public persists in being confused by two guys named Reggie playing the same game.

"Quite often," sighs Reggie Smith, "and by people I've known for quite awhile.

"Most recently it was in the American Airlines golf tournament at Scottsdale—a city he went to school in. People would come up and start talking to me thinking I was Reggie Jackson. I'd have to tell 'em, 'I'm the other Reggie.' They'd be embarrassed, but I'd try to handle it in a way so as not to hurt anybody's feelings. We do look somewhat similar. It doesn't bother me."

Reggie Smith certainly is a different personality than the restless, moody Jackson, a man of another pinstripe. When the other Reggie was a free agent this winter, it was suspected that the Dodgers were not seriously interested in him because he didn't fit the club's true blue image, which does not tolerate mavericks for long.

"I don't know if I fit that mold," says Reggie Smith, who arrived in trade from the St. Louis Cardinals last June and will embark on the Dodger airplane to the Dodgers' spring training base in Dodgertown, Fla., Monday.

"I have been somewhat outspoken when I felt it was necessary. If I feel waves need to be made, I'll make them. In Boston I spoke up, in St. Louis . . ."

SMITH, WHO will be 32 in April, played the first seven seasons of his major league life with the Red Sox until he asked out. They were not years without controversy.

"I was asked how I felt about a statement Bill Russell had made, that Boston was a racist city. I agreed with it, that it was."

Later developments indicated Smith and Russell—the former Celtic, not the Dodger shortstop—were correct.

"I pointed out some things that were happening and things that could happen," Reggie says, "and that was with the (school) integration."

The busing riots are documented.

"It's deplorable the way it was handled," Reggie says. "The kids themselves became involved because they found it was all right to do so because of the way the parents handled it."

SMITH WAS born in Shreveport, La., and although he and his wife Ernestine were raised in Compton their home was in Massachusetts, where Reggie worked.

"We tried to stay together as a family," he says, "especially when the kids were young."

Reggie Jr. is going on 9; Nicole was just 5. Although they weren't affected by a busing controversy in Boston, it appears they will be in Los Angeles. Their home is in Chatsworth, which is part of the L.A. Unified School District.

"As far as busing is concerned," Smith says, "I feel something has to be done to create a better balance of education. But I can't sympathize with busing more than a few miles away. There are enough schools in the area."

Reggie has taken a firm stand concerning his son: "I won't allow him to be bused."

THAT WASN'T really the issue that soured him on the Red Sox. He wanted certain provisions in his contract that Tom Yawkey, one of baseball's old and respected guard, was not prepared to consider.

Although St. Louis was not his dream, moving from the American to the National League, he says, "gave me a chance to become the ballplayer I was capable of being.

"I've done that in the National League because this league's style of play is more suited to me . . . the over-all aggressiveness of the league. There are better ballplayers so it brings out the best in you. It's definitely more competitive."

Smith's lifetime batting average is .284 and he usually hits more than 20 home runs, swinging from either side of the plate. He has topped .300 five times—something the other Reggie has never done. That he now finds himself employed in his hometown is more inspiration than he needs.

Unseen forces were at work last summer when the Dodgers acquired Smith for catcher Joe Ferguson and a couple of minor leaguers. During his two-plus seasons with the Cardinals, Reggie never had moved his family's year-round residence from New England.

"My wife left Massachusetts in our motor home about three days before the trade was made and arrived in St. Louis just in time for it to be announced," he says. "A day later we were on our way here."

THE INCREDIBLE coincidence is that the Smiths already had planned to move into a new house in Chatsworth. Instead, they arrived prematurely and stayed with his in-laws in Compton until the house was ready.

"After last winter," Reggie explains, "when I spent part of January and February in Palm Springs where it was 88 or 90 every day, we went back home, stepped off the plane and it was 18 degrees, with a 25-mph wind. I remember I was crying because I couldn't hold the luggage to put it in the car.

"It was at that time we decided we'd start making plans to move back home. Ten years was enough.

"My boy's going to be a pretty good athlete and my daughter is very well coordinated. I thought they would have the best chance of developing out here, and it would give us the opportunity to do more of the things we enjoy doing as a family. And, our families were here.

"I intend finishing my career here because I don't want to play in the Midwest or back East anymore. I won't go.

"I've been fortunate in my career. A lot of good things have happened to me. Now I have a chance to play before the hometown folks when I'm at my best. How many players can do that?"

SMITH IS sincerely appreciative of his situation.

Recently, he was asked about the "pressure" of playing in his hometown.

"Baseball you play for fun," he replied evenly. "Pressure is when you have a wife, two kids, a car and a house, and you're trying to make it on unemployment."

Reggie admits that the 15 years he's put into baseball is "a big chunk out of my life, but playing baseball has allowed me a certain economic mobility that I wouldn't have working 9 to 5, and with this economic mobility I have enjoyed living in different parts of the country, going on nice vacations with the kids, being able to afford the motor home, living in a nice house and eating in nice restaurants."

Smith shudders to think how near he came to never playing. While at Centennial High, he was summoned to Dodger Stadium for a tryout with the visiting Houston Astros.

"One thing I could do is throw," he says.

A little too well, it seems. While Reggie was warming up for infield practice, Sandy Koufax and Don Drysdale were nearby hitting fungoes to the outfield. A throw got away from Reggie and missed Koufax—at the time, perhaps the most valuable property in baseball—by a fraction of an inch.

"I thought I had him," Reggie says. "I couldn't even yell to say 'look out!' The only thing I could think of was if I had hit him, I'd never have played."

And there never would have been another Reggie.

BUD TUCKER

Nordskog, 63, going too fast for age to catch up with him

Significantly, the departures of Hoyt Wilhelm, Sam Snead and George Blanda marked a sharp decline in matrimony and real estate sales.

That is, the older gentlemen were no longer moving out of rest homes and getting married and buying houses near schools.

The geriatric set has been fearing the banner was dropped but the fraternity may now leap from the rocking chairs and dance the night away. Simple sleuthing has uncovered a replacement for the heroes mentioned above.

As a matter of fact, this guy may make the others look like wet-noised infants.

His name is Bob Nordskog and he drives power boats, the kind that bounce over and smash into ocean waves at nearly 100 m.p.h., and punish the structure of the driver accordingly.

Bob Nordskog is 63 years old. He has been engaged in this dodge for 14 years which is news inasmuch as the human body lasts an average of four to five seasons of this off-shore abuse.

ASKED to explain his quite remarkable endurance in a word, Nordskog replies in two words:

"Beefeater martinis."

At once, you recognize Nordskog as your kind of guy. As a matter of fact, there is nothing noticeably drab about the entire scene of power boat racing.

The next major event in the championship series of the American Power Boat Racing Association is scheduled for Newport Beach March 5. It is sponsored by Bushmills, a brand of whiskey concocted in Ireland.

Another is held under the auspices of Bicardi, a rum. Another is sponsored by Strohs, a beer.

This type of wholesome sports sponsorship is gratifying. I mean, such things as auto racing and ladies tennis are sponsored by cigarettes which the surgeon general says can be hazardous to your health.

For that matter, so can power boat racing. Nordskog has broken 80 per cent of the bones in his body. He once walked away from a crash with a broken hip without realizing the serious nature of the damage. That evening, he attended the post-race cocktail party with the aid of a crutch.

"After a few martinis," he recalls, "I threw away the crutch."

POWER boat races are also loaded in the other respect. This is necessary to playing the game since a competitive machine costs in the neighborhood of $100,000. The roster of championship drivers contains the names of no shoe clerks.

Nordskog is in manufacturing and publishing. He will drive a brand new boat called "the Snake" at Newport. This is a 1977 model, full factory equipped, but no finance company is involved.

No frail craft will do. The course for the Bushmille Grand Prix starts at Newport and goes out to Catalina Island and back. The duration of the race is 193.49 statute miles which involves something like 2½ hours of pounding.

The defending champion at Newport Beach is Rocky Aoki. Rocky pays for his racing habit with a chain of Japanese restaurants where the chefs prepare fish heads and rice at your table.

Driver Sandy Satullo is also a restaurateur whose chain serves steak cooked in an ordinary fashion.

TOM GENTRY is one of the foremost land developers and builders in Hawaii. His only problem is running out of ground.

Billy Martin manufactures furniture. Preston Henn operates a chain of movie theaters showing the sort of film not always available at church socials.

While Nordskog champions the senior citizens, the women's liberation movement also has a standard bearer in power boat racing. Betty Cook of Newport Beach pilots a boat entitled Kasma.

In keeping pace with some of the other ladies in racing, such as Janet Guthrie and Arlene Hiss, Cook has never won a race but she is respected as a top driver. No chauvenist, Bob Nordskog enjoys racing against a female driver but departs slightly when asked how he would react to his own wife coming home to announce she had entered a power boat race.

"I'd do the same thing Betty Cook's husband did," Nordskog replies. "I'd leave her."

Refuses to concede to Cincinnati

Color Lasorda enthusiastic

By GORDON VERRELL
Staff Writer

Tommy Lasorda was halfway through his steak when the waitress stopped to ask if he wanted another martini.

Noticing the girl's name tag, Tommy smiled, then kiddingly snarled, "What I want is another waitress."

Well, of course. Her name was Sparky.

Lasorda got his martini — but he didn't get a new waitress. And he doesn't figure to dispatch the other Sparky — as in Cincinnati's Sparky Anderson — any easier.

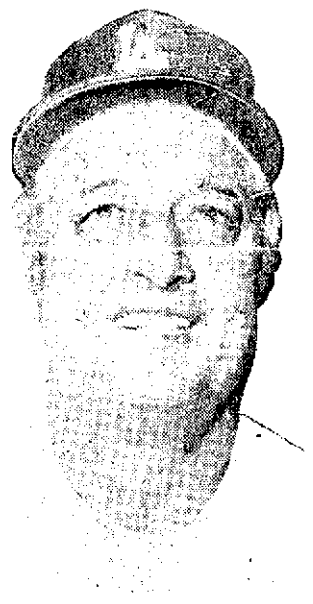

But that hasn't dimmed Lasorda's enthusiasm in the slightest as he prepares for his first spring as manager of the Dodgers.

It all begins officially Monday morning when the Dodgers pile on the club's 720-B jet, the Kay-O II, for the flight to Vero Beach.

ASKED when the plane leaves, Lasorda downed his second martini and said, "When Garvey and those other guys get there."

Which is to say, Lasorda's first job as a big league manager isn't going to be a cupcake.

When Lasorda started playing baseball 32 years ago, if the manager said, "Take a lap," everyone jumped up and took a lap, no questions asked, or if might mean another summer in Class D ball. Today, though, they're liable to say, "Go see my agent," or "It's not in my contract" or "Bug off."

TOMMY LASORDA
Going after Sparky

"They're all making a lot of money," Lasorda understated, "and a lot of 'em have long contracts. I know all that.

"But I've never mentioned money — not once. All I'm asking of any of them is that they earn what they're getting."

For some, that might be difficult. Steve Garvey, for example, just signed for six years at something between $1.5 million and $2 million, the longest and, undoubtedly, the biggest contract in Dodger history.

"Garvey is just going to have to be a little bit better than everybody else, that's all," said Lasorda, adding, "I believe that he will."

As for his reported request of Garvey that he should focus more on the long ball, Lasorda said:

"I'm not asking him to change. Getting 200 hits in a season (Garvey has accomplished this the last three years) is a great thing.

"But when the Penguin (that's a Lasorda-ism for Ron Cey) comes up in the late innings with a couple of guys on base, everyone — I mean everyone . . . the guys on the bench, the other team, the fans and the guys in the press box — knows he's going for a home run. I'd like them to think the same thing about Garvey."

THAT'S one thing Lasorda has in mind for the month in Florida. What else?

"It's not really going to be a training camp," he said. "More than anything, it's going to be a time for refinement of each one's ability.

"With the acquisition of Rick Monday, Mike Garman and Johnny Oates, plus a healthy Reggie Smith and Dave Lopes, right now we're definitely stronger than we were last year.

"Our pitching is outstanding. The infield is set. Also, it's the first time in a long while we've had an outfield as fine as the one we've got now, with (Dusty) Baker in left, Monday in center and Smith in right.

"This spring we'll be working on becoming aggressive on the basepaths, not just stealing bases, but everything. When a guy leaves the plate I want him leaving with a double in mind, not just a single."

LASORDA says, too, that part of his so-called theme for spring training will be togetherness, something the Dodgers haven't exactly majored in the past few summers.

"That's my job," he said. "One guy may not like another guy socially. I don't care. But I want everyone pulling together on the field. That's what I do care about."

As for catching the Reds, the club that buried the Dodgers by 20 and 10 games the last two seasons, Lasorda said:

"First of all, I've never put on a uniform — as a player, coach or minor league manager — that I didn't think I could win.

"Anyway, it's not just the Reds. It's the entire National League. Beating the Mets or the Astros or whoever counts as a win just as much as beating the Reds.

"I'm not concerned with 1975 or 1976. There's nothing I can do about that. But there is something I can do about 1977."

It's the optimistic, enthusiasic Thomas Charles Lasorda at his best.

"Wanna know how optimistic I am?" he asked. "Well, it's like when my daddy used to beat my tail. I used to think how good it was going to feel when he stopped. Hell, I had to think of something good."

Lasorda offered some other observations for spring.

• On Dusty Baker: "I believe in Dusty Baker. I just hope he believes in himself as much as I believe in him. I remember when Houston gave up on a guy and traded him to Cincinnati. Yeah, Joe Morgan. What's he done lately? I say Dusty can play. I said the same thing about Burt Hooton when we got him and he proved that he could pitch — and don't forget, he got off to a bad start, too."

• On Al Downing: "I told Al to go to spring training and prepare himself to be a relief pitcher. Yes, I plan on using Al Downing. I believe there's a lot of good pitching left in him."

• On Steve Yeager: "He's the best defensive catcher in the game, a great arm and great instincts. I believe he can hit 50 points higher (he hit .214 in 1976). Jim Gilliam (the new batting instructor) will work with him."

• On Lee Lacy: "I told him he's the John Havlicek of the Dodgers. He can play on the infield and in the outfield, he can pinch hit and he can pinch run. He's a valuable part of this club."

• On new relief pitcher Mike Garman: "He can help us. He was a little fat last year but I told Al (vice president Al Campanis) to get him. He did . . . and the Cubs threw in Rick Monday, too."

"My boy's going to be a pretty good athlete and my daughter is very well coordinated. I thought they would have the best chance of developing out here, and it would give us the opportunity to do more of the things we enjoy doing as a family. And, our families were here.

"I intend finishing my career here because I don't want to play in the Midwest or back East anymore. I won't go.

"I've been fortunate in my career. A lot of good things have happened to me. Now I have a chance to play before the hometown folks when I'm at my best. How many players can do that?"

SMITH IS sincerely appreciative of his situation.

Recently, he was asked about the "pressure" of playing in his hometown.

"Baseball you play for fun," he replied evenly. "Pressure is when you have a wife, two kids, a car and a house, and you're trying to make it on unemployment."

Reggie admits that the 15 years he's put into baseball is "a big chunk out of my life, but playing baseball has allowed me a certain economic mobility that I wouldn't have working 9 to 5, and with this economic mobility I have enjoyed living in different parts of the country, going on nice vacations with the kids, being able to afford the motor home, living in a nice house and eating in nice restaurants."

Smith shudders to think how near he came to never playing. While at Centennial High, he was summoned to Dodger Stadium for a tryout with the visiting Houston Astros.

"One thing I could do is throw," he says.

A little too well, it seems. While Reggie was warming up for infield practice, Sandy Koufax and Don Drysdale were nearby hitting fungoes to the outfield. A throw got away from Reggie and missed Koufax—at the time, perhaps the most valuable property in baseball—by a fraction of an inch.

"I thought I had him," Reggie says. "I couldn't even yell to say 'look out!' The only thing I could think of was if I had hit him, I'd never have played."

And there never would have been another Reggie.

BUD TUCKER

Nordskog, 63, going too fast for age to catch up with him

Significantly, the departures of Hoyt Wilhelm, Sam Snead and George Blanda marked a sharp decline in matrimony and real estate sales.

That is, the older gentlemen were no longer moving out of rest homes and getting married and buying houses near schools.

The geriatric set has been fearing the banner was dropped but the fraternity may now leap from the rocking chairs and dance the night away. Simple sleuthing has uncovered a replacement for the heroes mentioned above.

As a matter of fact, this guy may make the others look like wet-noised infants.

His name is Bob Nordskog and he drives power boats, the kind that bounce over and smash into ocean waves at nearly 100 m.p.h., and punish the structure of the driver accordingly.

Bob Nordskog is 63 years old. He has been engaged in this dodge for 14 years which is news inasmuch as the human body lasts an average of four to five seasons of this off-shore abuse.

ASKED to explain his quite remarkable endurance in a word, Nordskog replies in two words:

"Beefeater martinis."

At once, you recognize Nordskog as your kind of guy. As a matter of fact, there is nothing noticeably drab about the entire scene of power boat racing.

The next major event in the championship series of the American Power Boat Racing Association is scheduled for Newport Beach March 5. It is sponsored by Bushmills, a brand of whiskey concocted in Ireland.

Another is held under the auspices of Bicardi, a rum. Another is sponsored by Strohs, a beer.

This type of wholesome sports sponsorship is gratifying. I mean, such things as auto racing and ladies tennis are sponsored by cigarettes which the surgeon general says can be hazardous to your health.

For that matter, so can power boat racing. Nordskog has broken 80 per cent of the bones in his body. He once walked away from a crash with a broken hip without realizing the serious nature of the damage. That evening, he attended the post-race cocktail party with the aid of a crutch.

"After a few martinis," he recalls, "I threw away the crutch."

POWER boat races are also loaded in the other respect. This is necessary to playing the game since a competitive machine costs in the neighborhood of $100,000. The roster of championship drivers contains the names of no shoe clerks.

Nordskog is in manufacturing and publishing. He will drive a brand new boat called "the Snake" at Newport. This is a 1977 model, full factory equipped, but no finance company is involved.

No frail craft will do. The course for the Bushmille Grand Prix starts at Newport and goes out to Catalina Island and back. The duration of the race is 193.49 statute miles which involves something like 2½ hours of pounding.

The defending champion at Newport Beach is Rocky Aoki. Rocky pays for his racing habit with a chain of Japanese restaurants where the chefs prepare fish heads and rice at your table.

Driver Sandy Satullo is also a restaurateur whose chain serves steak cooked in an ordinary fashion.

TOM GENTRY is one of the foremost land developers and builders in Hawaii. His only problem is running out of ground.

Billy Martin manufactures furniture. Preston Henn operates a chain of movie theaters showing the sort of film not always available at church socials.

While Nordskog champions the senior citizens, the women's liberation movement also has a standard bearer in power boat racing. Betty Cook of Newport Beach pilots a boat entitled Kasma.

In keeping pace with some of the other ladies in racing, such as Janet Guthrie and Arlene Hiss, Cook has never won a race but she is respected as a top driver. No chauvenist, Bob Nordskog enjoys racing against a female driver but departs slightly when asked how he would react to his own wife coming home to announce she had entered a power boat race.

"I'd do the same thing Betty Cook's husband did," Nordskog replies. "I'd leave her."

Refuses to concede to Cincinnati

Color Lasorda enthusiastic

By GORDON VERRELL
Staff Writer

Tommy Lasorda was halfway through his steak when the waitress stopped to ask if he wanted another martini.

Noticing the girl's name tag, Tommy smiled, then kiddingly snarled. "What I want is another waitress."

Well, of course. Her name was Sparky.

Lasorda got his martini — but he didn't get a new waitress. And he doesn't figure to dispatch the other Sparky — as in Cincinnati's Sparky Anderson — any easier.

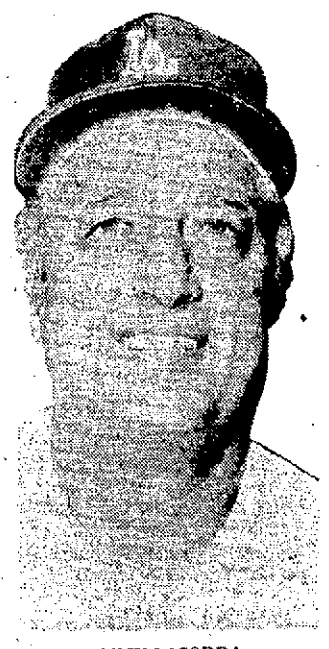

But that hasn't dimmed Lasorda's enthusiasm in the slightest as he prepares for his first spring as manager of the Dodgers.

It all begins officially Monday morning when the Dodgers pile on the club's 720-B jet, the Kay-O II, for the flight to Vero Beach.

ASKED when the plane leaves, Lasorda downed his second martini and said, "When Garvey and those other guys get there."

Which is to say, Lasorda's first job as a big league manager isn't going to be a cupcake.

When Lasorda started playing baseball 32 years ago, if the manager said, "Take a lap," everyone jumped up and took a lap, no questions asked, or it might mean another summer in Class D ball. Today, though, they're liable to say, "Go see my agent," or "It's not in my contract" or "Bug off."

TOMMY LASORDA
Going after Sparky

"They're all making a lot of money," Lasorda understated, "and a lot of 'em have long contracts. I know all that.

"But I've never mentioned money — not once. All I'm asking of any of them is that they earn what they're getting."

For some, that might be difficult. Steve Garvey, for example, just signed for six years at something between $1.5 million and $2 million, the longest and, undoubtedly, the biggest contract in Dodger history.

"Garvey is just going to have to be a little bit better than everybody else, that's all," said Lasorda, adding, "I believe that he will."

As for his reported request of Garvey that he should focus more on the long ball, Lasorda said:

"I'm not asking him to change. Getting 200 hits in a season (Garvey has accomplished this the last three years) is a great thing.

"But when the Penguin (that's a Lasorda-ism for Ron Cey) comes up in the late innings with a couple of guys on base, everyone — I mean everyone . . . the guys on the bench, the other team, the fans and the guys in the press box — knows he's going for a home run. I'd like them to think the same thing about Garvey."

THAT'S one thing Lasorda has in mind for the month in Florida. What else?

"It's not really going to be a training camp," he said. "More than anything, it's going to be a time for refinement of each one's ability.

"With the acquisition of Rick Monday, Mike Garman and Johnny Oates, plus a healthy Reggie Smith and Dave Lopes, right now we're definitely stronger than we were last year.

"Our pitching is outstanding. The infield is set. Also, it's the first time in a long while we've had an outfield as fine as the one we've got now, with (Dusty) Baker in left, Monday in center and Smith in right.

"This spring we'll be working on becoming aggressive on the basepaths, not just stealing bases, but everything. When a guy leaves the plate I want him leaving with a double in mind, not just a single."

LASORDA says, too, that part of his so-called theme for spring training will be togetherness, something the Dodgers haven't exactly majored in the past few summers.

"That's my job," he said. "One guy may not like another guy socially, I don't care. But I want everyone pulling together on the field. That's what I do care about."

As for catching the Reds, the club that buried the Dodgers by 20 and 10 games the last two seasons, Lasorda said:

"First of all, I've never put on a uniform — as a player, coach or minor league manager — that I didn't think I could win.

"Anyway, it's not just the Reds. It's the entire National League. Beating the Mets or the Astros or whoever counts as a win just as much as beating the Reds.

"I'm not concerned with 1975 or 1976. There's nothing I can do about that. But there is something I can do about 1977."

It's the optimistic, enthusiasic Thomas Charles Lasorda at his best.

"Wanna know how optimistic I am?" he asked. "Well, it's like when my daddy used to beat my tail. I used to think how good it was going to feel when he stopped. Hell, I had to think of something good."

Lasorda offered some other observations for spring.

• On Dusty Baker: "I believe in Dusty Baker. I just hope he believes in himself as much as I believe in him. I remember when Houston gave up on a guy and traded him to Cincinnati. Yeah, Joe Morgan. What's he done lately? I say Dusty can play. I said the same thing about Burt Hooton when we got him and he proved that he could pitch — and don't forget, he got off to a bad start, too."

• On Al Downing: "I told Al to go to spring training and prepare himself to be a relief pitcher. Yes, I plan on using Al Downing. I believe there's a lot of good pitching left in him."

• On Steve Yeager: "He's the best defensive catcher in the game, a great arm and great instincts. I believe he can hit 50 points higher (he hit .214 in 1976). Jim Gilliam (the new batting instructor) will work with him."

• On Lee Lacy: "I told him he's the John Havlicek of the Dodgers. He can play on the infield and in the outfield, he can pinch hit and he can pinch run. He's a valuable part of this club."

• On new relief pitcher Mike Garman: "He can help us. He was a little fat last year but I told Al (vice president Al Campanis) to get him. He did . . . and the Cubs threw in Rick Monday, too."

Have another martini, Tom!

Angels banging ball in spring, tra la

HOLTVILLE (AP) — Outfielder Joe Rudi made his spring debut for the Angels as manager Norm Sherry welcomed 46 players for the team's first full-scale workout Saturday.

Infielder Mario Guerrero and outfielders Rusty Torres and Gil Flores missed the drill, but were expected to arrive later to complete the 49-man squad.

"This is our fifth day in camp," said Sherry, "and I'm very pleased with the attitude and performance of all our players in both the fundamental and hitting drills. Our sole purpose in starting camp at a relatively early date is to get the team in the best physical condition possible for the start of the season.

"I guess you could say the only real difference between this camp and previous Angels' camps is perhaps a more relaxed atmosphere and a whole lot more hitting," Sherry concluded.

First baseman Willie Mays Aikens, the 1976 Texas League home run champion for El Paso, hit a towering home run over the right field fence and rookie outfielder Frankie George homered to left to highlight the batting drill.

Second baseman Jerry Remy and catcher Danny Goodrich also were impressive during the hitting session.

Outfielder Bobby Bonds confined to his room for the past 48 hours with a mild case of bronchitis, returned to participate in the 3½-hour workout. Teammate Bobby Grich remained sidelined with muscle spasms in his back. Grich was expected to resume training within the next few days.

Sackl's 'perfect run' wins slalom

FURANO, Japan (AP) — Regina Sackl, slashing down the women's slalom course in what her coach called a perfect second run, beat Austrian teammate Annemarie Moser-Proell by .14 of a second for first place Saturday in World Cup ski competition.

"I still can't believe I won," Miss Sackl said after scoring Austria's second victory in two races at Furano. Hans Hinterseer won the men's giant slalom Friday.

The 17-year-old art enthusiast was second behind Moser-Proell after her first run of 56.65 seconds and then turned in the afternoon's best time of 55.34 for a total of one minute, 51.99 seconds on the 590-meter, 60-gate course.

Five-time World Cup champion Moser-Proell, who said she had no special problems on her second run, had times of 56.13-56.00—1:52.13.

Her second place gave her 20 World Cup points, but she still trailed, 238 points to 211, behind Switzerland's Lise-Marie Morerod, who ran into a gate, went off balance with her ski pole between her skis and fell midway through the first run.

Christin Cooper, 17, of Sun Valley, Idaho, was within 0.66 seconds of Moser-Proell after the first round, but ended up 13th with runs of 56.79-57.54—1:54.33.

Teammate Abbi Fisher, 19, of South Conway, N.H., moved up with a good second run and finished fifth in 57.09-55.85—1:52.94.

World Cup standings:

1. Lise-Marie Morerod, Switzerland, 238; 2. Annemarie Moser-Proell, Austria, 211; 3. Monika Kaserer, Austria, 156; 4. Brigitte Habersatter, Austria, 148; 5. Hanni Wenzel, Liechtenstein, 142; 6. Marie-Therese Nadig, Switzerland, 122; 7. Perrine Pelen, France, 101; 8. Claudia Giordani, Italy, 97; 9. Bernadette Zurbriggen, Switzerland, 78; 10. Fabienne Serrat, France, 77.

Jack's 69 can't hold off charge

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. (AP) — "I played well. I can't complain. Guys just started playing a little better," Jack Nicklaus said Saturday after seeing his lead slipped to one stroke in the $250,000 Jackie Gleason-Inverrary Classic.

Nicklaus, who has never finished worse than sixth in five previous tournaments on the 7,127-yard Inverrary Golf and Country Club course, stood at 11-under 205 after 54 holes following a three-under 69 Saturday.

The four-shot advantage entering Saturday's round evaporated under the seven-under charge of Gil Morgan. Closing to within two strokes was first round leader Gary Player, who had a six-under 66.

Four shots back was Fuzzy Zoeller, who carded a 68. At a five-under 211, six shots off the pace, were Tom Weiskopf and Bob Murphy.

Nicklaus wasn't sure what would be required of him to maintain his lead and pocket the $50,000 top prize.

"I might shoot a 69 tomorrow and win the tournament by five shots," he said. "Then again, I might shoot a 69 and have three guys beat me."

Nicklaus started out his round with a bogey five and playing partner Floyd scored a birdie on the first hole to move within two shots of the lead. But Nicklaus had no more bogeys and Floyd had three of them to come in at 73 and drop to 213.

"Today I played better and more poised than the other two days. I just didn't make as many putts," said Nicklaus, who had earlier rounds of 70 and 66. "I made a six foot putt today and that was it."

His bogey on No. 1 came after he caught a bunker with his drive.

Morgan, 29, who has never won since joining the tour in 1973 but ranked 42nd in earnings last year with $61,372, had seven birdies in an errorless round.

"I kept the ball in play. That always makes it a little easier," said Morgan, admitting he had his work cut out Sunday.

"You shoot even par the last day and five or six guys can go by you," said Morgan of his need for a strong finish.

Morgan, who has won $15,000 already this year, drew attention last year with rounds of 66 and 68 which gave him a four-shot lead halfway through the PGA Championship. But he faded to 75s on the final two days to tie for eighth.

Player had only one bogey in his round and said, "The most amazing thing is the best round of the three days was the 73 I had Friday."

He said he had "mental blackout" on the 198-yard par-3 third hole Friday which left him with a double bogey. He said he could have moved the ball out of the water but instead took three swings to advance.

BLACKS IN SPORT—

Yes, the reason the door closed behind you was because it takes money to become a tennis or golf professional, a lawyer, doctor or engineer. If you read every book in the library, it will not remove the racial prejudices that exist in labor unions governing construction work.

BLACKS HAVE to sing, dance, run and jump just to get an education, and we have just emerged from a time when blacks were "employed" in colleges rather than enrolled. It would have been heart warming to hear you advise the young artists to negotiate for medical or law-school funds when their bodies were up for hire.

I was appalled and grieved over your view of "ghetto" (a word you heard at UCLA). Grieved because you are void of that experience — therefore void of the sensitivities, the language, the perspectives that along with a formal education are the best tools a minority can have to gain widespread understanding.

Muhammad Ali does not have a formal education but his sensitivities are unmatched. I wonder if he would allow South Africa free public relations by going there under the guise of "good will" or simply say "it's political" when sports are involved in a conflict with South African policies. Every facet of our lives is political.

YOUR LIVELIHOOD involved playing a game. People have the option of getting interested in your game or turning away, but they cannot turn away from the game of life. You either play or get manipulated by those who play.

You are also aware that one must be conscious of the opponent's tactics and capabilities before you can successfully carry out your game plan. One must also know the obstacles and purposes of the game before one can have the freedom of expression.

You are in a position to expose many hidden obstacles — many of which would disappear on your demand. The quality of humility needs to be investigated by you; then your next appeal might be to black parents to go to the libraries and see what is available to read.

Remember, it was only 200 years ago that it was against the law to teach Kunta Kinte to read. Things have not changed that much — just a different game.

Rappaport CIF champ

Mark Rappaport of Millikan High won the 130-pound title at the CIF wrestling championships Saturday night at Fountain Valley.

Rappaport decisioned Bob Miyoshi of Righetti in the finals, 13-6, one of four matches the Ram senior won by decisive margins. His other victories Saturday came by scores of 16-0, 3-0, and 3-1.

Two other Millikan athletes — Chris Talbot at 157 and heavyweight John Tautolo qualified for the State tournament in Sacramento next week, finishing fourth and fifth respectively.

No other Moore League athlete finished in the top five.

Bellflower's Perry Shea was the 136 runnerup. Bob Wellender of Artesia was fourth at 115. Bob Delgado of Cerritos was third at 136.

Millikan was fifth with 44 points behind Fountain Valley (106), Notre Dame of Riverside (69), El Dorado (66) and Channel Islands (50).

Brooks rebounds, gains spot in '400'

RICHMOND, Va. (AP) — Veteran driver Dick Brooks, still suffering from a mysterious ailment that had him hospitalized 11 days in January, posted the fastest qualifying speed Saturday in the second day of time trials for Sunday's Richmond 400 Grand National stock car race.

Brooks, who smashed his Ford against the guardrail in Friday's opening session, rebounded with a speed of 92.597 miles per hour, fourth fastest over-all. Saturday he switched to a modified version of the car he drove to fifth in last week's Daytona 500.

Neil Bonnett, who set a track record of 93.632 mph Friday, and Richard Petty will lead the field.

Second fastest in Saturday's action was James Hylton at 91.627 in a Chevrolet, followed by Janet Guthrie, who improved her Friday speed two mph to 90.505, also in a Chevrolet.

Century Club grid clinic ends today

The Long Beach Century Club's 12th Clinic of Champions winds up its two-day run today at Rochelle's Convention Center.

Mike White, head football coach at California, will make his presentation starting at 10 a.m.

TROJANS-

seemed to have no trouble getting their shots against the conference's worst defensive team.

Led by the two fill-ins — and, with help from center Mark Hoisington (15 points), and forwards Greg White and Doug Widtfeldt (14 apiece) — the Trojans shot 64 per cent, hitting 42-of-66 field goal attempts.

Widfeldt, a swingman from La Mirada, hit two consecutive short baskets to give USC a 32-28 lead with 4:41 remaining in the first half. Arnold stretched that to six with a 15-foot jump shot and Stanford never recovered.

When Arnold picked up his fourth foul three minutes into the second half on a charge, Carfino came in to sink eight consecutive points and put the Trojans ahead, 61-50.

"I felt I could beat them most of the time," said Carfino, who hit 5-of-8 shots and 8-of-9 free throws.

Added Arnold: "I'm playing behind two good guards in Marv (Salford) and Casey (Jones), but it's hard to get things going in little subroles. I felt like tonight I had an opportunity."

Arnold hit 6-of-8 field goals and 4-of-4 from the line.

Stanford had its opportunities, but converted only 33-of-83 field goal attempts (40 per cent). Guard Mike Bratz led the visitors with 22 points and forward Kimberly Belton added 18.

63 one day, then a 77 for Rankin

SARASOTA, Fla. (AP) — Judy Rankin, who shot a career-best 63 Friday, zoomed to a five-over-par 77 Saturday to fall back into a tie with Beth Stone after two rounds of the $100,000 Bent Tree Ladies Classic.

Miss Stone, from Miami and a non-winner in 16 years on the Ladies Professional Golf Association tour, recorded a 71. Mrs. Rankin, the 32-year-old 1976 Player of the Year from Midland, Tex., made a series of mental mistakes in her first over par round of the year.

They were tied with four-under-par 140s on the demanding 6,124-yard, par-72 Bent Tree Golf Club course. That put them a stroke ahead of Pam Higgins and Sandra Palmer, both of Palm Springs.

Miss Higgins carded the day's best round, a 67, to gain 10 strokes on Mrs. Rankin, whom she beat in a playoff two weeks ago in Miami. Miss Palmer shot a 70 Saturday.

Two strokes behind the leaders was Alexandra Reinhardt of Albuquerque, N.M., who regained her players'ard at this same course earlier this month. She shot her second 71. Kathy Martin of Thousand Oaks, Calif. was three behind after a 71.

Mrs. Rankin, who made nine birdies in a spectacular putting Friday, sank only one short birdie putt and had four bogies and one double bogey Saturday.

Referring to her first round, which was only a stroke off the all-time LPGA record, she noted, "I guess I created a monster for myself."

Play was suspended on four holes for about 30 minutes in mid-afternoon as nearly a dozen bullets whistled past veteran pro Marilynn Smith of Dallas, and hit the ground next to a spectator and a scorekeeper.

The bullets were fired by a man who was taking target practice at his nearby home, unaware that his bullets were carrying to the golf course.

No one was injured, and no charges were filed.

Miller 6 back in Australia

MELBOURNE, Australia (AP) — Australian Geoff Parslow clung to his five-stroke lead after the third round of the Victorian Open golf championship at Yarra Yarra Golf Club here Saturday.

Parslow shot a par 72 for a three-round total of 11-under par 205.

Five strokes behind Parslow at 210 is another Australian, Greg Norman, who had a twounder par 70.

One stroke behind Norman is American Johnny Miller and Australian veteran Kel Nagle and Barry Burgess.

Miller, who scored his third successive subpar round, a two-under 70, said he was playing consistent golf.

"If I was playing that well in the U.S. Open, I would be very happy. However, I am satisfied with my score considering the type of course it is.

"This is one heck of a golf course," Miller said. "You can't play one bad shot or you get into trouble. At home they (the courses) are flat with few trees. But this is all bumps, hills, trees and shrubs, and the greens are so treacherous. Three times I read the break one way and the ball went the other.

Angels banging ball in spring, tra la

HOLTVILLE (AP) — Outfielder Joe Rudi made his spring debut for the Angels as manager Norm Sherry welcomed 46 players for the team's first full-scale workout Saturday.

Infielder Mario Guerrero and outfielders Rusty Torres and Gil Flores missed the drill, but were expected to arrive later to complete the 49-man squad.

"This is our fifth day in camp," said Sherry, "and I'm very pleased with the attitude and performance of all our players in both the fundamental and hitting drills. Our sole purpose in starting camp at a relatively early date is to get the team in the best physical condition possible for the start of the season.

"I guess you could say the only real difference between this camp and previous Angels' camps is perhaps a more relaxed atmosphere and a whole lot more hitting," Sherry concluded.

First baseman Willie Mays Aikens, the 1976 Texas League home run champion for El Paso, hit a towering home run over the right field fence and rookie outfielder Frankie George homered to left to highlight the batting drill.

Second baseman Jerry Remy and catcher Danny Goodrich also were impressive during the hitting session.

Outfielder Bobby Bond, who fined to his room for the past 48 hours with a mild case of bronchitis, returned to participate in the 3½-hour workout. Teammate Bobby Grich remained sidelined with muscle spasms in his back. Grich was expected to resume training within the next few days.

Sackl's 'perfect run' wins slalom

FURANO, Japan (AP) — Regina Sackl, slashing down the women's slalom course in what her coach called a perfect second run, beat Austrian teammate Annemarie Moser-Proell by .14 of a second for first place Saturday in World Cup ski competition.

"I still can't believe I won," Miss Sackl said after scoring Austria's second victory in two races at Furano. Hans Hinterseer won the men's giant slalom Friday.

The 17-year-old art enthusiast was second behind Moser-Proell after her first run of 56.65 seconds and then turned in the afternoon's best time of 55.34 for a total of one minute, 51.99 seconds on the 590-meter, 60-gate course.

Five-time World Cup champion Moser-Proell, who said she had no special problems on her second run, had times of 56.13-56.00—1:52.13.

Her second place gave her 20 World Cup points, but she still trailed, 238 points to 211, behind Switzerland's Lise-Marie Morerod, who ran into a gate, went off balance with her ski pole between her skis and fell midway through the first run.

Christin Cooper, 17, of Sun Valley, Idaho, was within 0.66 seconds of Moser-Proell after the first round, but ended up 13th with runs of 56.79-57.54—1:54.33.

Teammate Abbi Fisher, 19, of South Conway, N.H., moved up with a good second run and finished fifth in 57.09-55.85—1:52.94.

World Cup standings:

1. Lise-Marie Morerod, Switzerland, 238; 2. Annemarie Moser-Proell, Austria, 211; 3. Monika Kaserer, Austria, 156; 4. Brigitte Habersatter, Austria, 148; 5. Hanni Wenzel, Liechtenstein, 142; 6. BLACKS IN SPORT—

Yes, the reason the door closed behind you was because it takes money to become a tennis or golf professional, a lawyer, doctor or engineer. If you read every book in the library, it will not remove the racial prejudices that exist in labor unions governing construction work.

BLACKS HAVE to sing, dance, run and jump just to get an education, and we have just emerged from a time when blacks were "employed" in colleges rather than enrolled. It would have been heart warming to hear you advise the young artists to negotiate for medical or law-school funds when their bodies were up for hire.

I was appalled and grieved over your view of "ghetto" (a word you heard at UCLA). Grieved because you are void of that experience — therefore void of the sensitivities, the language, the perspectives that along with a formal education are the best tools a minority can have to gain widespread understanding.

Muhammad Ali does not have a formal education but his sensitivities are unmatched. I wonder if he would allow South Africa free public relations by going there under the guise of "good will" or simply say "it's political" when sports are involved in a conflict with South African policies. Every facet of our lives is political.

YOUR LIVELIHOOD involved playing a game. People have the option of getting interested in your game or turning away, but they cannot turn away from the game of life. You either play or get manipulated by those who play.

You are also aware that one must be conscious of the opponent's tactics and capabilities before you can successfully carry out your game plan. One must also know the obstacles and purposes of the game before one can have the freedom of expression.

You are in a position to expose many hidden obstacles — many of which would disappear on your demand. The quality of humility needs to be investigated by you: then your next appeal might be to black parents to go to the libraries and see what is available to read.

Remember, it was only 200 years ago that it was against the law to teach Kunta Kinte to read. Things have not changed that much — just a different game.

Nicklaus started out his round with a bogey five and playing partner Floyd scored a birdie on the first hole to move within two shots of the lead. But Nicklaus had no more bogeys and Floyd had three of them to come in at 73 and drop to 13.

"Today I played better and more poised than the other two days. I just didn't make as many putts," said Nicklaus, who had earlier rounds of 70 and 66. "I made a six foot putt today and that was it."

His bogey on No. 1 came after he caught a bunker with his drive.

Morgan, 29, who has never won since joining the tour in 1973 but ranked 42nd in earnings last year with $61,372, had seven birdies in an errorless round.

"I kept the ball in play. That always makes it a little easier," said Morgan, admitting he had his work cut out Sunday.

"You shoot even par the last day and five or six guys can go by you," said Morgan of his need for a strong finish.

Morgan, who has won $15,000 already this year, drew attention last year with rounds of 66 and 68 which gave him a four-shot lead halfway through the PGA Championship. But he faded to 75s on the final two days to tie for eighth.

Player had only one bogey in his round and said, "The most amazing thing is the best round of the three days was the 73 I had Friday."

He said he had "mental blackout" on the 198-yard par-3 third hole Friday which left him with a double bogey. He said he could have moved the ball out of the water but instead took three swings to advance.

Rappaport CIF champ

Mark Rappaport of Millikan High won the 130-pound title at the CIF wrestling championships Saturday night at Fountain Valley.

Rappaport decisioned Bob Miyoshi of Righetti in the finals, 13-6, one of four matches the Ram senior won by decisive margins. His other victories Saturday came by scores of 16-0, 3-0, and 3-1.

Two other Millikan athletes — Chris Talbot at 157 and heavyweight John Tautolo qualified for the State tournament in Sacramento next week, finishing fourth and fifth respectively.

No other Moore League athlete finished in the top five.

Bellflower's Perry Shea was the 136 runnerup, Bob Wellender of Artesia was fourth at 115. Bob Delgado of Cerritos was third at 136.

Millikan was fifth with 44 points behind Fountain Valley (106), Notre Dame of Riverside (69), El Dorado (66) and Channel Islands (50).

seemed to have no trouble getting their shots against the conference's worst defensive team.

Led by the two fill-ins — and with help from center Mark Hoisington (15 points), and forwards Greg White and Doug Widtfeldt (14 apiece) — the Trojans shot 64 per cent, hitting 42-of-66 field goal attempts.

Widfeldt, a swingman from La Mirada, hit two consecutive short baskets to give USC a 32-28 lead with 4:41 remaining in the first half. Arnold stretched that to six with a 15-foot jump shot and Stanford never recovered.

When Arnold picked up his fourth foul three minutes into the second half on a charge, Carfino came in to sink eight consecutive points and put the Trojans ahead, 61-50.

"I felt I could beat them most of the time," said Carfino, who hit 5-of-8 shots and 8-of-9 free throws.

Added Arnold: "I'm playing behind two good guards in Marv (Safford) and Casey (Jones), but it's hard to get things going in little sub roles. I felt like tonight I had an opportunity."

Arnold hit 6-of-8 field goals and 4-of-4 from the line.

Stanford had its opportunities, but converted only 33-of-83 field goal attempts (40 per cent). Guard Mike Bratz led the visitors with 22 points and forward Kimberly Belton added 18.

49ers turn in promising marks

UCI's Scott sparkles

By DAVE WIELENGA
Staff Writer

Early-season track meets have a way of drawing out the optimism — legitimate or not — in most coaches and athletes.

However, Saturday's outdoor debut by Long Beach State, USC, San Diego State and UC Irvine in a non-scoring meet on the latter's home oval provided opportunities for some genuine oohing and aahing.

Irvine's Steve Scott, the fastest-rising middle distance runner in the United States, continued his dominance with impressive victories in the 1,500 (3:45.5) and 800 (1:48.6) meters.

Scott, only a junior but a veteran among the Anteaters' stable of young distance men, began his hot streak last month by recording his first sub four-minute mile at the Sunkist Indoor Games. Last weekend in San Diego he surprised a field that included Olympic gold medalist John Walker by clocking 3:56.7 — one of history's fastest-ever indoor times.

Neither of his wins Saturday lacked excitment.

IN THE 1,500 Scott waited until the 800-meter mark to take the lead, then lost it with a lap to go when Long Beach State's Armando Cendejas bolted past. USC's David Omwanza joined in a furious sprint down the backstretch until Scott settled things by pulling away off the final turn. Omwanza, a recruit from Kenya, was second at 3:47.7 and Cendejas smashed the LBSU school record with a 3:48.4 clocking.

The story was much the same in the 800. Scott overhauling USC's Lloyd Johnson (1:48.9) and Omwanza (1:50.1) on the final straightaway.

Long Beach State displayed other promising performances in addition to Cendejas', prompting coach Ron Allice to predict "the strongest team in school history.

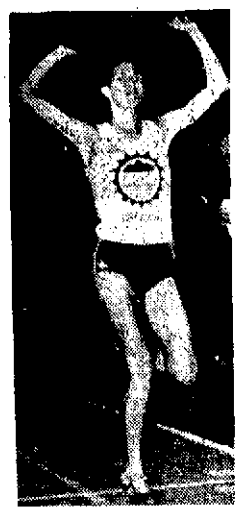

"Our distance and field events looked good," he said. "Our sprinters aren't fit—they're about a month behind—but we're going to be tough down the road."

Hubert Beasley defeated a quality field in the 400 (47.3), Rich McCandless chased UCI's Eric Hulst to his first collegiate victory, clocking 14:34.4 over 5,000 meters to Hulst's 14:25.0, high jumpers Carl Miles (7-0) and Mike Franz (6-10) went 1-2, Greg McGee was second in the long jump (24-7) and triple jump (51-1¾) and Don Baird (17-5½) was second in the pole vault.

BAIRD AND USC's Tom DiStanislao were locked in a duel after leaving the rest of the field at 16-6. Each cleared 17 feet on the first attempt, but Baird required two jumps to top 17-5½ and passed up an easier chance at victory after DiStanislao fouled out at 17-8 by raising the bar to 18 feet. He missed three times at that height, but narrowly twice.

Clancy Edwards led a USC sweep in the 100 (10.3) and also won the 200 (21.1).

Francie tops U.S. team; Stones out

NEW YORK (AP) — Francie Larrieu Lutz and Lt. Tommy Haynes, both winners of two events at the Amateur Athletic Union Indoor Track and Field Championships the night before, head the United States team picked by the AAU Saturday for next week's meet in Toronto against Canada and the Soviet Union.

Lutz of Long Beach, Calif., named the meet's outstanding female performer after capturing both the mile and two mile races, will run in both of those events in the Toronto meet Thursday and Friday. Julie Brown of Los Angeles also made the women's team as a miler and Carol Cook of Iowa State University was named as America's other entry in the two-mile race.

Haynes, assistant track coach at the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, won the triple jump and long jump, becoming only the second man in the meet's history to win both events in the same year. He will compete in both at Toronto. Milan Tiff of Westwood, Calif. is also entered in the triple jump. The other long jump slot went to Steve Cobb of Bloomington, Ind.

Missing from the squad is high jumper Dwight Stones, holder of the indoor and outdoor world records for his specialty. Stones, Bill Jankunis and Tom Woods all sat out their event Friday night, protesting the AAU's refusal to allow two other jumpers, Mel Embree and Ed Kern, to compete. The AAU had ruled that Embree and Kern had not filed entries for the meet in time.

So, instead of Stones, who figured to win the event and a place on the team, the United States will use Paul Underwood of Phoenix and Gene White of Philadelphia in the high jump.

The head coach of the team will be Lyle Knudson of Loveland, Colo., whose wife, Wendy, was named for the 880 along with Cyndy Poor of Santa Ana, Calif.

Hampton hot in UCLA spike debut

Olympic silver medal winner Millard Hampton used his blazing form to win two races and run on a winning relay team Saturday as UCLA swamped Northridge State, 123-21, in a dual track meet at Westwood.

Hampton, the junior college transfer from San Jose who won a silver medal in the Olympic 200-meter dash last year, ran the third leg of UCLA's 400-meter relay team, which was clocked in 39.68, fastest time in the world this year.

Later, Hampton easily captured the 100-meter dash in 10.6 as he eased up before the tape and won the 200 in 20.0, again slowing before the finish.

One other UCLA performer won a pair of events when Willie Banks took the long jump at 25 feet, one-half inch and the triple jump at 53-11.

One of the surprises of the meet came when Barrie Williams, a walkon transfer from Kansas, won the mile in 4:06.1. Williams, originally from England, has a thyroid problem and it wasn't known whether he would be ready to compete.

Bennie Myles of the Bruins opened his season winning the 400 in 46.7; UCLA's Vicken Simonian snared the two-mile at 8:55.0 and Jay Meisler won the high jump at 7-2.

UCLA won the meet without 18-foot pole vaulter Mike Tully, who was taking a rest following a demanding indoor season.

It was UCLA's 43rd dual meet victory in its last 44 outings — but only one in a row. The Bruins lost their final dual meet of 1976 to Southern California, 83-62. The two teams are favored to battle for the NCAA title again in 1977.

Ressler wins bowling title

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Eddie Ressler, who had earned only $11,308 previously this season, defeated top-seeded Dave Soutar 224-222 in the championship match Saturday of a $100,000 Professional Bowlers Association tournament.

The victory, Ressler's third ever on the PBA tour, was worth $14,000. Soutar, of Kansas City, received $8,000 for second.

Ressler began the nationally televised, four-match championship round in the fifth-seeded position and started with a 194 to 164 victory over fourth-seeded Jimmy Certain, Huntsville, Ala.

In the next match, Ressler defeated Earl Anthony, Tacoma, Wash., pro bowling's player of the year and leading money winner the past three seasons, 278-209.

49ers turn in promising marks

UCI's Scott sparkles

BY DAVE WIELENGA
Staff Writer

Early-season track meets have a way of drawing out the optimism — legitimate or not — in most coaches and athletes.

However, Saturday's outdoor debut by Long Beach State, USC, San Diego State and UC Irvine in a non-scoring meet on the latter's home oval provided opportunities for some genuine oohing and aahing.

Irvine's Steve Scott, the fastest-rising middle distance runner in the United States, continued his dominance with impressive victories in the 1,500 (3:45.5) and 800 (1:48.6) meters.

Scott, only a junior but a veteran among the Anteaters' stable of young distance men, began his hot streak last month by recording his first sub four-minute mile at the Sunkist Indoor Games. Last weekend in San Diego he surprised a field that included Olympic gold medalist John Walker by clocking 3:56.7 — one of history's fastest-ever indoor times.

Neither of his wins Saturday lacked excitment.

IN THE 1,500 Scott waited until the 300-meter mark to take the lead, then lost it with a lap to go when Long Beach State's Armando Cendejas bolted past. USC's David Omwanza joined in a furious sprint down the backstretch until Scott settled things by pulling away off the final turn. Omwanza, a recruit from Kenya, was second at 3:47.7 and Cendejas smashed the LBSU school record with a 3:48.4 clocking.

The story was much the same in the 800, Scott overhauling USC's Lloyd Johnson (1:48.9) and Omwanza (1:50.1) on the final straightaway.

Long Beach State displayed other promising performances in addition to Cendejas', prompting coach Ron Allice to predict "the strongest team in school history.

"Our distance and field events looked good," he said. "Our sprinters aren't fit—they're about a month behind—but we're going to be tough down the road."

Hubert Beasley defeated a quality field in the 400 (47.3), Rich McCandless chased UCI's Eric Hulst to his first collegiate victory, clocking 14:34.4 over 5,000 meters to Hulst's 14:25.0, high jumpers Carl Miles (7-0) and Mike Franz (6-10) went 1-2, Greg McGee was second in the long jump (24-7) and triple jump (51-1¾) and Don Baird (17-5½) was second in the pole vault.

BAIRD AND USC's Tom DiStanislao were locked in a duel after leaving the rest of the field at 16-6. Each cleared 17 feet on the first attempt, but Baird required two jumps to top 17-5½ and passed up an easier chance at victory after DiStanislao fouled out at 17-8 by raising the bar to 18 feet. He missed three times at that height, but narrowly twice.

Clancy Edwards led a USC sweep in the 100 (10.3) and also won the 200 (21.1).

Francie tops U.S. team; Stones out

NEW YORK (AP) — Francie Larrieu Lutz and Lt. Tommy Haynes, both winners of two events at the Amateur Athletic Union Indoor Track and Field Championships the night before, head the United States team picked by the AAU Saturday for next week's meet in Toronto against Canada and the Soviet Union.

Lutz of Long Beach, Calif., named the meet's outstanding female performer after capturing both the mile and two mile races, will run in both of those events in the Toronto meet Thursday and Friday. Julie Brown of Los Angeles also made the women's team as a miler and Carol Cook of Iowa State University was named as America's other entry in the two-mile race.

Haynes, assistant track coach at the U.S. Military Academy at West Point, won the triple jump and long jump, becoming only the second man in the meet's history to win both events in the same year. He will compete in both at Toronto. Milan Tiff of Westwood, Calif. is also entered in the triple jump. The other long jump slot went to Steve Cobb of Bloomington, Ind.

Missing from the squad is high jumper Dwight Stones, holder of the indoor and outdoor world records for his specialty. Stones, Bill Jankunis and Tom Woods all sat out their event Friday night, protesting the AAU's refusal to allow two other jumpers, Mel Embree and Ed Kern, to compete. The AAU had ruled that Embree and Kern had not filed entries for the meet in time.

So, instead of Stones, who figured to win the event and a place on the team, the United States will use Paul Underwood of Phoenix and Gene White of Philadelphia in the high jump.

The head coach of the team will be Lyle Knudson of Loveland, Colo., whose wife, Wendy, was named for the 880 along with Cyndy Poor of Santa Ana, Calif.

Hampton hot in UCLA spike debut

Olympic silver medal winner Millard Hampton used his blazing form to win two races and run on a winning relay team Saturday as UCLA swamped Northridge State, 123-21, in a dual track meet at Westwood.

Hampton, the junior college transfer from San Jose who won a silver medal in the Olympic 200-meter dash last year, ran the third leg of UCLA's 400-meter relay team, which was clocked in 39.68, fastest time in the world this year.

Later, Hampton easily captured the 100-meter dash in 10.6 as he eased up before the tape and won the 200 in 20.0, again slowing before the finish.

One other UCLA performer won a pair of events when Willie Banks took the long jump at 25 feet, one-half inch and the triple jump at 53-11.

One of the surprises of the meet came when Barrie Williams, a walkon transfer from Kansas, won the mile in 4:06.1. Williams, originally from England, has a thyroid—problem and it wasn't known whether he would be ready to compete.

Bennie Myles of the Bruins opened his season winning the 400 in 46.7; UCLA's Vicken Simonian snared the two-mile at 8:55.0 and Jay Meisler won the high jump at 7-2.

UCLA won the meet without 18-foot pole vaulter Mike Tully, who was taking a rest following a demanding indoor season.

It was UCLA's 43rd dual meet victory in its last 44 outings — but only one in a row. The Bruins lost their final dual meet of 1976 to Southern California, 83-62. The two teams are favored to battle for the NCAA title again in 1977.

Added NFL 'wild card' game good bet in 1978

WASHINGTON (AP) — An additional playoff game between two "wild card" teams in each National Football League conference is a good possibility following the 1977 season under the terms of the new collective bargaining agreement.

Ed Garvey, executive director of the NFL Players Association, said Saturday management negotiators indicated they would like to introduce the concept of the additional game this season. Therefore, a provision for it was included in the new pact which was ratified Friday by the owners and the union's board of representatives.

Under the agreement, members of the two wild card teams in each conference would receive $3,000 each for playing in the game. Thus, a wild card team member could gain $35,000 by winning four games, including the Super Bowl.

In the recent past, each of the division champions plus one wild card team—the club with the best record in the conference after the winners—battled for the title. Last season, the Washington Redskins were the wild card in the National Conference, while the New England Patriots had the honors in the American Conference.

If the new concept had been instituted last season, Washington would have had to play the St. Louis Cardinals for the right to meet the Minnesota Vikings, the top team in the conference, and New England would have had to take on the Cincinnati Bengals for a shot at the Oakland Raiders.

Under the proposed contract, each member of a team playing in a divisional title game would pick up $5,000, a conference championship contest $9,000 and in the Super Bowl, $18,000 to the winner and $9,000 to the loser.

Garvey also said there are provisions in the new contract for the NFL expanding the regular season schedule from 14 to 16 games, with the players being paid appropriately. He doubted, however, that it would be done until 1978.

The new pact contains major revisions in the draft of college players and option compensation systems and provides significant improvements in salaries in addition to other benefits and damages to the players.

The entire union membership of 785 players still must vote on the proposal for final ratification but there appears to be no strong opposition. It also must be approved by U.S. District Court judge Earl Larson, who presided over former player John Mackey's suit against the NFL.

The new contract calls for a 12-round draft, at least through 1986, and management announced the 1977 draft would be held on or about May 1, in New York.

Excelsior in El Segundo finals

Millikan, St. Anthony blanked

Excelsior High scored six runs in the top of the 10th inning Saturday to advance to the finals of the 28-team El Segundo Baseball Tournament with a 13-7 victory over Leuzinger.

Ed DeArmas cracked a three-run homer in the first inning for Excelsior which will now face South Torrance in the finals Monday.

Millikan and St. Anthony were both blanked in consolation round games, the Rams, 1-0, by Hawthorne; the Saints, 5-0, by Mira Costa.

Greg Staffon struck out 10 and allowed Millikan only two hits. Frank Followell was almost as sharp for Millikan, yielding two hits and fanning seven.

The game's only run came when Dennis Drozdowki squeezed hom Mike Castro from third base in the fourth inning.

Despite being held to only two hits by Jim Wandell Mira Costa took advantage of seven walks to go with five errors and beat St. Anthony.

Artesia ripped Bell Gardens, 10-0, as Len Castro spun a four-hit shutout.

Senser stunned after erasing Jabbar mark

LEWISBURG, Pa. (AP) — West Chester State's Joe Senser broke an NCAA basketball record held by Kareem Abdul-Jabbar and two other players as he finished the season Saturday with a 69.9 per cent average on his shots from the floor.

In a 94-86 loss to Bucknell, the 6-foot-5 sophomore sank five of nine shots before fouling out with about 11 minutes to go.

"I've never had this kind of thing happen to me," Senser said afterwards. "It's kind of stunning. I don't really know how to feel, sharing a record with Abdul-Jabbar. I'm honored, but I'm not the caliber of player that he is by far."

Abdul-Jabbar, the Lakers star who played college ball at UCLA, shares the old record of 66.7 per cent with Kent Martens of Abilene Christian and Al Fleming of Arizona.

Senser didn't even have to shoot Saturday to break the old mark. He entered the game with a 70.6 per cent average from the floor, and actually lost ground as he tried to pull his team past Bucknell. Because of foul trouble, he only played 25 minutes.

"If I hadn't scored any baskets I still would have broken the record," he said. "But I really had to shoot."

Senser ran up the dazzling average by shooting mostly layups. He was West Chester's best rebounder. "The big guys don't bother him," coach Earl Voss said recently. "He's so strong, just brute strength."

Senser is the first athlete since the late Bucknell football coach Fred Prender to play both football and basketball while at West Chester.

He played high school athletics at Milton Hershey High School in Hershey, Pa.

Added NFL 'wild card' game good bet in 1978

WASHINGTON (AP) — An additional playoff game between two "wild card" teams in each National Football League conference is a good possibility following the 1977 season under the terms of the new collective bargaining agreement.

Ed Garvey, executive director of the NFL Players Association, said Saturday management negotiators indicated they would like to introduce the concept of the additional game this season. Therefore, a provision for it was included in the new pact which was ratified Friday by the owners and the union's board of representatives.

Under the agreement, members of the two wild card teams in each conference would receive $3,000 each for playing in the game. Thus, a wild card team member could gain $35,000 by winning four games, including the Super Bowl.

In the recent past, each of the division champions plus one wild card team—the club with the best record in the conference after the winners—battled for the title. Last season, the Washington Redskins were the wild card in the National Conference, while the New England Patriots had the honors in the American Conference.

If the new concept had been instituted last season, Washington would have had to play the St. Louis Cardinals for the right to meet the Minnesota Vikings, the top team in the conference, and New England would have had to take on the Cincinnati Bengals for a shot at the Oakland Raiders.

Under the proposed contract, each member of a team playing in a divisional title game would pick up $5,000, a conference championship contest $9,000 and in the Super Bowl, $18,000 to the winner and $9,000 to the loser.

Garvey also said there are provisions in the new contract for the NFL expanding the regular season schedule from 14 to 16 games, with the players being paid appropriately. He doubted, however, that it would be done until 1978.

The new pact contains major revisions in the draft of college players and option compensation systems and provides significant improvements in salaries in addition to other benefits and damages to the players.

The entire union membership of 785 players still must vote on the proposal for final ratification but there appears to be no strong opposition. It also must be approved by U.S. District Court judge Earl Larson, who presided over former player John Mackey's suit against the NFL.

The new contract calls for a 12-round draft, at least through 1986, and management announced the 1977 draft would be held on or about May 1, in New York.

Excelsior in El Segundo finals

Millikan, St. Anthony blanked

Excelsior High scored six runs in the top of the 10th inning Saturday to advance to the finals of the 28-team El Segundo Baseball Tournament with a 13-7 victory over Leuzinger.

Ed DeArmas cracked a three-run homer in the first inning for Excelsior which will now face South Torrance in the finals Monday.

Millikan and St. Anthony were both blanked in consolation round games, the Rams, 1-0, by Hawthorne; the Saints, 5-0, by Mira Costa.

Greg Staffon struck out 10 and allowed Millikan only two hits. Frank Followell was almost as sharp for Millikan, yielding two hits and fanning seven.

The game's only run came when Dennis Drozdowki squeezed hom Mike Castro from third base in the fourth inning.

Despite being held to only two hits by Jim Wandell, Mira Costa took advantage of seven walks to go with five errors and beat St. Anthony.

Artesia ripped Bell Gardens, 10-0, as Len Castro spun a four-hit shutout.

Senser stunned after erasing Jabbar mark

LEWISBURG, Pa. (AP) — West Chester State's Joe Senser broke an NCAA basketball record held by Kareem Abdul-Jabbar and two other players as he finished the season Saturday with a 69.9 per cent average on his shots from the floor.

In a 94-86 loss to Bucknell, the 6-foot-5 sophomore sank five of nine shots before fouling out with about 11 minutes to go.

"I've never had this kind of thing happen to me," Senser said afterwards. "It's kind of stunning. I don't really know how to feel, sharing a record with Abdul-Jabbar. I'm honored, but I'm not the caliber of player that he is by far."

Abdul-Jabbar, the Lakers star who played college ball at UCLA, shares the old record of 66.7 per cent with Kent Mariens of Abilene Christian and Al Fleming of Arizona.

Senser didn't even have to shoot Saturday to break the old mark. He entered the game with a 70.6 per cent average from the floor, and actually lost ground as he tried to pull his team past Bucknell. Because of foul trouble, he only played 25 minutes.

"If I hadn't scored any baskets I still would have broken the record," he said. "But I really had to shoot."

Senser ran up the dazzling average by shooting mostly layups. He was West Chester's best rebounder. "The big guys don't bother him," coach Earl Voss said recently. "He's so strong, just brute strength."

Senser is the first athlete since the late Bucknell football coach Fred Prender to play both football and basketball while at West Chester.

He played high school athletics at Milton Hershey High School in Hershey, Pa.

Sellers scores in Santa Anita stake

Apprentice jockey Mark Sellers rode Winter Solstice to an impressive 3½-length victory over a pair of longshots Saturday in the $45,600 Monrovia Handicap at Santa Anita Park.

The 5-year-old brown mare, owned by Bernard Ridder, stayed with the leaders for the first two-thirds of the race, then found running room in the middle of the track at the head of the stretch to overhaul front-running Dancing Femme.

In the final strides, young Sellers moved his mount away steadily for a winning time of 1:13⅗ for the 6½-furlong race over the grass.

Winter Solstice carried 119 pounds, and did not get the apprentice allowance of five pounds in the stakes race.

The time for Winter Solstice was just three-fifths of a second slower than the stakes record.

The winner, who earned $27,600, paid backers $11, $5.40 and $4.

Nana Lee got up for second and paid $8.60 and $6. Third place Olive Wreath, the longest shot in the nine-horse field at 40-1, bolted from sixth to third in the final furlong and paid $9.60 to show.

Lullaby Song led the field of fillies and mares down the hillside portion of the race, with Sellers content to let Winter Solstice run fourth.

At the wire, Winter Solstice was well out in front, but Nana Lee beat Olive Wreath by only a neck, and Olive Wreath was only a head in front of Katonka. Dancing Femme was another neck back in fifth.

Stewards held up declaring the race official until photos could separate the Nos. 2, 3, 4 and 5 horses.

The 3-1 favorite of the sun-drenched crowd of 33,136 was Mia Amore, who ran seventh back of Vagabonda.

John Sellers, the veteran rider and father of the winning jockey in the feature, was the first man in the winner's circle after taking a day off and watching the action from the stands.

TWO HORSES bred in Argentina, Bastonera II and Merry Lady III, are considered among the top threats today in the $100,000 Santa Margarita Handicap.

Bastonera II, a contender for national honors last season, has drawn top weight of 126 pounds for the 1⅛-mile event for older fillies and mares.

Angel Cordero will handle Bastonera II, who'll be spotting her nine rivals up to 12 pounds.

Merry Lady III won the San Gorgonio Handicap at the same distance here last month. Sired by Con Brio II, also the sire of Bastonera II, Merry Lady III will be handled by Marco Castaneda at 118 pounds.

Swingtime, the second high-weight, will carry 121 pounds and will be ridden by Bill Shoemaker.

The winner of divisions of last summer's Brentwood Stakes and Hawthorne Handicap, Swingtime finished 1½ lengths in front of Bastonera II in their latest clash, the Feb. 5 Santa Maria Handicap.

Swingtime will race in a Charles Whittingham-trained entry with Stravina, who'll be ridden by Sandy Hawley and carrying 117 pounds.

Completing the field for the Santa Margarita are Pacific Princess, Laffit Pincay, 115; Hope of Glory, Chuck Baltazar, 114; Our First Delight, Don Pierce, 115; Pacara, Frank Olivares, 114, and the Jaime Villagomez-trained entry of Star Ball and Lucie Manet.

That entry will carry 119 pounds each, with Fernando Toro named on both. Lucie Manet is coming off a victory over Hail Hilarious in the $100,000 La Canada Stakes two weeks ago.

A PAIR of grass specialists will make their season's debut in the sixth race.

Bruni, a grass champion in Euorpe and a 10-lengths victor over King Pellinore in the 1975 English St. Leger, will be making his first U.S. appearance in the 1⅛-mile event on the Santa Anita turf course.

Caucasus, who also has the distinction of beating world record-holder King Pellinore — by a length in last summer's Sunset handicap — will be making his first appearance since competing at Belmont last fall.

Both horses will carry carry 124 pounds.

Ho, hum! Cauthen smashes another record, wins 'Cap

NEW YORK (AP) — Steve Cauthen, the sensational 16-year-old apprentice jockey, continued his riding heroics at Aqueduct Saturday by bringing Turn and Count from last place in a field of 10 to win the $82,650 Grey Lag Handicap, setting an all-time record for most winners in a single race meeting.

The victory on Turn and Count was Cauthen's third of the day and gave him 124 winners in 47 racing days at Aqueduct since the meeting opened Jan. 3. This broke Chris McCarron's mark of 123 in the 59-day Laurel meeting in 1974.

Counting the eight winners he scored in four Sundays at Santa Anita, the boy wonder from Walton, Ky. has 132 victories in 51 racing days this year.

Turn and Count raced as part of a three-horse entry owned by Sigmond Sommer and trained by Frank Martin. Banian and Great Above set the pace for their teammate, who lagged far back in last place until the halfmile pole.

At that point Cauthen steered his mount to the outside and with a quick burst he circled the field and moved into contention at the head of the stretch. He then passed his two stablemates and Patriot's Dream and held off the closing rush of Wise Philip to win by three-quarters of a length.

Turn and Count, the 4-yearold top weight at 123 pounds and the 2-1 second choice, ran the 1⅛ miles in 1:50⅘ and paid $6.20, $3 and $2.10. Wise Philip, 110, ridden by Darrel Montoya, returned $5.60 and $2.80. On the Sly, the 9-5 favorite ridden by Greg McCarron, finished third, two lengths back of Wise Philip and paid $2.40.

GULFSTREAM — Strike Me Lucky, a suplementary nominee entered to serve as a pacesetter for stablemate Gravelines, ran alone and scored a stunning upset in the $147,000 Gulfstream Handicap...Gravelines, who would have been the opening-line favorite, was scratched last Monday morning because trainer Neal Winick felt the size of the field (14 before two were scratched) was too dangerous...Strike Me Lucky went to the lead on the far turn, opened a big margin at the head of the stretch and held off Legion to win by two lengths. Yamanin was third and Appassionato, favorite with the crowd of 20,762, was fourth...Strike Me Lucky ran the 1¼ miles in 2:00⅘ and paid $31.

GOLDEN GATE FIELDS — Salute the Coates led wire-to-wire to win the $25,000 Portola Stakes...It was the first race for the 3-year-old filly since sustaining an injury in winning the Courtship Stakes last season at Bay Meadows...Salute the Coates, ridden by Enrique Munoz, returned $3.60, $3.20 and $2.60 for the 5½-furlong victory in 1:04⅘...Sharna L. paid $7.60 and $5.40 in placing second, while Splendid View was third and returned $3.60.

BOWIE — Mt. Airy Queen won the 24th running of the $55,800 Barbara Fritchie Handicap...by a neck over Avum... Forty Nine Sunsets finished third...Mt. Airy ran the seven furlongs in 1:23⅗ and paid $15.

Sellers scores in Santa Anita stake

Apprentice jockey Mark Sellers rode Winter Solstice to an impressive 3½-length victory over a pair of longshots Saturday in the $45,600 Monrovia Handicap at Santa Anita Park.

The 5-year-old brown mare, owned by Bernard Ridder, stayed with the leaders for the first two-thirds of the race, then found running room in the middle of the track at the head of the stretch to overhaul front-running Dancing Femme.

In the final strides, young Sellers moved his mount away steadily for a winning time of 1:13 3/5 for the 6½-furlong race over the grass.

Winter Solstice carried 119 pounds, and did not get the apprentice allowance of five pounds in the stakes race.

The time for Winter Solstice was just three-fifths of a second slower than the stakes record.

The winner, who earned $27,600, paid backers $11, $5.40 and $4.

Nana Lee got up for second and paid $8.60 and $6. Third place Olive Wreath, the longest shot in the nine-horse field at 40-1, bolted from sixth to third in the final furlong and paid $9.60 to show.

Lullaby Song led the field of fillies and mares down the hillside portion of the race, with Sellers content to let Winter Solstice run fourth.

At the wire, Winter Solstice was well out in front, but Nana Lee beat Olive Wreath by only a neck, and Olive Wreath was only a head in front of Katonka. Dancing Femme was another neck back in fifth.

Stewards held up declaring the race official until photos could separate the Nos. 2, 3, 4 and 5 horses.

The 3-1 favorite of the sun-drenched crowd of 33,136 was Mia Amore, who ran seventh back of Vagabonda.

John Sellers, the veteran rider and father of the winning jockey in the feature, was the first man in the winner's circle after taking a day off and watching the action from the stands.

TWO HORSES bred in Argentina, Bastonera II and Merry Lady III, are considered among the top threats today in the $100,000 Santa Margarita Handicap.

Bastonera II, a contender for national honors last season, has drawn top weight of 126 pounds for the 1⅛-mile event for older fillies and mares.

Angel Cordero will handle Bastonera II, who'll be spotting her nine rivals up to 12 pounds.

Merry Lady III won the San Gorgonio Handicap at the same distance here last month. Sired by Con Brio II, also the sire of Bastonera II, Merry Lady III will be handled by Marco Castaneda at 118 pounds.

Swingtime, the second highweight, will carry 121 pounds and will be ridden by Bill Shoemaker.

The winner of divisions of last summer's Brentwood Stakes and Hawthorne Handicap, Swingtime finished 1¼lengths in front of Bastonera II in their latest clash, the Feb. 5 Santa Maria Handicap.

Swingtime will race in a Charles Whittingham-trained entry with Stravina, who'll be ridden by Sandy Hawley and carrying 117 pounds.

Completing the field for the Santa Margarita are Pacific Princess, Laffit Pincay, 115; Hope of Glory, Chuck Baltazar, 114; Our First Delight, Don Pierce, 115; Pacara, Frank Olivares, 114, and the Jaime Villagomez-trained entry of Star Ball and Lucie Manet.

That entry will carry 119 pounds each, with Fernando Toro named on both. Lucie Manet is coming off a victory over Hail Hilarious in the $100,000 La Canada Stakes two weeks ago.

A PAIR of grass specialists will make their season's debut in the sixth race.

Bruni, a grass champion in Euorpe and a 10-lengths victor over King Pellinore in the 1975 English St. Leger, will be making his first U.S. appearance in the 1⅛-mile event on the Santa Anita turf course.

Caucasus, who also has the distinction of beating world record-holder King Pellinore — by a length in last summer's Sunset handicap — will be making his first appearance since competing at Belmont last fall.

Both horses will carry carry 124 pounds.

Ho, hum! Cauthen smashes another record, wins 'Cap

NEW YORK (AP) — Steve Cauthen, the sensational 16-year-old apprentice jockey, continued his riding heroics at Aqueduct Saturday by bringing Turn and Count from last place in a field of 10 to win the $82,650 Grey Lag Handicap, setting an all-time record for most winners in a single race meeting.

The victory on Turn and Count was Cauthen's third of the day and gave him 124 winners in 47 racing days at Aqueduct since the meeting opened Jan. 3. This broke Chris McCarron's mark of 123 in the 59-day Laurel meeting in 1974.

Counting the eight winners he scored in four Sundays at Santa Anita, the boy wonder from Walton, Ky. has 132 victories in 51 racing days this year.

Turn and Count raced as part of a three-horse entry owned by Sigmond Sommer and trained by Frank Martin. Banian and Great Above set the pace for their teammate, who lagged far back in last place until the halfmile pole.

At that point Cauthen steered his mount to the outside and with a quick burst he circled the field and moved into contention at the head of the stretch. He then passed his two stablemates and Patriot's Dream and held off the closing rush of Wise Philip to win by three-quarters of a length.

Turn and Count, the 4-yearold top weight at 123 pounds and the 2-1 second choice, ran the 1⅛ miles in 1:50 3/5 and paid $6.20, $3 and $2.10. Wise Philip, 110, ridden by Darrel Montoya, returned $5.60 and $2.80. On the Sly, the 9-5 favorite ridden by Greg McCarron, finished third, two lengths back of Wise Philip and paid $2.40.

GULFSTREAM — Strike Me Lucky, a suplementary nominee entered to serve as a pacesetter for stablemate Gravelines, ran alone and scored a stunning upset in the $147,000 Gulfstream Handicap...Gravelines, who would have been the opening-line favorite, was scratched last Monday morning because trainer Neal Winick felt the size of the field (14 before two were scratched) was too dangerous...Strike Me Lucky went to the lead on the far turn, opened a big margin at the head of the stretch and held off Legion to win by two lengths. Yamanin was third and Appassionato, favorite with the crowd of 20,762, was fourth...Strike Me Lucky ran the 1¼ miles in 2:00 1/5 and paid $31.

GOLDEN GATE FIELDS — Salute the Coates led wire-to-wire to win the $25,000 Portola Stakes...It was the first race for the 3-year-old filly since sustaining an injury in winning the Courtship Stakes last season at Bay Meadows...Salute the Coates, ridden by Enrique Munoz, returned $3.60, $3.20 and $2.60 for the 5½-furlong victory in 1:04 1/5...Sharna L. paid $7.60 and $5.40 in placing second, while Splendid View was third and returned $3.60.

BOWIE — Mt. Airy Queen won the 24th running of the $55,800 Barbara Fritchie Handicap...by a neck over Avum... Forty Nine Sunsets finished third...Mt. Airy ran the seven furlongs in 1:23 1/5 and paid $15.

Millikan cagers threat o Poly in Moore League

By ELAINE RISINGER
Staff Writer

Poly High School will count on depth, and Millikan will try to e advantage of its excellent ght during CIF girls basketball npetition, according to coaches he two schools.

The Rabbits, 1976 Vinnie G. ton champions under Sue rker, are eager to prove their lity in the Moore League. Milli- third last year, plans to move "I think we're going to give m a run for their money," Suz- e Miguel says.

Sue has added three seniors, o juniors and two promising homores to the Poly lineup that ludes three strong returning yers.

Captaining this year's squad ll be Angela Anglin, who has yed for the varsity three years. ick and very strong defensively, gela, who will start as a for- rd, has been averaging five nts during the pre-season.

Another third year veteran is ndra Solorzano, who can fill ei- r the center or forward position. th an average of five points per me, she is currently the team's st free throw shooter with 60 per nt from the line.

Sue calls Thera Smith, her her returnee, "a great all-around ayer, probably the best you'll see Moore League." Voted the varsi- 's MVP last year as a sophomore, hera averages 18 points and 12 bounds per game. She reached a eak of 25 points against Ingle- od

Completing the starting roster ll be two excellent guards. Eve Powars, a junior, is averaging 14 points per game. Her high score so far is 22. Strong defensively, she is the spark for the team's fast break offense. Junior Jamie McCombs will open as a guard but may play forward when called upon. She is an averaging seven points.

"One real advantage for Poly this year is a strong bench. We can rest all of our starting players during a game without really having to worry that we'll be at too much of a disadvantage," says Sue.

The surplus of talent includes Sandra Johnson, a sophomore from

WOMEN IN SPORTS

Franklin Junior High School, who will be the backup center. "She is a strong rebounder and may well earn a starting spot before long."

Another strong replacement at center is Becky Snowden, a 5-9 senior. Seniors Ronene Thomas and Kathy Maxon are both outstanding guard substitutes. Filling the forward spot when needed will be Ieta Eston, a sophomore from Franklin, who works well on the boards. "She is gaining experience and confidence each week and will really be strong by the second half of the season" adds Sue.

Poly will play at Compton Tuesday and host Lakewood Thursday.

SUZZANE Miguel calls her team, which boasts five returning players, "very well balanced with a lot of unity on the floor. Each game we are getting stronger."

At forwards are Linda Gillespie, a 5-8 senior who is currently averaging 10 points per game, and six-foot Kelly Figueroa. Kelly, a sophomore from DeMille Junior High School, has been bucketing an average of eight points. "Kelly, who was an excellent hitter on the varsity volleyball team, is a promising player," says Suzzane.

"I also have two fine inside shooters in Sandy Smyth, a returning junior, and Becky Frost, a senior, who was selected all-city in volleyball."

At center will be either Cheryl Racobs, a returning junior, or new player, Carol Miller. Both are six feet and "very versatile rebounders."

For points from the outside, Suzzane will be depending on three "excellent guards who are very coachable."

Two are veterans, Heidi Holm and Nancy Hamilton. "Heidi is very aggressive and Nancy is very, very quick." Kim Clouse Jr. will be new to the team in this position. She competed in tennis during the fall.

Millikan will play at Wilson Tuesday.

LONG BEACH City College's gymnastic team will be aiming for a mark of 124 Friday during conference finals at L. A. Valley College. The score will be needed to qualify for the AIAW regional competition at the University of Nevada, Reno.

Right now the team situation is "iffy" with four of Peggy Stoll's six Class I gymnasts recovering from the flu.

Softball tourney lures record 28 teams

The Long Beach Nitehawks and Lakewood Barons head a a record 28 teams opening play Friday night in the third Carson Parks/Recreation Department softball tournament.

Tournament director Roland Majehrzak said the Barons were seeded first, Nitehawks second, Vista third and Las Vegas fourth. The four byes were drawn by Vista, Sylmar, Corona and Las Vegas.

Lake, stream conditions

Here's more news about the Southern California kes and streams:

Streams in Orange and San Diego Counties likely ill be at low levels unless late rains fall. There is little ance that any of those streams will be planted with tchable-size rainbow trout.

The levels of Hemet and Fulmor Lakes in Riverside unty respond to local water conditions and both are pected to be lower than usual. Yet, there will be nts in the lakes as long as the wer temperature is low ough to suppport trout.

Hansen and Puddingstone Reservoirs are near nor- al and naturally will be lower unless more rain falls, t both are now fishable.

Remember this: The levels of Castaic and its Down- ream Pool and Pyramid, as well as Perris Lake, are ing to be drawn down to perhaps one-fourth or less of rmal, but the fishing should be good.

The drought's effect on those reservoirs will show later. Even the level of Lake Mead on the Colorado ver is due to be lowered and if that occurs too fast, e largemouth bass fishery will be endangered to the nt where Papa and Mama Bass can't rear a family. he spring fishing, however, should be excellent at all of e Colorado River lakes as well as in portions of the ver. The river itself is excellent for some species.

THE SALTON SEA should remain at its level. rtainly no water is pulled from that great body of ter for irrigation. In fact, much of the runoff of rigation water enters the Sea; that's why it is so salty. shing there now for orangemouth corvina, croaker d sargo is excellent. It's a great place to try at this e of year because the weather usually is great. One rd of caution: When the wind blows at the Sea, get off it in a hurry. The Sea is shallow and a strong wind n kick up enormous waves.

The latest creel checks by the Department of Fish d Game at Castaic Lake and the Downstream Pool ows that shore anglers are doing well. Several limits re weighed at from five to eight pounds (total weight), hen you can catch one-pounders or better there is no ed to complain.

Water skiing has a place at Castaic, and many nglers feel that there is too much space for them; that lowers the over-all results of fishing.

There are striped bass in Pyramid Lake, but none s been reported in recent creel checks. Numbers of inbow trout and some browns to 10 and 12 inches have en taken. Also, the bluegill fishing has been red-hot r those who know the lake well enough to find the hools.

Perris Lake aLso has produced some good fishing ently for the Alabama strain of spotted bass.

THE NEVADA DEPARTMENT of Fish and Game conducting an interesting experiment on the Truckee ver above Reno. If successful, it may be the pilot oject for rearing trout in what would be considered eir natural habitat—a river.

The Nevada DFG biologists planted more than 0,000 brown trout eggs in the river in the hope that at they would hatch and enough survive to provide a tter fishery in that stream. The Truckee, which is fed water from the Tahoe area, should be in good ndition this year because there has been a heavy owfall along that watershed. Tahoe got snow from rms that passed over Mammoth and other parts of e Sierra Nevada.

Jack Dieringer, chief of the Nevada DFG's fishery vision, explained how the river planting process was rried out. "Artificial spawning nests, called 'redds,' were constructed at various locations of the Truckee in the vicinity of Verdi," he said.

"We had to dig circular, shallow depressions in the river bottom riffle areas. We placed the eggs in the depressions and covered them with clean gravel two to six inches deep. The gravel allows the water to flow through and over the eggs providing oxygen to the developing fish. The gravel also holds the eggs in place and offers some protection from predators such as larger fish and certain aquatic insects. The eggs were fertilized in the hatchery before being taken to the river."

OUTDOOR MINIS — Fred J. Hall will open his Western Fishing Tackle and Fishing Boat Show at 3 p.m. Wednesday at the Great Western Exhibit Center. The show will run through Sunday and Hall insists that it's just what he calls it—an exhibition of fishing gear and all kinds of fishing boats.

One of the features will be the Stars for Charity, with stage and screen veteran Hal Baylor in charge. This is the place where you may have your picture taken with different stars of the screen and television for $1. Various prsonalties of the entertainment world have volunteered their services.

The Winchester-Western Outdoorsman-of-the-Year Award has been handed to Fred Bear, famed as a bow hunter and a dedicated conservationist. Bear was chosen in a national poll of outdoor writers and professional conservationists.

The Garcia Fishing Annual, which is far more than just a catalogue of tackle, is in the hands of sporting goods dealers. It sells for $1.50. Oddly enough, the lead story in the Annual is The Desert's Red Hot Bass Oasis, by Bob Saile, and concerns famed Lake Powell, one of the greatest recreational spots in the U.S.

John Prescott also has a beautiful photo-story about Powell: A Lake for All Reasons in the March issue of Sea Magazine. If you read both stories, you will want to load up the camper or automobile and head for Powell post-haste.

Millikan cagers threat to Poly in Moore League

By ELAINE RISINGER
Staff Writer

Poly High School will count on depth, and Millikan will try to take advantage of its excellent height during CIF girls basketball competition, according to coaches of the two schools.

The Rabbits, 1976 Vinnie G. Baton champions under Sue Parker, are eager to prove their ability in the Moore League. Millikan, third last year, plans to move up. "I think we're going to give them a run for their money," Suzanne Miguel says.

Sue has added three seniors, two juniors and two promising sophomores to the Poly lineup that includes three strong returning players.

Captaining this year's squad will be Angela Anglin, who has played for the varsity three years. Quick and very strong defensively, Angela, who will start as a forward, has been averaging five points during the pre-season.

Another third year veteran is Sandra Solorzano, who can fill either the center or forward position. With an average of five points per game, she is currently the team's best free throw shooter with 60 per cent from the line.

Sue calls Thera Smith, her other returnee, "a great all-around player, probably the best you'll see in Moore League." Voted the varsity's MVP last year as a sophomore, Thera averages 18 points and 12 rebounds per game. She reached a peak of 25 points against Inglewood.

Completing the starting roster will be two excellent guards. Eve Powars, a junior, is averaging 14 points per game. Her high score so far is 22. Strong defensively, she is the spark for the team's fast break offense. Junior Jamie McCombs will open as a guard but may play forward when called upon. She is an averaging seven points.

"One real advantage for Poly this year is a strong bench. We can rest all of our starting players during a game without really having to worry that we'll be at too much of a disadvantage," says Sue.

The surplus of talent includes Sandra Johnson, a sophomore from

WOMEN IN SPORTS

Franklin Junior High School, who will be the backup center. "She is a strong rebounder and may well earn a starting spot before long."

Another strong replacement at center is Becky Snowden, a 5-9 senior. Seniors Ronene Thomas and Kathy Maxon are both outstanding guard substitutes. Filling the forward spot when needed will be Ieta Eston, a sophomore from Franklin, who works well on the boards. "She is gaining experience and confidence each week and will really be strong by the second half of the season" adds Sue.

Poly will play at Compton Tuesday and host Lakewood Thursday.

SUZZANE Miguel calls her team, which boasts five returning players, "very well balanced with a lot of unity on the floor. Each game we are getting stronger."

At forwards are Linda Gillespie, a 5-8 senior who is currently averaging 10 points per game, and six-foot Kelly Figueroa. Kelly, a sophomore from DeMille Junior High School, has been bucketing an average of eight points. "Kelly, who was an excellent hitter on the varsity volleyball team, is a promising player," says Suzzane.

"I also have two fine inside shooters in Sandy Smyth, a returning junior, and Becky Frost, a senior, who was selected all-city in volleyball."

At center will be either Cheryl Racobs, a returning junior, or new player, Carol Miller. Both are six feet and "very versatile rebounders."

For points from the outside, Suzzane will be depending on three "excellent guards who are very coachable."

Two are veterans, Heidi Holm and Nancy Hamilton. "Heidi is very aggressive and Nancy is very, very quick." Kim Clouse Jr. will be new to the team in this position. She competed in tennis during the fall.

Millikan will play at Wilson Tuesday.

LONG BEACH City College's gymnastic team will be aiming for a mark of 124 Friday during conference finals at L. A. Valley College. The score will be needed to qualify for the AIAW regional competition at the University of Nevada, Reno.

Right now the team situation is "iffy" with four of Peggy Stoll's six Class 1 gymnasts recovering from the flu.

The whole family is very involved in the future of people. Don has taught for 27 years at Jefferson Jr. High School; Rich is home after 2 years in the Peace Corps in Africa; Don Jr. teaches 6th grade at Muir Elementary School; Ray is a senior at Berkeley, hopes to enter Law School next fall; Eric is in Jr. College in Northern California; Neal is a Junior at Millikan High, and Gary is an 8th grader at Hill Junior High School.

Betty Keller, owner of Atlantis Realty has been licensed in Real Estate for the past 7 years and opened her own Firm 5 years ago. Betty believes in specializing in the needs of clients and providing the services she feels they deserve.

In keeping with the philosophy to upgrade the Community in which she works and lives, the firm bought an old California Style frame house at 284 Redondo Ave, and completely refurbished it as an office to give a bright, cheery, business atmosphere.

Born in Liverpool, England, Betty came to the U.S. as a war bride in 1947. She and her husband Don live in Park Estates and are the parents of six boys who range in age from 13 to 28 years.

The whole family is very involved in the future of people. Don has taught for 27 years at Jefferson Jr. High School; Rich is home after 2 years in the Peace Corps in Africa; Don Jr. teaches 6th grade at Muir Elementary School; Ray is a senior at Berkeley, hopes to enter Law School next fall; Eric is in Jr. College in Northern California; Neal is a Junior at Millikan High, and Gary is an 8th grader at Hill Junior High School.

Betty personally trains most of her salespeople and attributes the success of Atlantis Realty to their involvement with the community and serving the needs of others.

MOTOR LOG TO SAN DIEGO'S CATAMARAN

Peugeot diesel has class

Story and Photos
By BILL EMERY
Associate Auto Editor

San Diego has it . . . beautiful parks, historic sites, Sea World, the world famous Zoo, sailing and water skiing on Mission Bay, distinguished resort hotels and nightlife, to name a few attractions in this, the playground of the West.

It almost makes you wonder if anyone in this border city does anything but play and have fun. There are a number of tours that will bus you and cruise you on the bay anywhere from 3 hours to all day, and even more tours that include a run to Tijuana for Jai Alai, horse and dog racing, bullfights and nightclubbing.

To visit this winter, spring, summer and fall vacationland, we borrowed a Peugeot four-door sedan complete with air conditioning and sunroof from Frank Marshall, owner of Import Auto, exclusive Peugeot dealer in Long Beach at 1460 Long Beach Blvd. and drove to the Catamaran resort hotel on Mission Bay.

There was something special . . . something different about the Peugeot we drove last week end. It's highly unusual to get 33 miles per gallon fuel economy driving a luxuriously-appointed family-sized sedan with all the comforts on the road.

This Peugot was diesel powered. It doesn't burn gasoline and this represents a completely different technology which makes it a sensible alternative to the gasoline engine with the energy crisis on and the emphasis on manufacturers to create clean burning emission-free engines.

Peugeot's 504 diesel has a four cylinder engine with a Bosch fuel injection system instead of a carburetor. This means the diesel has no spark plugs or related electrical equipment such as a distributor, coil, condenser or high tension spark plug wires, all of which require regular maintenance and periodic replacement, and account for much of the operational expense of gasoline-powered automobiles.

About the only maintenance necessary on the diesel engine is a 3090 mile oil change and a periodic check of the filtering systems.

PEUGEOT HAS SUNROOF AND LUXURY APPOINTMENTS

Although the Peugeot diesel has been engineered for economy and durability, it sacrifices nothing in luxury and comfort. The 504 sedan offers four wheel independent suspension . . . the same system that is used in Indianapolis and Long Beach Grand Prix racing cars. Four wheel disc brakes, unitized construction which welds the entire body and frame into a single unit, rack and pinion steering, front and rear anti-sway bars and deeply padded wide bucket seats add to the 504's driveability and riding comfort.

These seats, covered with crushed velvet-like material, are the most comfortable in the automotive industry. The front bucket seats fully recline to meet the rear seat level turning the entire interior into a bed.

Peugeot's civilized approach to equipping the 504 with many features that would be optional on other cars include such niceties as an all-steel sliding sunroof, Michelin steel-belted radial tires, tinted glass, electric clock, full carpeting, courtesy lights, childproof rear door locks and side window defrosters. And, the interior offers unusually spacious leg and head room.

Once you get used to the smooth, low rpm shifting of the four-speed diesel gearbox, there is gratification in knowing that you are getting complete use out of every drop of fuel. This total burning results in better mileage as well as its low emission of carbon monoxide and unburned hydrocarbons without added-on emission control devices.

At the present, there are only two manufacturers selling diesel cars in the U.S. and only Peugeot offers a station wagon. But the diesels are coming. In the past decade, Peugeot has built over 500,000 of these engines for passenger cars. This company is off to a good start. start.

Art Stephan, IPT Auto Editor, set a new style of writing motor logs early in his career when he combined information on a new car with a trip to a nearby resort. He made over 200 week-end trips before changing his duties in 1962. Art died Feb. 17, 1977, less than 2 weeks before he would have retired.

The Catamaran motor hotel, located on the bay side of Mission Beach peninsula, affords instant access to the beach and warm waters of the bay as well as ready access to miles of sandy beaches and surf from the Pacific Ocean, just a stone's throw over the strand.

Towering 14 stories over Southern California's "play bay" of resorts, sail and ski boats, this resort hotel teamed up with the Bahia to run a stern-wheeler riverboat-type ferry between the two luxury hotels while the passengers dance, sightsee or sip a beverage of their choice.

Featuring Jazz '77 Tuesdays through Sundays in the Polynesian Room, the in-concerts manage to fill the room twice each night from 9 p.m. and 11 p.m. Jazz singer Esther Phillips held her audience spellbound as she and her musical group went from one number into another without hesitation and in perfect accord.

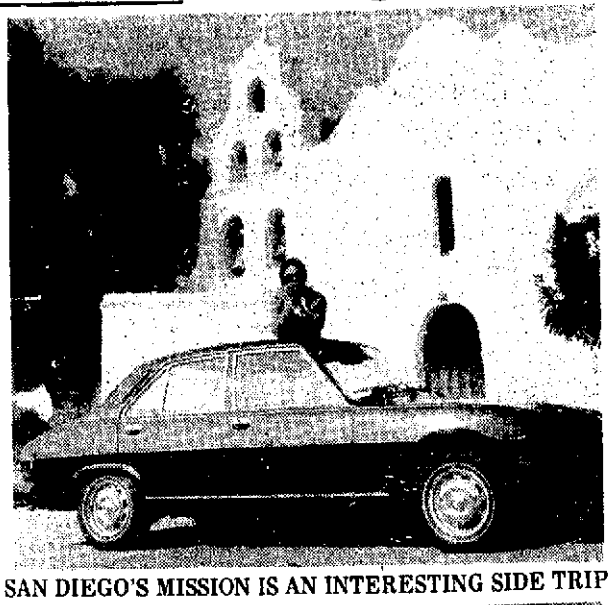

Coming up are stars widely known in the jazz circles. Gabor Szabo Feb. 22-27; Cal Tjader Mar. 1-6; Chico Hamilton Mar. 8-13; Kenny Burrell Mar. 15-20; Charlie Byrd Mar. 22-27; Freddie Hubbard Apr. 12-17; Mongo Santamaria Apr. 19-24; Dizzy Gillespie Apr. 26-May 1 and George Shearing May 17-22.

Antique auto buffs will find some of the rarest early automobiles restored and displayed behind glass on the premises. Horseless carriages from 1902 to 1915 shed a light on the history of automobiles, and many other antique cars show up each Saturday during a weekly club meeting at the Catamaran.

A heated swimming pool and jaccuzi make bathing popular at almost any hour or day. The pool is bordered in oriental splendor by Mr. Ito and its charming minature waterfall.

Part of the historic Scripps family dining salon has been preserved on the grounds of the Catamaran Hotel and transformed into a wedding chapel. Built in the early 1900's, the building accomodates more than 100 persons for Sunday dinners and gala holiday banquets. Even today, with pews aside the center aisle, the chapel will accomodate up to 75 people.

The Catamaran has something for everybody. It's the greatest! And as the French would say: "Some of the world's greatest automobiles have been Peugeots". The new 504 Diesel is one of them.

Jane Seymour —from England with talent

By BOB MARTIN, TV-Radio Editor

Eyes quickly turned in the direction of Jane Seymour as the young actress entered the Polo Lounge of the Beverly Hills Hotel carrying a basket of colorful flowers.

She joined an NBC publicist and me at a table, and placed the flowers in the middle as a centerpiece.

"It's my birthday," said the attractive young lady from England, who went on to explain that the flowers had been given to her by a "volatile Italian" who had become angry when she turned down his invitation to lunch. The flowers, it seems, were his way of apologizing for his show of temper.

"May I ask which birthday it is?" I inquired.

"My 26th," replied Jane. "Twenty-six is a good age, don't you think?"

"A very good age," said I, proving that my powers of memory are strong.

Miss Seymour pointed out that her parents had called from England earlier in the day to wish her a happy birthday. She came to Hollywood last June, quickly landed an acting role, and has kept busy as a performer ever since.

SHE LIKES living here, and said she is looking for a home to buy in Beverly Hills. She's even, she confessed, beginning to think a bit about money, which is so much easier to acquire in America than in England.

"Eighty-five per cent of your earnings in England go for taxes," she said. "But I never had been much concerned with money. I was more interested in learning and practicing my craft." She started at age 2 with ballet lessons.

Jane's father is a prominent London gynecologist, but, she noted, isn't wealthy.

"Do you know that I earned half as much in two days ($20,000) as he makes in a year?" she asked with an expression of incredulity. She referred to a recent two-day stint as a member of NBC's team in the "Challenge of the Network Stars" sports competition special which will air Monday night from 9 to 11 on ABC (Channel 7 locally).

Her mother, she pointed out, is a native of Poland who lived in Indonesia and was placed in a concentration camp for six years in the World War II era. After the war, she moved to England, started a business of her own and wed Miss Seymour's father.

During Jane's eight months in America, she has had starring roles in two of the miniseries presented on "NBC's Best Seller," a guest-starring role in the "McCloud" episode titled "The Great Taxicab Stampede" and a guest-starring part in the TV mystery movie "Benny and Barney: Las Vegas Undercover," which aired on NBC last month.

She played fashion designer Eva Meyers, a married woman who became the mistress of the rising young garment industry tycoon Jay Blackman (Steven Keats), in "Seventh Avenue," which ended its three-week, six-hour run on "NBC's Best Seller" series last Thursday night.

The serial was filmed in New York City during one of that city's coldest winters on record — quite a contrast, she pointed out, to the summerlike weather in Beverly Hills on the day of our interview.

Last fall, Miss Seymour appeared in five hours of the 10-hour, eight-week "Captains and the Kings" serial, the first presentation on "NBC's Best Seller." NBC plans to rerun the popular serial this spring, after the conclusion of the upcoming, three-part "The Rhinemann Exchange."

In the serial based on Taylor Caldwell's novel, the British actress portrayed Marjorie Chisholm, who married Rory Armagh (Perry King) in a secret civil ceremony against the wishes of her Protestant father, Judge Chisholm (John Houseman), and Rory's wealthy and powerful father, Joseph Armagh (Richard Jordan).

The elder Armagh later had all records of the marriage destroyed, and pushed Rory into marrying a Catholic woman in line with his plan for Rory to become the first Catholic President of the United States. Marjorie reappeared in Rory's life on the eve of the nominating convention, became his lover and was with him when he was shot.

"I've been approached about the possibility of doing a sequel to 'Captains and the Kings,'" Jane said, "but I'm not interested in doing that."

MISS SEYMOUR had had wide experience as a ballet dancer, singer and actress before coming to America last June. She was perhaps best known to American audiences as the leading lady

JANE SEYMOUR . . . in "NBC's Best Seller: Seventh Avenue"

Solitaire, opposite Roger Moore in the James Bond movie "Live and Let Die." Other movies for the theater in which she has appeared have been "Young Winston," the Danish production "The Only Way" and, first, "Oh, What a Lovely War," in which she had a small part at age 17. It was while doing her first film role that she met her former husband, Michael Attenborough, son of actor-director Richard Attenborough.

Another film, which she made in Europe before coming to Hollywood, is due to be released in June, she said. It's titled "Sinbad and the Eye of the Tiger," and she stars with Patrick Wayne.

On television, Jane was seen last April as Bathsheba in the four-hour Biblical drama special, "The Story of David." Earlier, she appeared on American television in the two-part, four-hour, made-for-TV movie "Frankenstein: The True Story," on NBC — as both the lovely country girl Agatha and the beautiful but venal Prima — and in "The Strauss Family" series on ABC.

Cartilage trouble changed Jane's direction from ballet dancing to acting when she was in her teens, after she had appeared with the Festival and Kirov Ballets.

In addition to movies and television (she starred in the BBC's "The Onedin Line" series), Miss Seymour has done classical stage roles in British productions of "Hamlet," "Macbeth" and "A Doll's House." She also played the lead in an Agatha Christie play, "The Hollow," and a striptease artist in the farce "Not Now, Darling." She also has performed as a singer.

With the money she has made in America in the last eight months, Jane feels she can be selective in her acceptance of roles. She is well established as an actress, and looks forward to doing mainly movies for the theater and films or drama specials for TV.

Her future appears bright. Twenty-six is, indeed, a good age. Especially if you're as talented and well trained as Jane Seymour.

THEY EVEN LIKED 'ROOTS' IN THE SOUTH

By LES BROWN
c. 1977 N.Y. Times News Service

NEW YORK — In 1957, when the late popular singer Nat King Cole became the first black performer to have his own network television series, several Southern stations refused to carry it, and sponsors avoided it for fear of a Southern boycott. The show was canceled within a year.

A dozen years later, some public television stations in the South declined to carry the celebrated children's series "Sesame Street" because of its racially integrated cast.

As recently as 1973, a syndicated series featuring Barbara McNair ceased production when the distributor despaired of being able to sell it to a single station in the South.

BUT LAST MONTH, virtually every station affiliated with ABC-TV — including those below the Mason-Dixon Line, some in two-station markets whose primary commitment is to CBS or NBC — put on the air the 12-hour adaptation of Alex Haley's best-selling novel, "Roots," and reaped the benefits of the program that attracted the largest audience in television history.

Although the program dealt with slavery in the United States from the black point of view, and had a predominantly black cast (the whites almost invariably portraying "heavies"), "Roots" was carried without serious incident in all the capitals of the civil rights violence of the 1960s.

FROM Jan. 23 to Jan. 30, when the program was on the air, the South was caught up in what some local newspapers termed "Rootsmania." The mayors of Birmingham, Ala., and more than 20 other Southern cities proclaimed the eight-day period "Roots Week."

From Montgomery, Ala., to Little Rock, Ark., "Roots" dominated conversations, radio call-in shows, classroom discussions and pulpit sermons, according to a survey of dozens of Southern broadcasters.

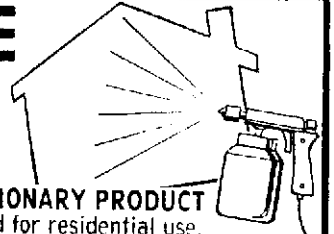

In Winston-Salem, N.C., a Boy Scouts meeting was rescheduled and several week-night church functions cut short to allow people to return home in time for the new "Roots" episode.

'Minstrel Man' film looks at earlier era

By BOB THOMAS
Associated Press

Television viewers will observe another aspect of black history Wednesday night when CBS presents a special, "Minstrel Man," concerning the emergence of blacks in American show business.

"Our show picks up where 'Roots' left off," says Glynn Turman, who stars as the song and dance man Harry Brown Jr. "It's a small peek into the Reconstruction era, when blacks were trying to find work for themselves. And if they wanted to make it in the entertainment business, just about the only way was the minstrel show."

Turman and Ted Ross play brothers who break into the once all-white minstrel world. Turman is the talented, extroverted star who is content to use the minstrel show as a means to success. Ross is a song writer — "kind of an early Scott Joplin" — who wants to shatter the black stereotypes.

"WHITE PEOPLE originated the minstrel show," explained Turman in an interview. "They blacked their faces, borrowed songs from the plantations, and directed their humor at how dumb the black people were.

"To make their own way in the entertainment field, black actors had to black their faces and imitate the whites imitating blacks."

Turman, a slender, energetic man in his 30s ("I can play 17-year-olds and mature men, so I don't tell my age anymore"), recently returned from filming "The Serpent's Egg" with Ingmar Bergman. He is much in demand as an actor, but he isn't satisfied.

"This is 1977, and still nothing has changed," he remarked.

"SURE, I enjoy all the attention, but I'm still not master of my own destiny. 'Minstrel Man' was written by Richard Shapiro and Esther Mayesh Shapiro, directed by William Graham, and the executive producer was Roger Gimbel. I love them all dearly, but all are white.

"Where is the opportunity for blacks to create their own material? The only answer is to keep trying. And for that reason, I plan to go into production myself."

"MINSTREL MAN," a two-hour 1977 TV movie about Negro minstrels — black men in blackface — will air at 9 p.m. Wednesday on Ch. 2. Glynn Turman (left) and Ted Ross star with Stanley Clay (not shown). Minstrel shows originated in America around 1840 with whites in blackface performing songs and dances of slaves. After the Civil War, Negroes formed their own troupes.

It has been a long road from Harlem, where Glynn Turman spent his boyhood. He was blessed with a mother "who would never allow me to say, 'I can't do it'; it was always 'why not?' " His mother pointed him in the direction of the theater and helped land Glynn a role in the original company of "A Raisin in the Sun."

"SHE DIED when I was 16, so she never was able to see me succeed," he said. "I dropped out of 'Raisin' because I was more interested in the thuggery of the streets."

His interest in acting revived when he enrolled in New York's famed High School of the Performing Arts. He graduated at the top of his class. Married and starting a family, he passed up college to try for an acting career. Between roles he found other work.

"I worked as a mail room clerk at United Artists," he recalled, "but I was fired because I spent my time in projection rooms watching movies. I sold ties at Gimbels. I was always getting fired from jobs because I was more interested in finding acting jobs. My longest work was a year and a half as a truck driver; it was perfect because I had time to hustle the casting offices."

HIS WORK included a season at the Tyrone Guthrie Theater in Minneapolis and a continuing role in the night-time soap opera "Peyton Place." The 1975 film "Cooley High" made him "an overnight sensation — but it sure was a long night."

Producer Gimbel recognized Turman's acting talent for "Minstrel Man," but the role called for a song and dance man, "which I am not." He learned enough clog and rakewalk to get by.

"Cooley High" also prompted Ingmar Bergman to seek Turman for the role of a black musician in 1923 Berlin in "The Serpent's Egg."

"The part got better the more Bergman and I talked," said the actor. "It was a very pleasant experience working with him. He is a choreographer; he likes to manipulate his actors, and he has so much fun doing it. He is one of the few directors still playing at directing."

Manilow raps the critics; has special coming up

By GEORGE MAKSIAN
New York News

NEW YORK — Poor Barry Manilow. The critics hate him. They call his music schmaltzy, syrupy and overly romantic. Some have gone so far as to say that his performance is "too clean-cut;" that he's a schlock entertainer.

Even Bette Midler, for whom he used to play piano, didn't take to him in the beginning. "It was hate at first sight," Manilow once said, referring to their first encounter.

Everybody seems to hate Manilow except the public (sound familiar?). His records sell in the millions and his concerts invariably are sellouts. Wednesday night, he'll test the TV audience when he headlines his first musical-variety special on ABC.

"CRITICS, BAH!," moaned Manilow in disgust during a recent visit, which interrupted his ongoing 98-city concert tour. "What do they know? I was interviewed recently by a national rock magazine and finally came face to face with one of their critics. She had to be in her 60s, maybe more.

"Can you imagine a writer saying that my performance was 'too clean-cut'? What the heli did he want me to do, take my pants off on the stage?

"They all criticized my show at the Uris Theater in December. But not one of them said there were 4,000 screaming fans falling out of their seats. My two-week stand in New York was sold out two weeks in advance.

"Critics! I used to respect them until I realized the people I was being insulted by were people who knew much less than I do. I can't take them seriously."

MANILOW, who broke off with Midler in 1974 and went solo as a performer, says there's nothing wrong with romantic music. "The first time I made out it was with a Johnny Mathis record playing in the background," he said.

Barry's first big hit was "Mandy," which sold in the millions. All his singles and albums since then have hit the top 10 list.

"No, I didn't write 'I Write the Songs'" (this year's Grammy winner), confessed the singer, without waiting for the question. "I don't know how that got around. I never said it. People just assumed it. Bruce Johnson wrote that one."

Manilow also didn't write "Mandy" and the popular McDonald's commercial "You Deserve a Break Today." But he did write "It's a Miracle," "Could It Be Magic?" and "This One Is for You."

"SOME SONGS I wrote, some I didn't," he said. "The count is about equal. The same goes for my commercials. In fact, I do a skit on my show built around the many commercials that I've been associated with. I call it my 'Very Strange Melody.'

"It's made up of jingles which I wrote, and-or performed, for various products, such as Band-Aid, Stridex, State Farm Insurance, Dr. Pepper, Pepsi, Kentucky Fried Chicken and McDonald's.

"There were many versions of the McDonald's jingle," the singer pointed out. "On several of them I was one of a group of singers, and on one I did a solo. I've recorded a lot of songs I didn't write and I always give credit where it's due. Just read the album covers."

MANILOW hasn't done a commercial in two years. The ones still heard on the air, including Stridex, Band-Aid and State Farm, were recorded some time ago.

The lean, 6-foot entertainer, with long streaks of bleached hair, didn't start out to be a singer. When he first met Midler (they were initially teamed at the Continental Baths in New York), he co-produced, arranged, orchestrated and played piano for her.

Manilow hits at critics

But he never sang.

"I WAS GOING to be an arranger," he said. "That's what I was doing for Bette and that's what I thought I'd be doing for the rest of my life. Singing was a total surprise to me.

"It all happened after I had written some songs, nothing special. Then one day, Ron Dante, an associate, heard one of my tunes, and he said, 'Why don't we record it?' I really didn't want to do it, to start a whole new career. I was 27 at the time (he'll be 31 in June). But I did it and here I am."

In four short years, Manilow rose to be named top male singles vocalist by Record World and top male singles artist by Billboard magazine. His first two albums both went gold (meaning sales of over a million), and his most recent two albums are both platinum (sales of over two million).

Not bad for a guy who was born and raised in a Brooklyn slum and once worked in the mailroom at CBS.

Manilow hits at critics

co-produced, arranged, orchestrated and played piano for her.

But he never sang.

"I WAS GOING to be an arranger," he said. "That's what I was doing for Bette and that's what I thought I'd be doing for the rest of my life. Singing was a total surprise to me.

"It all happened after I had written some songs, nothing special. Then one day, Ron Dante, an associate, heard one of my tunes, and he said, 'Why don't we record it?' I really didn't want to do it, to start a whole new career. I was 27 at the time (he'll be 31 in June). But I did it and here I am."

In four short years, Manilow rose to be named top male singles vocalist by Record World and top male singles artist by Billboard magazine. His first two albums both went gold (meaning sales of over a million), and his most recent two albums are both platinum (sales of over two million).

Not bad for a guy who was born and raised in a Brooklyn slum and once worked in the mailroom at CBS.

'Glitter Palace' is film about lesbians, murder

By JERRY BUCK
Associated Press

If you're in the mood for a good, old-fashioned murder mystery, try "In the Glitter Palace" on television tonight.

By old-fashioned, I mean only in the sense that the mystery is peeled back layer after layer by star Chad Everett — as a lawyer defending a client he feels is wrongly accused — only to reveal another puzzle.

Otherwise, there is nothing old-fashioned about this story. It's so contemporary that its subject matter — lesbianism — is relatively new to television. It is treated with understanding and in a low-key manner despite the potential for sensationalism, as Everett seeks a solution in the underworld of homosexuality.

THE DEFENDANT is a young lesbian accused of killing a blackmailer who preyed on gay women. You know right up front who the real killer is, but it is fascinating as Everett works to clear his client.

"In the Glitter Palace" is an NBC "Big Event" at 9 tonight on Channel 4, following the two-hour Disney comedy "The Strongest Man in the World." That's quite a contrast, so parents should be aware that the second film is not for youngsters.

Another good thing about this film is that we are spared those dreadful courtroom scenes that seem to be obligatory to any drama involving a lawyer. The only courtroom scene comes at the end when the killer realizes the sham is over, and it's a beaut. But it's not a "Perry Mason" style denouement.

JERRY LUDWIG'S script is reminiscent of those rich, dark, brooding murder mysteries from author Ross Macdonald, where family secrets long kept hidden come spilling out under probing.

The story involves a sleazy private detective who was a partner in blackmail with the murdered woman, a prominent woman judge who was a blackmail victim herself, and a super rich father who would rather see his daughter make a deal with the district attorney than have her lesbianism come out in a trial.

The role of lawyer Vince Halloran is the best ever for Chad Everett. Freed from playing the stiff, humorless Dr. Gannon in the "Medical Center" series, he can be vulnerable, baffled and make a fool of himself.

FINE performances are also etched by Barbara Hershey as Everett's former girlfriend and the defendant's lover, Anthony Zerbe as the private detective, Diana Scarwid as the defendant, Salome Jens as the judge, Howard Duff as the father, Ron Masak as a cynical police detective and David Wayne as the homespun senior law partner.

"Sure, it's a better role than Joe Gannon," said Everett. "I could be roguish, I had some action, I had a sense of humor. The network was very protective of Gannon. They didn't want him to be a buffoon. In the scene where Halloran learns his former girlfriend is also a lesbian he becomes a buffoon because of his smug attitude about homosexuality."

EVERETT, who's now trying to carve out a career in feature films, said he accepted the role because of the statement it makes. "It tells us about understanding," he said. "I think it's important that all human beings understand each other."

He said that although the film has all the earmarks of a pilot he has no intention of going into another series. Currently, he is preparing to start "Porter Rockwell," a feature film about a Mormon marshal and gunfighter, and he is launching his new album, "Chad."

"I want to do as many movies as I can that offer versatility and have something to say," he said. "I'll still do television, but it's more confining because of the censorship. I feel the censorship is too rigid. Television should label its films for adults the way theaters do."

CHAD EVERETT, as Vince Halloran, tells Barbara Hershey, as Ellen Lange, that he will act as attorney for her lesbian friend who is accused of murder, in the new TV movie "In the Glitter Palace," at 9 tonight on Ch. 4.

Got a TV Question?

By BETTELOU PETERSON
Knight News Service

Q. Tell me where to write to compliment the producers of "Roots." It was a fantastic film and I want so much to see more educational and good programs that make you think and feel. — Mrs. S.E.

A. The executive producer was David Wolper, but the man to tell not only how you felt about "Roots" but also what kind of TV you want to see is Fred Silverman, president, ABC Entertainment, ABC-TV, 1330 Avenue of the Americas, New York, N.Y. 10019. Silverman's the man with the final say on what goes on ABC and when.

Q. I know that Ben Vereen is a singer and dancer but why doesn't he get more involved in acting? He was absolutely excellent as "Chicken George" in "Roots". — L.P.

A. His work in "Roots" pretty much assures him of an acting career if he wants it. But, let's hope he continues doing what he's done all along — combine acting with his singing and dancing.

Vereen says he likes to do variety on TV, drama in the movies, musicals on stage, and he's done them all. He had a summer NBC-TV series, "Ben Vereen Comin' at Ya" in 1975; played Louis Armstrong in a TV movie, also in 1975. He hopes to turn his nightclub act as old-time black vaudeville comic Bert Williams into a movie of Williams' life.

Other Vereen credits: "Funny Lady" with Streisand in the movies; "Jesus Christ Superstar," "Hair," "Golden Boy," "Pippin," on stage. He won the Tony as best musical actor for the last.

Q. Did Tom Moore in "Roots" play a cop in "Mod Squad"? — P. B.

A. Georg Stanford Brown, who was Moore, played Terry Webster in "The Rookies." Clarence Williams III was the cop in "Mod Squad."

Q. Watching "Roots" got us started on an argument. I say John Amos, who was Kunta Kinte, and the father in "Good Times," was also on the "Mary Tyler Moore Show." But, I'm the only one in the family who thinks so. — D.G.

A. Amos played Gordy, the weatherman, for three seasons on the MTM show. That was before he did two seasons on "Maude," in the recurring role of Florida's husband and before "Good Times," where he spent two and a half seasons as James Evans.

Q. I watched as much as I could of the special series "Roots", but I missed some of the episodes due to work. I would like to know if it will be on TV again. I know many who have the same request. — P. O.

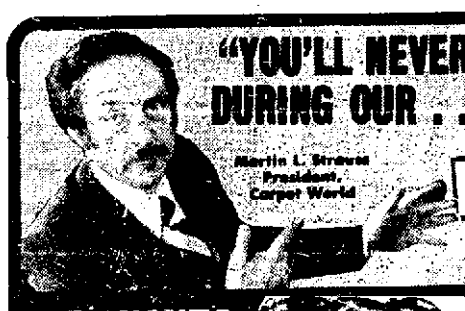

A. So far, ABC has made no plans for repeating "Roots." The network owns the rights to a single rerun. (After that, producer David Wolper can sell it elsewhere). "Roots" was the most-watched show in TV history. ABC estimates that 130 million Americans saw some part of "Roots" during its eight-day run: Jan. 23-30.

Before that, the two parts of "Gone With the Wind," shown Nov. 7 and 8 last year, drew an estimated 110 million viewers. As it stacks up now, the 10 most-watched single programs in TV history are, in order: "Roots," Jan.

Got a TV Question?

Q. I thought John Amos and Ben Vereen did terrific jobs in "Roots." What are their future plans? — B.R.

A. Vereen has a full schedule of nightclub performances and will do some TV variety guest spots (he got a standing ovation as a presenter on the "American Music Awards" the week after the showing of "Roots"). Amos will be Ernest Borgnine's partner in "Future Cop," a new ABC series set to start in March.

Q. Where have I seen Brad Davis, the actor who was George Johnson, in "Roots"? He looks so familiar. — A.R.

A. Davis was Richard, the young man who befriended Sally Field, in another first-rate TV drama this season, "Sybil."

Q. I enjoy the new "Rich Man, Poor Man" series. Where can I buy "Rich Man, Poor Man, Book Two" which is being dramatized? — J. C.

A. You can't. It doesn't exist. After the success of the dramatization of Irwin Shaw's novel "Rich Man, Poor Man," ABC decided to continue the story of the Jordaches. They gave the series the misleading subtitle "Book II." The shows are all scripts written for TV and not taken from any previously written source.

Q. Tell us a little about Haywood Nelson of "What's Happening." — Two Fans.

A. Haywood's a junior in high school and started in TV at age 6 doing commercials. He was born in New York City, has a younger brother, Gary. Dad's a bus driver and home is Garden City, N.Y. But Haywood and his mom share an apartment in Burbank while he's at work on the TV series.

Address questions to Bettelou Peterson, 321 W. Lafayette, Detroit, Mich. 48231.

Lee Van Cleef to do TV pilot

Motion picture actor Lee Van Cleef has been signed to star in "Scanlon," a 90-minute program development project for the NBC Television Network.

He will play the title role in the contemporary drama about a U.S. marshal. Ed Anhalt and Rift Fournier are the producers for Viacom Enterprises. Mark Carliner is the executive producer.

Van Cleef has appeared in many motion pictures, including "High Noon," "The Man Who Shot Liberty Valance," "The Good, the Bad and the Ugly," "El Condor" and "Vanishing American."

'Good Times' behind him, John Amos looks ahead

By JAY SHARBUTT
Associated Press

According to Hollywood lore, nifty things happen to an actor who lands a meaty role in a hit TV show and gets great reviews. All manner of Hollywood mendicantes glide up, waving big money, offering big roles, speaking of superstardom and immortality.

"Nothing happened, really," said a grinning John Amos, 34, the tall, powerfully built man who drew mighty good reviews as the adult Kunta Kinte in ABC's top-rated "Roots" a few weeks ago.

"More recognition, maybe, but that doesn't put money in the bank. Everyone tells me it's going to happen. So I'm just waiting."

THERE WAS no bitterness in his voice, just a matter-of-fact tone suggesting he's been around long enough to realize that if you truly believe the Hollywood dream it can ruin your whole day.

On this particular day, he was in a cop's uniform, having lunch before going back to work with his co-star, Ernest Borgnine, in a six-part series called "Future Cop" that ABC will start in March.

The show was a TV movie last season. Before "Roots" aired, ABC asked Amos if he'd like to do more episodes of "Future Cop."

"The money was good, and you know this business is feast and famine," the actor said. "I knew I wasn't going to get another 'Roots' right away, so I said, 'Damn right.'"

AMOS, born in Newark, raised in East Orange, N.J., once tried to be a pro football player. He didn't make it. So, after various jobs, he became a standup comic, then a comedy writer, then an actor.

The proverbial big break came when he was cast as Gordy, the black weatherman of CBS' "Mary Tyler Moore Show." In early 1974, he got costar billing as head of the new "Good Times" ghetto household on CBS.

They parted ways last season. Producer Norman Lear's office says Amos was unhappy, asked to be let out of the series. Amos says he was dropped from the show. He also says he prefers to discuss positive things.

SUCH AS "Feets," a new comedy album on which he is working; a possible movie about a Zulu chieftain on which he began research and writing five years before "Roots," and, of course, "Roots" itself.

A straightforward man, Amos didn't hesitate a moment when asked what he felt that series did for American viewers:

"I think the best thing it

Scream, or kiss your house goodbye.

There doesn't seem to be any way to stop property taxes from going up and up. Everybody's clean. There's nobody to get mad at. The politicians are only giving us the services we demand. And our property taxes pay for them. It's a mess.

Every night this week, reporter Leo McElroy takes a careful, painful look at our out-of-control taxes on Eyewitness News Closeup.

You'll want to scream. And you'd better... soon. If you don't, then pucker up. You may have to kiss your house goodbye.

Solarian from Armstrong the sunny floor that shines without waxing

Solarian's high shine comes from its Mirabond® wear surface, a special formulation that will retain its gloss — without waxing — far longer than any ordinary vinyl floor. It's also easier to keep clean. Spills, tracked-in dirt — even black heel marks — come up easily.

Parent workshops project set at NBC

The NBC Television Network, in cooperation with Teachers Guides to Television, has funded the Parent Participation TV Workshops, a pilot project designed to explore the use of television to open communication between parents and children, it was announced by George A. Heinemann, vice president, special children's programming.

Using NBC-TV's "Special Treat" children's programs, parents and children of varying ages are being asked to participate in a cross-generation discussion following the broadcast of the television specials. The first workshops have been received with great enthusiasm by parents, teachers and students.

phenomenon," commented Eugene Bohi, general manager of WGHP-TV, High Point, N.C. "Over and over he kept hearing people remark that the enthusiasm for 'Roots' proved how far we've come in black-white acceptance."

"The world's changed down here since I arrived 15 years ago," said Milton S. Cohn, president of WLOS-TV, Asheville, N.C. "I'd guess the program caused more racial friction in the North than in the South."

Most broadcasters conceded that a program such as "Roots" would have had explosive effect in the South five years ago, but none admitted to any apprehension about putting "Roots" on the air now.

Fred Pierce, general manager of WJCL-TV, Savannah, Ga., told of receiving some calls from people saying, "We don't need to open up those old sores." But he and others noted that there was no advance pressure to keep the program from being televised.

EXPECTEDLY, some hate mail was received by the ABC affiliates, and blacks as well as whites wrote in to complain about aspects of the show. Many of the complaints concerned the partial nudity, the sex scenes, the coarse language and the violence in the program.

In some communities, there were reports of racial tensions in the schools, marked by white and black pupils hurling at each other such terms as "massa" and "yassuh," popularized by the television serial, but most reports of scuffles could not be verified by the news departments of the local stations.

Similar reports of minor racial disturbances in the schools, believed to have been prompted by "Roots," came from the Northern cities too, several of them from the New York area.

ALTHOUGH "Roots" was a prodigious television hit, not all Southern broadcasters believe it contributed to changing racial attitudes. All, however, regarded the showing itself as a measure of the progress that has been made in the South.

"I answered calls from some people who had serious difficulties with the program," said Robert Doubleday, president of KATV, Little Rock. "We asked those who were upset to look at the show in perspective.

"We explained," he continued, "that they were accepting the show as factual, rather than as a fictionalized account of one man's family history."

WKAB-TV in Montgomery, Ala., also stressed to callers that the program was entertainment and "not blanket truth about what happened."

William H. Dilday Jr., a black broadcaster who heads WLBT in Jackson, Miss., expressed doubt that the serial provoked shame in whites or that it has made a significant difference in race relations among adults.

"In a few weeks, they'll forget what they saw and think of it as just another television program. It's the children who I think won't put it out of their minds," Dilday said. His station is an affiliate of NBC and was not the station that carried "Roots" in Jackson.

"The series touched off a lot of pride and controlled anger in the black community here," he went on. "I think it's given a lot of young people a sense of ancestry and a feeling of greater stature. Overall, I'd say the show was more beneficial to blacks than to whites."

THE BIBLE Says

J. T. SMITH

THE INCOMPARABLE BOOK # 3

Last week we discussed the fact that the words which were spoken by the apostles were given them of God. But someone may be saying, "I believe that the words spoken by the apostles were inspired (God breathed), but I do not believe the things written in the Bible are from God. They were simply written by some good men." One who has this attitude needs to read 1 Cor. 14:37 and Eph.3:2-5. In fact, one might go as far astray as did Mr. Sydney Harris in a recent article in the IPT entitled FAITH MUST SPRING FROM KNOWLEDGE, NOT IGNORANCE, in which he takes the position that Matthew, Mark, Luke, and John never met Jesus in the flesh. Surely Mr. Harris does not believe the Bible since he made the statement that "Nobody who wrote the New Testament had come into actual contact with Jesus." He affirms this, not from the Scriptures themselves, but from Edith Hamilton (whoever she may be) as his authority. I believe Mr. Harris needs to take a dose of his own medicine which consists of his final statement that "Those who call themselves 'Christians' today have an obligation to know their own Bibles."

We wonder if Mr. Harris ever read Matthew 10:1-5? For, included in these disciples whom the Lord personally chose, to be his apostles were Matthew, John and Peter, three of the persons who had a part in writing the New Testament whom Mr. Harris says Jesus never met. Also, one of the requirements for being an apostle, as stated in Acts 2:21 was that he must have "companied with us all the time that the Lord went in and out among us."

Also, Mr. Harris made the statement that "One wonders how many professing Christians accept the fact that Jesus was born, lived, and died a Jew, without the slightest concept that he was starting a new 'religion.' " Well here's one Christian who doesn't accept it. Again, Mr. Harris contradicts the Scriptures. Jesus said, " . . . I will build my church and the gates of hell shall not prevail against it" (Matt.16:18). In fact, from all the blunders that Mr. Harris made in the above mentioned article, I think someone needs to introduce him to a New Testament.

Parent workshops project set at NBC

The NBC Television Network, in cooperation with Teachers Guides to Television, has funded the Parent Participation TV Workshops, a pilot project designed to explore the use of television to open communication between parents and children, it was announced by George A. Heinemann, vice president, special children's programming.

Using NBC-TV's "Special Treat" children's programs, parents and children of varying ages are being asked to participate in a cross-generation discussion following the broadcast of the television specials. The first workshops have been received with great enthusiasm by parents, teachers and students.

did was to raise everybody's level of awareness as to what the institution of slavery was about, what slavery did to cause such tremendous schisms in the country for so many years . . .

"It was like lancing a boil . . . it made the younger generation, particularly the kids, aware of what had happened. It explained, to some degree, why there was such animosity between blacks and whites."

HE SAID the show gave him particular satisfaction "because, as a kid growing up in New Jersey, I had occasion to integrate two schools, myself and another black student . . .

"Needless to say, all the textbooks were screwed up, the slaves tapping their feet, big smiles, a lot of that. And it was very painful and embarrassing for me as a kid going to the school.

"But what could you do? There was nothing I could point to in the textbooks with any amount of pride. If I mentioned Africa, all I knew about it was that it was shaped like a pork chop.

"And that everybody wore britches and Tarzan was king. Well, 'Roots' changed all that. They can never go back to those old stereotypes."

ANYTHING he disliked about the show, any shortcomings?

"I'm not being idealistic," Amos said softly, "but I'm telling you, there's nothing about that that makes me grit my teeth, makes me wish they'd done this or done that . . . there's no part of it I found offensive or that rubbed me the wrong way.

"I saw every episode, beginning to end. And I'm proud as hell of it."

'Roots' liked in Dixie

phenomenon," commented Eugene Bohi, general manager of WGHP-TV, High Point, N.C. "Over and over he kept hearing people remark that the enthusiasm for 'Roots' proved how far we've come in black-white acceptance."

"The world's changed down here since I arrived 15 years ago," said Milton S. Cohn, president of WLOS-TV, Asheville, N.C. "I'd guess the program caused more racial friction in the North than in the South."

Most broadcasters conceded that a program such as "Roots" would have had explosive effect in the South five years ago, but none admitted to any apprehension about putting "Roots" on the air now.

Fred Pierce, general manager of WJCL-TV, Savannah, Ga., told of receiving some calls from people saying, "We don't need to open up those old sores." But he and others noted that there was no advance pressure to keep the program from being televised.

EXPECTEDLY, some hate mail was received by the ABC affiliates, and blacks as well as whites wrote in to complain about aspects of the show. Many of the complaints concerned the partial nudity, the sex scenes, the coarse language and the violence in the program.

In some communities, there were reports of racial tensions in the schools, marked by white and black pupils hurling at each other such terms as "massa" and "yassuh," popularized by the television serial, but most reports of scuffles could not be verified by the news departments of the local stations.

Similar reports of minor racial disturbances in the schools, believed to have been prompted by "Roots," came from the Northern cities too, several of them from the New York area.

ALTHOUGH "Roots" was a prodigious television hit, not all Southern broadcasters believe it contributed to changing racial attitudes. All, however, regarded the showing itself as a measure of the progress that has been made in the South.

"I answered calls from some people who had serious difficulties with the program," said Robert Doubleday, president of KATV, Little Rock. "We asked those who were upset to look at the show in perspective.

"We explained," he continued, "that they were accepting the show as factual, rather than as a fictionalized account of one man's family history."

WKAB-TV in Montgomery, Ala., also stressed to callers that the program was entertainment and "not blanket truth about what happened."

William H. Dilday Jr., a black broadcaster who heads WLBT in Jackson, Miss., expressed doubt that the serial provoked shame in whites or that it has made a significant difference in race relations among adults.

"In a few weeks, they'll forget what they saw and think of it as just another television program. It's the children who I think won't put it out of their minds," Dilday said. His station is an affiliate of NBC and was not the station that carried "Roots" in Jackson.

"The series touched off a lot of pride and controlled anger in the black community here," he went on. "I think it's given a lot of young people a sense of ancestry and a feeling of greater stature. Overall, I'd say the show was more beneficial to blacks than to whites."

THE BIBLE Says

J. T. SMITH

THE INCOMPARABLE BOOK # 3

Last week we discussed the fact that the words which were spoken by the apostles were given them of God. But someone may be saying, "I believe that the words spoken by the apostles were inspired (God breathed), but I do not believe the things written in the Bible came from God. They were simply written by some good men." One who has this attitude needs to read 1 Cor. 14:37 and Eph.3:2-5. In fact, one might go as far astray as did Mr. Sydney Harris in a recent article in the IPT entitled FAITH MUST SPRING FROM KNOWLEDGE, NOT IGNORANCE, in which he takes the position that Matthew, Mark, Luke, and John never met Jesus in the flesh. Surely Mr. Harris does not believe the Bible since he made the statement that "Nobody who wrote the New Testament had come into actual contact with Jesus." He affirms this, not from the Scriptures themselves, but from Edith Hamilton (whoever she may be) as his authority. I believe Mr. Harris needs to take a dose of his own medicine which consists of his final statement that "Those who call themselves 'Christians' today have an obligation to know their own Bibles."

We wonder if Mr. Harris ever read Matthew 10:1-5? For, included in these disciples whom the Lord personally chose to be his apostles were Matthew, John and Peter, three of the persons who had a part in writing the New Testament whom Mr. Harris says Jesus never met. Also, one of the requirements for being an apostle, as stated in Acts 2:21 was that he must have "companied with us all the time that the Lord went in and out among us."

Also, Mr. Harris made the statement that "One wonders how many professing Christians accept the fact that Jesus was born, lived, and died a Jew, without the slightest concept that he was starting a new 'religion.' " Well here's one Christian who doesn't accept it. Again, Mr. Harris contradicts the Scriptures. Jesus said, " . . . I will build my church and the gates of hell shall not prevail against it" (Matt.16:18). In fact, from all the blunders that Mr. Harris made in the above mentioned article, I think someone needs to introduce him to a New Testament.

What the First Lady Learned in Cooking School

did was to raise everybody's level of awareness as to what the institution of slavery was about, what slavery did to cause such tremendous schisms in the country for so many years.

"It was like lancing a boil ... it made the younger generation, particularly the kids, aware of what had happened. It explained, to some degree, why there was such animosity between blacks and whites."

HE SAID the show gave him particular satisfaction "because, as a kid growing up in New Jersey, I had occasion to integrate two schools, myself and another black student ...

"Needless to say, all the textbooks were screwed up, the slaves tapping their feet, big smiles, a lot of that. And it was very painful and embarrassing for me as a kid going to the school.

"But what could you do? There was nothing I could point to in the textbooks with any amount of pride. If I mentioned Africa, all I knew about it was that it was shaped like a pork chop.

"And that everybody wore britches and Tarzan was king. Well, 'Roots' changed all that. They can never go back to those old stereotypes."

ANYTHING he disliked about the show, any shortcomings?

"I'm not being idealistic," Amos said softly, "but I'm telling you, there's nothing about that that makes me grit my teeth, makes me wish they'd done this or done that ... there's no part of it I found offensive or that rubbed me the wrong way.

"I saw every episode, beginning to end. And I'm proud as hell of it."

Q. What does Jimmy Carter's Cabinet tell us about President Jimmy Carter?—R. King, Atlanta, Ga.
A. That he is a cautious moderate, a little unsure of himself in the Washington jungle, who seeks the security of experienced hands to guide him. On the whole, his choices make for a good first Cabinet.

Q. A very good source tells me that every time a customer enters Disneyland or Disney World, a royalty is paid to the Walt Disney family. Can you verify or deny?—George O., Anaheim, Cal.
A. Retlaw (Walter spelled backward) Enterprises, a family company of the late Walt Disney, receives royalties in the millions each year for the use of the Disney name. Retlaw received royalties of $3,550,000 in fiscal 1976, $2,659,000 in 1975.

MICKEY AND FRIEND WELCOME CUSTOMERS

Q. How many marriages have the five children of Eleanor and Franklin D. Roosevelt made?—Louis Mayfield, Baltimore, Md.
A. To date, 19.

Q. Who is a Russian named Serge Lemoine who reputedly has close connections with the British Royal Family?—Victor Ostrer, New York City.
A. Serge Lemoine is a Frenchman who used to work for "Paris Match" in London. Seventeen years ago Lemoine became a cameraman, has since specialized in taking photos of the British Royal Family on a dozen or so royal tours. Members of the family like him, but he is not the court photographer and has no official relationship or position.

Q. Why would an anti-Nixon newspaper like The New York Times syndicate the material from Nixon's forthcoming memoirs?—V.I., Deal, N.J.
A. The New York Times Special Features, which is syndicating the material, hopes to earn a bundle. Whether it will or not depends upon the quality of the memoirs. As of this writing, newspapers abroad are said to have offered $800,000 to The Times for serial rights.

Q. A political science professor says that the greatest spy of modern times was Dr. Richard Sorge, a German who worked for Stalin. Can you supply any information on Sorge? Is he still alive?—Peter Hayes, Berkeley, Cal.
A. Dr. Richard Sorge, a correspondent for the widely respected German newspaper Frankfurter Zeitung, operated a spy ring for the Soviet Union within Japan 1933-44. He notified Stalin of Germany's impending attack upon the Soviet Union, but Stalin stupidly paid him no mind. The Japanese broke Sorge's cover during World War II and announced that he had been officially hanged on Nov. 7, 1944, in Sugamo Prison. There are reports, however, that the Japanese never hanged Sorge, instead turned him over to the Soviets in Vladivostok in return for a Soviet promise not to declare war on Japan. (Russia did declare war Aug. 8, 1945, and invaded Manchuria.) Sorge was a Soviet citizen and was reportedly seen alive in Shanghai in 1947. Most probably he is dead by now.

Q. Can you tell me if Alexander Graham Bell invented the first hydrofoil as well as the telephone?—Wayne Lynn, Bangor, Maine.
A. The first hydrofoil was demonstrated on Lake Maggiore in Italy in 1905. Alexander Graham Bell had nothing to do with its invention, although he noted its debut. Subsequently he became interested in the development of the hydrofoil, and in 1918 it was a Bell hydrofoil that established a world record for speed on water of 70.86 miles per hour.

Q. Is it true that Ralph Nader, who has attacked all facets of the automobile business, doesn't know how to drive, doesn't even have a driver's license?—Eugene R. Werner, Pittsburgh, Pa.
A. Ralph Nader knows how to drive, has a District of Columbia driver's license.

GOLDIE HAWN SHEILA RYAN DIAHANNE ABBOTT

Q. Is it a fact that most actresses will no longer get married unless they are pregnant? Wasn't that the case with Goldie Hawn, Sheila Ryan and Diahanne Abbott?—F.D., New York City.
A. Goldie Hawn and Bill Hudson, Sheila Ryan and James Caan, Diahanne Abbott and Robert De Niro—all became parents in less than nine months after they were married in 1976.

Q. Is it true that Nevada has the highest suicide rate in the nation; and if it is true, why is it true?—Leona Tuttle, Mesa, Ariz.
A. It's true. In 1975 Nevada had nearly 27 suicides per 100,000 population, more than double the nation's average of almost 13 suicides per 100,000. As to why, no one knows for certain. A few possible reasons: Nevada attracts gamblers, transients seeking a divorce, newcomers who have no roots, drifters trying to escape stressful life situations, and loners more liable to commit suicide than others.

Q. It is my understanding that after Richard Nixon became U.S. President and John Mitchell U.S. Attorney General, their old law firm of Nixon, Mudge, Rose, Guthrie, Alexander & Mitchell enjoyed $10 million worth of additional business. Won't the same thing happen to the Atlanta law firm of King & Spalding from which spring Charles Kirbo, President Carter's closest adviser; Griffin Bell, his Attorney General; and Jack Watson, his transition chief?—J.G., Washington, D.C.
A. King & Spalding says it has no intention of opening a branch office in Washington, D.C., or of otherwise expanding its business because Kirbo, Bell and Watson are Carter advisers. King & Spalding, founded in 1885, already boasts a blue-chip list of law clients in Cox Enterprises, General Motors, Coca-Cola, Prudential Insurance and many other corporations. Undoubtedly, it will add to that list, but it will be most careful in so doing.

MOST ADMIRED WOMEN

In December 1976, the Gallup pollsters handed to 1559 adults, 18 and older, a card with 86 names of women drawn from previous Gallup surveys. The question posed was: "Would you tell me which three of these women you admire most?"

Here are the results, revealing the top 20 chosen:

Most Admired Women—1976

Top 10

1. Betty Ford
2. Rose Kennedy
3. Shirley Temple Black
4. Barbara Jordan
5. Golda Meir
6. Lucille Ball
7. Mamie Eisenhower
8. Barbara Walters
9. Joyce Brothers
10. Jacqueline Kennedy Onassis

Second 10

11. Coretta King
12. Pat Nixon
13. Kate Smith
14. Rosalynn Carter
15. Shirley Chisholm
16. Lady Bird Johnson
17. Margaret Mead
18. Bella Abzug
19. Carol Burnett
20. Queen Elizabeth II

The above list represents the views of both men and women.

Among women only, Rose Kennedy won out as the most admired female. Betty Ford ranked second and Shirley Temple Black, third.

Among non-whites, Coretta King, widow of the assassinated Martin Luther King Jr., was first.

Those respondents who had a college background placed Congresswoman Barbara Jordan of Texas and Golda Meir, former prime minister of Israel, on the top of their lists. Those with no college education selected Rose Kennedy, Betty Ford and Shirley Temple Black as their top choices.

FORMER PRESS SECRETARY SHEILA WEIDENFELD WITH BETTY FORD

Until she became First Lady, Betty Ford was virtually unknown in this country. Once she became the President's wife, she was shrewd enough to hire as her press secretary Sheila Weidenfeld, a former TV producer who "exposed" her masterfully.

It was Mrs. Weidenfeld who, despite opposition from other White House sources insisted upon spotting Mrs. Ford on "60 Minutes," the CBS-TV program. This gave her the opportunity to express candidly her thoughts about raising a family, to explain how she could support her husband without vitiating her own independence, and to point out the necessity of maintaining communication with one's children.

It is interesting to note that when Betty Ford was cited for an honorary degree at the University of Michigan, the citation declared: "She combines an assertive, positive position on women's rights with a dedication to family values and ties. She has become widely admired for her courage, compassion, and her commitment to common sense."

Without taking away any credit from Betty Ford, much of her public image today is the result of behind-the-scenes planning by her brainy, diminutive ex-press secretary, Sheila Weidenfeld.

WHERE MOST AMERICANS LIVE

The Bureau of the Census reports that for the first time in the 20th century, the South and the West are estimated to have more than half this nation's population. Six years ago they had 8 million fewer people than the North.

Arizona leads the nation in the rate of population increase since 1970 with a gain of 28%. Alaska is now the second fastest growing state, passing Florida and Nevada since 1974. Once the oil pipeline construction is finished, however, Alaska may not grow so rapidly.

The most populous state in the Union as of July 1, 1976, is California with 21,520,000 people. New York follows with 18,084,000, then Texas with 12,467,000.

STRANGE CHARACTER

Gordon Liddy, the tight-lipped former FBI agent who helped foul up the Watergate break-in, has quietly been transferred from the medium security prison at Danbury, Conn., to the federal prison farm at Allenwood, Pa.

Prisoners at Allenwood are eligible for furloughs of three to seven days.

Liddy, who spent almost four years at Danbury, is serving a sentence of 6 years and 8 months to 20 years for conspiracy, burglary and wiretapping. He will be eligible for parole in May 1981.

Liddy has served far longer than any of the other Watergate conspirators. He still refuses to talk or to write a book, though John Dean, Charles Colson and John Ehrlichman have.

Q. What does Jimmy Carter's Cabinet tell us about President Jimmy Carter?—R. King, Atlanta, Ga.
A. That he is a cautious moderate, a little unsure of himself in the Washington jungle, who seeks the security of experienced hands to guide him. On the whole, his choices make for a good first Cabinet.

Q. A very good source tells me that every time a customer enters Disneyland or Disney World, a royalty is paid to the Walt Disney family. Can you verify or deny?—George O., Anaheim, Cal.
A. Retlaw (Walter spelled backward) Enterprises, a family company of the late Walt Disney, receives royalties in the millions each year for the use of the Disney name. Retlaw received royalties of $3,550,000 in fiscal 1976, $2,659,000 in 1975.

MICKEY AND FRIEND WELCOME CUSTOMERS

Q. How many marriages have the five children of Eleanor and Franklin D. Roosevelt made?—Louis Mayfield, Baltimore, Md.
A. To date, 19.

Q. Who is a Russian named Serge Lemoine who reputedly has close connections with the British Royal Family?—Victor Ostrer, New York City.
A. Serge Lemoine is a Frenchman who used to work for "Paris Match" in London. Seventeen years ago Lemoine became a cameraman, has since specialized in taking photos of the British Royal Family on a dozen or so royal tours. Members of the family like him, but he is not the court photographer and has no official relationship or position.

Q. Why would an anti-Nixon newspaper like The New York Times syndicate the material from Nixon's forthcoming memoirs?—V.I., Deal, N.J.
A. The New York Times Special Features, which is syndicating the material, hopes to earn a bundle. Whether it will or not depends upon the quality of the memoirs. As of this writing, newspapers abroad are said to have offered $800,000 to The Times for serial rights.

Q. A political science professor says that the greatest spy of modern times was Dr. Richard Sorge, a German who worked for Stalin. Can you supply any information on Sorge? Is he still alive?—Peter Hayes, Berkeley, Cal.
A. Dr. Richard Sorge, a correspondent for the widely respected German newspaper Frankfurter Zeitung, operated a spy ring for the Soviet Union within Japan 1933-44. He notified Stalin of Germany's impending attack upon the Soviet Union, but Stalin stupidly paid him no mind. The Japanese broke Sorge's cover during World War II and announced that he had been officially hanged on Nov. 7, 1944, in Sugamo Prison. There are reports, however, that the Japanese never hanged Sorge, instead turned him over to the Soviets in Vladivostok in return for a Soviet promise not to declare war on Japan. (Russia did declare war Aug. 8, 1945, and invaded Manchuria.) Sorge was a Soviet citizen and was reportedly seen alive in Shanghai in 1947. Most probably he is dead by now.

Q. Can you tell me if Alexander Graham Bell invented the first hydrofoil as well as the telephone?—Wayne Lynn, Bangor, Maine.
A. The first hydrofoil was demonstrated on Lake Maggiore in Italy in 1905. Alexander Graham Bell had nothing to do with its invention, although he noted its debut. Subsequently he became interested in the development of the hydrofoil, and in 1918 it was a Bell hydrofoil that established a world record for speed on water of 70.86 miles per hour.

Q. Is it true that Ralph Nader, who has attacked all facets of the automobile business, doesn't know how to drive, doesn't even have a driver's license?—Eugene R. Werner, Pittsburgh, Pa.
A. Ralph Nader knows how to drive, has a District of Columbia driver's license.

GOLDIE HAWN SHEILA RYAN DIAHANNE ABBOTT

Q. Is it a fact that most actresses will no longer get married unless they are pregnant? Wasn't that the case with Goldie Hawn, Sheila Ryan and Diahanne Abbott?—F.D., New York City.
A. Goldie Hawn and Bill Hudson, Sheila Ryan and James Caan, Diahanne Abbott and Robert De Niro—all became parents in less than nine months after they were married in 1976.

Q. Is it true that Nevada has the highest suicide rate in the nation; and if it is true, why is it true?—Leona Tuttle, Mesa, Ariz.
A. It's true. In 1975 Nevada had nearly 27 suicides per 100,000 population, more than double the nation's average of almost 13 suicides per 100,000. As to why, no one knows for certain. A few possible reasons: Nevada attracts gamblers, transients seeking a divorce, newcomers who have no roots, drifters trying to escape stressful life situations, and loners more liable to commit suicide than others.

Q. It is my understanding that after Richard Nixon became U.S. President and John Mitchell U.S. Attorney General, their old law firm of Nixon, Mudge, Rose, Guthrie, Alexander & Mitchell enjoyed $10 million worth of additional business. Won't the same thing happen to the Atlanta law firm of King & Spalding from which spring Charles Kirbo, President Carter's closest adviser; Griffin Bell, his Attorney General; and Jack Watson, his transition chief?—J.G., Washington, D.C.
A. King & Spalding says it has no intention of opening a branch office in Washington, D.C., or of otherwise expanding its business because Kirbo, Bell and Watson are Carter advisers. King & Spalding, founded in 1885, already boasts a blue-chip list of law clients in Cox Enterprises, General Motors, Coca-Cola, Prudential Insurance and many other corporations. Undoubtedly, it will add to that list, but it will be most careful in so doing.

GREAT BRITAIN'S PRINCE PHILIP

IN THE SOUP AGAIN Poor Prince Philip. He can't win. Whenever he opens his mouth he's bound to offend some segment of British society.

A few weeks ago, "Director" magazine, a British publication, quoted him as saying: "We have got to come back a little and not concentrate quite so heavily on the unsuccessful and the unfortunate and the underprivileged but try to create a situation where the enterprising can make their contribution which will also help the underprivileged."

Champions of the welfare state quickly retaliated. Said Labor Member of Parliament Maureen Colquhoun: "I feel sorry for him because this is high Tory 'camp.' He has become rather a British joke."

Said MP Tom Litterick: "As one of the best-kept social security claimants in the country, I think he ought to have spoken with a better sense of responsibility."

Prince Philip, as the Queen's husband, is paid roughly $110,000 a year while his wife is completely exempt from income tax and capital gains tax.

LARGER TV SET The Sony Corp. has placed on the Japanese market what it calls the world's largest color video TV system, which employs a 32-inch picture tube. The set is priced at about $3300; if it goes well in Japan, it will be exported to the U.S. market.

FUTURE SHOCKS It's incredible, shocking and depressing, but if you have a 1-year-old child whom you plan to send to a four-year university in the 1990's it will cost $47,330 at a state school and $82,830 at a private one.

The figures in the chart were compiled by the Oakland Financial Group of Charlottesville, Va., which based its estimate of future college costs on an annual inflation rate of 6% and included tuition, room, board, travel, books and incidentals.

FRENCH ACTRESS/AUTHOR SIMONE SIGNORET AND HUSBAND YVES MONTAND

MEMORIES, MEMORIES Paris is buzzing about Simone Signoret's autobiography, "La Nostalgie N'est Plus Ce Qu'elle Était," which means "Nostalgia Is Not What It Was."

Actress Signoret thus joins Doris Day, Anne Baxter, Liv Ullmann and the other film stars who have found themselves compelled to pen their memoirs -- for a price, of course.

Signoret, married to actor Yves Montand, is more political and henceforth more controversial than most actresses.

A leading section of her book deals with her visit to the Soviet Union 20 years ago, just after the Hungarian uprising. In Moscow she dined with the Soviet leaders -- Khrushchev, Malenkov, Mikoyan, Molotov -- and told them off.

Signoret's 378-page book is scheduled for publication in this country later in the year.

The actress, who won an Academy Award in 1960 for her role of the faithless wife in "Room at the Top," has led an intriguing and fascinating life.

She was born Simone Kaminker in Wiesbaden, Germany, in 1921, the daughter of a Catholic father, who was a member of the French Army of Occupation after World War I, and a Jewish mother.

She grew up in Paris, but in 1940 her father fled to England to join De Gaulle's Free French Army, and Simone was left in France with her mother and two brothers. One brother, Alain, became a film director and was drowned while filming; the other is a language professor in Paris.

Signoret was married to the director Marc Allegret, with whom she had a daughter. In 1950 she married Yves Montand, who subsequently fell in love with the late Marilyn Monroe.

"Don't ask me about Marilyn Monroe," Simone implores reporters. "I've had a lifetime of Marilyn Monroe. That happened while Yves and I were apart. Now I never take a job during a period when Yves is working. It creates a split."

The Montands live in an apartment on the Ile de la Cité and have an estate in Normandy. Both are intensely political, provocative, intelligent, and verbal.

Holding diploma in her Plains, Ga., kitchen, Rosalynn Carter poses with her former cooking teacher, Ursula Knaeusel. Mrs. Carter's familiarity with international cuisine is largely due to the courses she has taken with Ursula.

What the First Lady Learned in Cooking School

by Carl Norcross

WASHINGTON, D.C.

Rosalynn Carter loves to cook. And she comes to the White House with a knowledge of both national and international foods. Her tastes go far beyond the much-maligned Southern reputation for grits, fried chicken and collard greens.

She began to broaden her food interests when she moved around the country as the wife of a young naval officer. When the Carters went to the governor's mansion in Atlanta, she further expanded her knowledge of food. There, with a full-time chef to serve her family, she missed not being able to do some cooking herself. So she chose the next best thing—taking a course in an Atlanta cooking school. Her teacher was German-born Ursula Knaeusel, who had traveled or lived in a score of countries. Ursula's international recipes inspired the school's catchy theme of "Cooking Around the World With Ursula."

Mrs. Carter was so fascinated with Ursula's varied dishes that she came back to the school for a second course, then a third and finally a fourth. She even took Amy to a Christmas class in baking gingerbread houses. Now, Rosalynn Carter is familiar with dishes from France, Italy, Central Europe, China,

GREAT BRITAIN'S PRINCE PHILIP

IN THE SOUP AGAIN Poor Prince Philip. He can't win. Whenever he opens his mouth he's bound to offend some segment of British society.

A few weeks ago, "Director" magazine, a British publication, quoted him as saying: "We have got to come back a little and not concentrate quite so heavily on the unsuccessful and the unfortunate and the underprivileged but try to create a situation where the enterprising can make their contribution which will also help the underprivileged."

Champions of the welfare state quickly retaliated. Said Labor Member of Parliament Maureen Colquhoun: "I feel sorry for him because this is high Tory 'camp.' He has become rather a British joke."

Said MP Tom Litterick: "As one of the best-kept social security claimants in the country, I think he ought to have spoken with a better sense of responsibility."

Prince Philip, as the Queen's husband, is paid roughly $110,000 a year while his wife is completely exempt from income tax and capital gains tax.

LARGER TV SET The Sony Corp. has placed on the Japanese market what it calls the world's largest color video TV system, which employs a 32-inch picture tube. The set is priced at about $3300; if it goes well in Japan, it will be exported to the U.S. market.

FUTURE SHOCKS It's incredible, shocking and depressing, but if you have a 1-year-old child whom you plan to send to a four-year university in the 1990's it will cost $47,330 at a state school and $82,830 at a private one.

The figures in the chart were compiled by the Oakland Financial Group of Charlottesville, Va., which based its estimate of future college costs on an annual inflation rate of 6% and included tuition, room, board, travel, books and incidentals.

FRENCH ACTRESS/AUTHOR SIMONE SIGNORET AND HUSBAND YVES MONTAND

MEMOIRS, MEMOIRS Paris is buzzing about Simone Signoret's autobiography, "La Nostalgie N'est Plus Ce Qu'elle Était," which means "Nostalgia Is Not What It Was."

Actress Signoret thus joins Doris Day, Anne Baxter, Liv Ullmann and the other film stars who have found themselves compelled to pen their memoirs -- for a price, of course.

Signoret, married to actor Yves Montand, is more political and henceforth more controversial than most actresses.

A leading section of her book deals with her visit to the Soviet Union 20 years ago, just after the Hungarian uprising. In Moscow she dined with the Soviet leaders -- Khrushchev, Malenkov, Mikoyan, Molotov -- and told them off.

Signoret's 378-page book is scheduled for publication in this country later in the year.

The actress, who won an Academy Award in 1960 for her role of the faithless wife in "Room at the Top," has led an intriguing and fascinating life.

She was born Simone Kaminker in Wiesbaden, Germany, in 1921, the daughter of a Catholic father, who was a member of the French Army of Occupation after World War I, and a Jewish mother.

She grew up in Paris, but in 1940 her father fled to England to join De Gaulle's Free French Army, and Simone was left in France with her mother and two brothers. One brother, Alain, became a film director and was drowned while filming; the other is a language professor in Paris.

Signoret was married to the director Marc Allegret, with whom she had a daughter. In 1950 she married Yves Montand, who subsequently fell in love with the late Marilyn Monroe.

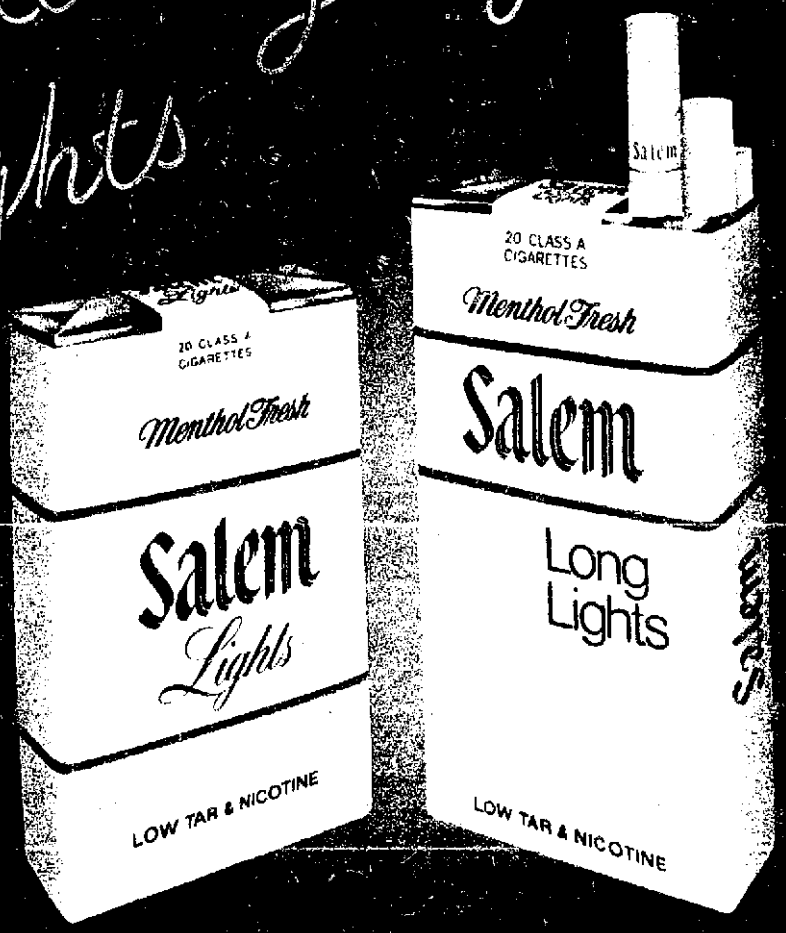

"Don't ask me about Marilyn Monroe," Simone implores reporters. "I've had a lifetime of Marilyn Monroe. That happened while Yves and I were apart. Now I never take a job during a period when Yves is working. It creates a split."

The Montands live in an apartment on the Ile de la Cité and have an estate in Normandy. Both are intensely political, provocative, intelligent, and verbal.

Holding diploma in her Plains, Ga., kitchen, Rosalynn Carter poses with her former cooking teacher, Ursula Knaeusel. Mrs. Carter's familiarity with international cuisine is largely due to the courses she has taken with Ursula.

What the First Lady Learned in Cooking School

by Carl Norcross

WASHINGTON, D.C.

Rosalynn Carter loves to cook. And she comes to the White House with a knowledge of both national and international foods. Her tastes go far beyond the much-maligned Southern reputation for grits, fried chicken and collard greens.

She began to broaden her food interests when she moved around the country as the wife of a young naval officer. When the Carters went to the governor's mansion in Atlanta, she further expanded her knowledge of food. There, with a full-time chef to serve her family, she missed not being able to do some cooking herself. So she chose the next best thing—taking a course in an Atlanta cooking school. Her teacher was German-born Ursula Knaeusel, who had traveled or lived in a score of countries. Ursula's international recipes inspired the school's catchy theme of "Cooking Around the World With Ursula."

Mrs. Carter was so fascinated with Ursula's varied dishes that she came back to the school for a second course, then a third and finally a fourth. She even took Amy to a Christmas class in baking gingerbread houses. Now, Rosalynn Carter is familiar with dishes from France, Italy, Central Europe, China,

continued

Japan, India and Mexico, to name a few. This is sure to be reflected in White House menus.

The President also likes to cook and, in fact, was handy around the kitchen in their early married life. ("Jimmy taught me to cook," Rosalynn told food writer Marian Burros.) The President is both a hunter and fisherman and enjoys cleaning and cooking his own game and fish.

"We're not big eaters," Mrs. Carter says. Breakfasts are usually coffee and juice, plus a piece of toast for Mrs. Carter. On weekends and special days they may splurge a little. Mrs. Carter likes grits but thinks they are too fattening for daily use: "For lunch we often have just a salad or a sandwich."

Reporters who traveled with the President during his long campaign noted he ate almost everything. He is a milk and buttermilk drinker, likes butter, sharp cheese, cheese dishes, and peanuts in any form, especially when salted and deep-fried.

Even goat

When dining at home or with his close friends, a favorite dish is London broil marinated in soy sauce and wine. As with most men, he likes a thick steak broiled rare, with a baked potato and salad with Roquefort dressing. He enjoys chicken in almost any form, ham and redeye gravy, broiled fish, barbecued pork and beef. Once he even partook of barbecued goat at brother Billy's gas station.

High on the list with the Carters are fresh fruits and really fresh vegetables. In Plains they had their own garden until Jimmy became governor. They appreciate the difference between garden-fresh vegetables and the tired stuff that has been a week or more in transit.

The Carters are finding that living at the White House is like being favored guests at a luxury hotel. An experienced staff is there to serve any foods they want. Swiss-born chef Henry Haller and his two principal assistants, Hans Raffert and pastry chef Heinz Bender, are European-trained, with additional experience in American hotels. They were hired by Lady Bird Johnson, so the Carters are their fourth family in residence.

Family most important

"Our big state dinners are important," chef Haller told PARADE, "but it's the family that is most important. What we do before a new family moves in is learn all we can about them from newspapers and other sources. I've been here a long time and know that family likes and dislikes are different. We were fantastically lucky with the Fords—not a single reprimand or complaint. For the Carters I studied my Southern cookbooks. Of course, the Johnsons liked Southern foods, and I've also had Southern cooks in my kitchens.

"The way we work," Haller explained, "is that each week I write out a suggested menu which goes to Mrs. Carter's secretary. She discusses it with the First Lady, and they make changes or not. They tell me what they want, and we're happy to make dishes just the way they like them."

Until John Kennedy was President the First Family either had to eat on trays or dress and go downstairs to a formal dining room. Mrs. Kennedy wanted more privacy and had a new kitchen built on the second floor. Since then, the Johnsons, Nixons, Fords and now the Carters have been able to dine in their own quarters as informally as they please. The basement kitchen is used primarily for big affairs.

"We use that kitchen for preliminary work, like boning chickens or roasts, or washing salads," says Haller, "but the real cooking for the family is done upstairs."

The cooking staff, and the butlers and maids who do the serving, have a new challenge in the number and age range of the Carters. There are three married couples: the senior Carters; son Chip, 26, and his wife Caron (her baby is due in March); son Jeff, 24, and his wife Annette—and, of course, 9-year-old Amy. That makes a family equal in size to Theodore Roosevelt's, which included his wife and six children and has held the White House record since the early 1900's. In addition, son Jack Carter, 29, his wife Judy and their 17-month-old son Jason will be occasional visitors, as well as the President's mother "Miss Lillian" and possibly other relatives.

Chef Haller welcomes a big family. "We don't mind a big family. It makes cooking more interesting."

Among the Washington attractions for the Carters is the abundance of fresh fruits, vegetables and seafood in local markets. The variety is far wider than in Plains or Atlanta. Food is bought from wholesale markets and the White House gets the best of everything. The President will find that fish and seafood are as fresh as if he caught them himself. Fresh fruits and vegetables come in from all over the world. The daily demands of several dozen embassies and consulates insure an impressive array of foods shipped in from many foreign countries. Mrs. Carter won't have to omit any "around the world" dishes she learned from Ursula.

Classic French menu

As for formal state dinners, Mrs. Carter says she will probably serve classic French foods with California wines. Cooking expert Julia Child has written that White House food has a dismal reputation, but is actually of a quality to be proud of. She hopes Mrs. Carter will publish state menus in the newspapers for all to see, as is the custom in Paris.

Mrs. Carter deplores junk food and sweet snacks, especially for children. As an active First Lady—her idol is Eleanor Roosevelt—she may be able to impress her ideas about good nutrition on the American people.

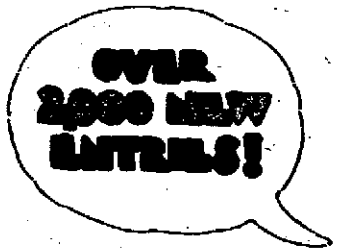

Ursula whisks something up in her well-stocked Atlanta kitchen. German-born and well-traveled, she teaches a variety of international culinary styles in a program she has dubbed "Cooking Around the World With Ursula."

Swiss-born White House chef Henry Haller has been creating meals for Presidents' families since 1966. Trained in Europe and in American luxury hotels, Haller and his staff are able to provide the Carters any food they desire.

Japan, India and Mexico, to name a few. This is sure to be reflected in White House menus.

The President also likes to cook and, in fact, was handy around the kitchen in their early married life. ("Jimmy taught me to cook," Rosalynn told food writer Marian Burros.) The President is both a hunter and fisherman and enjoys cleaning and cooking his own game and fish.

"We're not big eaters," Mrs. Carter says. Breakfasts are usually coffee and juice, plus a piece of toast for Mrs. Carter. On weekends and special days they may splurge a little. Mrs. Carter likes grits but thinks they are too fattening for daily use: "For lunch we often have just a salad or a sandwich."

Reporters who traveled with the President during his long campaign noted he ate almost everything. He is a milk and buttermilk drinker, likes butter, sharp cheese, cheese dishes, and peanuts in any form, especially when salted and deep-fried.

Even goat

When dining at home or with his close friends, a favorite dish is London broil marinated in soy sauce and wine. As with most men, he likes a thick steak broiled rare, with a baked potato and salad with Roquefort dressing. He enjoys chicken in almost any form, ham and redeye gravy, broiled fish, barbecued pork and beef. Once he even partook of barbecued goat at brother Billy's gas station.

High on the list with the Carters are fresh fruits and really fresh vegetables. In Plains they had their own garden until Jimmy became governor. They appreciate the difference between garden-fresh vegetables and the tired stuff that has been a week or more in transit.

The Carters are finding that living at the White House is like being favored guests in a luxury hotel. An experienced staff is there to serve any foods they want. Swiss-born chef Henry Haller and his two principal assistants, Hans Raffert and pastry chef Heinz Bender, are European-trained, with additional experience in American hotels. They were hired by Lady Bird Johnson, so the Carters are their fourth family in residence.

Family most important

"Our big state dinners are important," chef Haller told PARADE, "but it's the family that is most important. What we do before a new family moves in is learn all we can about them from newspapers and other sources. I've been here a long time and know that family likes and dislikes are different. We were fantastically lucky with the Fords—not a single reprimand or complaint. For the Carters I studied my Southern cookbooks. Of course, the Johnsons liked Southern foods, and I've also had Southern cooks in my kitchens.

"The way we work," Haller explained, "is that each week I write out a suggested menu which goes to Mrs. Carter's secretary. She discusses it with the First Lady, and they make changes or not. They tell me what they want, and we're happy to make dishes just the way they like them."

Until John Kennedy was President the First Family either had to eat on trays or dress and go downstairs to a formal dining room. Mrs. Kennedy wanted more privacy and had a new kitchen built on the second floor. Since then, the Johnsons, Nixons, Fords and now the Carters have been able to dine in their own quarters as informally as they please. The basement kitchen is used primarily for big affairs.

"We use that kitchen for preliminary work, like boning chickens or roasts, or washing salads," says Haller, "but the real cooking for the family is done upstairs."

The cooking staff, and the butlers and maids who do the serving, have a new challenge in the number and age range of the Carters. There are three married couples: the senior Carters; son Chip, 26, and his wife Caron (her baby is due in March); son Jeff, 24, and his wife Annette—and, of course, 9-year-old Amy. That makes a family equal in size to Theodore Roosevelt's, which included his wife and six children and has held the White House record since the early 1900's. In addition, son Jack Carter, 29, his wife Judy and their 17-month-old son Jason will be occasional visitors, as well as the President's mother "Miss Lillian" and possibly other relatives.

Chef Haller welcomes a big family. "We don't mind a big family. It makes cooking more interesting."

Among the Washington attractions for the Carters is the abundance of fresh fruits, vegetables and seafood in local markets. The variety is far wider than in Plains or Atlanta. Food is bought from wholesale markets and the White House gets the best of everything. The President will find that fish and seafood are as fresh as if he caught them himself. Fresh fruits and vegetables come in from all over the world. The daily demands of several dozen embassies and consulates insure an impressive array of foods shipped in from many foreign countries. Mrs. Carter won't have to omit any "around the world" dishes she learned from Ursula.

Classic French menu

As for formal state dinners, Mrs. Carter says she will probably serve classic French foods with California wines. Cooking expert Julia Child has written that White House food has a dismal reputation, but is actually of a quality to be proud of. She hopes Mrs. Carter will publish state menus in the newspapers for all to see, as is the custom in Paris.

Mrs. Carter deplores junk food and sweet snacks, especially for children. As an active First Lady—her idol is Eleanor Roosevelt—she may be able to impress her ideas about good nutrition on the American people.

Ursula whisks something up in her well-stocked Atlanta kitchen. German-born and well-traveled, she teaches a variety of international culinary styles in a program she has dubbed "Cooking Around the World With Ursula."

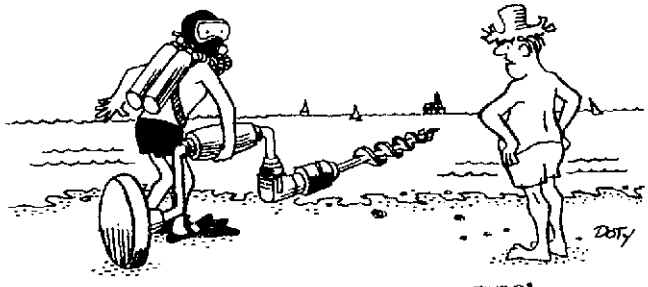

Swiss-born White House chef Henry Haller has been creating meals for Presidents' families since 1966. Trained in Europe and in American luxury hotels, Haller and his staff are able to provide the Carters any food they desire.

Observations™

Victory at sea. When companies bid on offshore tracts with oil and gas potential, both big and small firms have a good shot at the action. In a Gulf of Mexico lease sale last autumn, for example, competition was fierce. Of the 43 blocks on which bids were accepted, 27 went to independent companies and seven to independents and majors bidding jointly. (And the federal government got $379 million in lease bonuses.) All told, since 1967, smaller firms have shared in 80 percent of the winning bids in all federal lease sales. You might remember that next time somebody spouts off about big oil companies driving out smaller ones.

Arthur Fiedler, now a vigorous 82, has proved "there's no borderline in music" by conducting popular and serious works side by side to the delight of millions.

Arthur Fiedler: Tops of the Pops

by Herbert Kupferberg

BOSTON, MASS.

Arthur Fiedler, conductor of the Boston Pops Orchestra, likes to quote a remark of the composer Rossini: "All music is good except the boring kind."

Mr. Fiedler should know, since for the last 45 years he's been playing unboring music by everybody from Beethoven to the Beatles. No one has ever mixed together programs of the latest pop tunes and the greatest classical works so blithely and brilliantly. As a result, Fiedler has sold more than 50 million records, conducted orchestras all over the world, and garnered more honors than he can count, including the Medal of Freedom, the nation's highest civilian honor, awarded him this past Jan. 10 at a White House luncheon by President Ford.

Now a brisk and springy 82, Fiedler—known universally to his players and listeners alike as "Arthur"—says he's slowing his tempo, but just a little.

"Until recently I was conducting 194 concerts a year," he explains. "That was too much. So last year I promised myself to cut down and I did only 164."

Even though he's trimmed his schedule slightly, Fiedler is being seen by more people in more places than ever before. That's because, in addition to his cross-country travels, he and the Boston Pops are now appearing regularly on nationwide television, directly from their home base at Symphony Hall in Boston, where audiences sit around tables sipping drinks as they listen.

Fiedler takes very seriously his function as a bridge between "serious" and "light" music.

Song and dance man Ray Bolger joins Fiedler and the Boston Pops for show carried on nationwide television.

Free Esplanade concerts on Charles River in Boston were founded by Fiedler, attract huge crowds, open gateway to music for many.

A fire buff since childhood, conductor has been made an honorary deputy by 380 departments all over world. Here it's Bangor, Maine.

FIEDLER CONTINUED

"There's really no borderline in music," says the moustached, white-haired "Master of the Pops" as he sits in his Symphony Hall office. "I find that the 'classical' listeners in our audiences enjoy the pops and vice versa. I've never objected to young people listening to rock and roll—if they have any intelligence, they eventually go on to other music. I don't mean rock isn't good, but you tire of it. As a matter of fact, I find some classical nuts are more narrow-minded than young rock fans, who at least are willing to explore new things."

Fiedler, who was born in Boston and joined the Boston Symphony at the age of 19 as a violinist (he also has played the celesta, piano and organ), thinks there has been a great development of American musical taste over the years.

"Every city has its own symphony orchestra and is proud of it," he says. "I know, because I've guest-conducted so many of them—Cedar Rapids, Utica, Memphis, Omaha, Knoxville, Hartford, Springfield, Mass. Even the little cities have them. And there usually are full houses."

But it's when he's on the podium of his own orchestra, the Boston Pops, that Fiedler is really in his element. The Pops consists of 97 members of the famous Boston Symphony Orchestra—everybody except the first-desk men—and it plays at Symphony Hall after the regular orchestral season has ended.

Contrary to popular belief, Fiedler didn't found the Pops concerts; they were established before he was born. In fact, when he first applied for the job of conducting them, back in 1927, he was politely rejected because he wasn't an "international figure." But the conductor who was engaged, Alfredo Casella, failed to impress the public and attendance sagged. Three years later, Fiedler got the job. He also established a small orchestra of his own, the Fiedler Sinfonietta, devoted strictly to serious works, many of them esoteric. Fiedler still talks a bit wistfully of his interest in obscure classical music, which he seldom gets to conduct nowadays.

Vast audiences

But Fiedler is far from depicting himself as the clown who wanted to play Hamlet. He takes great pride in having brought the experience of good music to millions of people. He has played to some of the largest audiences ever gathered anywhere. The free Esplanade concerts along the Charles River in Boston, which he inaugurated in 1929, attract huge crowds every year. At a July 4th Bicentennial concert last year, 400,000 turned out. A footbridge over the river near the Esplanade has been named the Arthur Fiedler Bridge—that's the honor he prizes above all others, he says.

A typical Fiedler Pops program will, in addition to classic works, contain selections of the latest popular music—an excerpt from the sound track of a movie like Jaws, a song like "The Hustle," or Broadway show music—he's even played an arrangement called "Fiedler on the Roof." One of his greatest hits was a song called "Jalousie," a tango by an obscure Danish composer named Jakob Gade, which Fiedler had heard and liked. Recorded by RCA, it became the first record by a symphony orchestra to surpass a million sales. Years later Gade himself, whom Fiedler had never met, showed up at his door to thank the conductor for making him rich. "He also had a lot of other music he wanted to go through," remembers Fiedler, "but I never did get to it."

Unlike many other conductors who like to show off their ability to memorize by conducting without a score, Fiedler likes to have the music on the stand in front of him. When asked why, he chuckles and says: "That reminds me of a story told about Hans Knappertsbusch, an old-time German who conducted into his 90's, always with a score. Someone asked him: 'Professor, you've been conducting 70 years and you still use a score. How come?' Knappertsbusch answered: 'Well, I can read music.'"

Fiedler, who married Ellen M. Bottomley, a Boston girl, in 1942, has three children: Johanna, who works in the press department of the Metropolitan Opera; Deborah, a lawyer; and Peter, a communication arts student at Boston University. All three have learned to play an instrument; in fact, Peter had his own rock band at the age of 13.

Music and children

"When people ask me how to interest their children in music, I tell them to do what I did with my three," says Fiedler. "Give them a little record player of their own when they're young, and let them play what they like. Then start them at the piano if they show any interest in taking lessons. But they have to practice—it's essential. Most rebel against it—I know I did—but you have to keep them at it. They don't like to brush their teeth either, but they do it."

Fiedler says he has no explanation of why many conductors, like himself, continue to lead active lives at a ripe age. "I think maybe we hear only of the ones who live, and not those who die young," he says. "Still, I suppose it's healthy work—I've been told that the exercise of moving your chest muscles is conducive to avoiding a heart attack.

"I know I have my own technique of preparing for a performance. On the day of the concert I have a good meal about 1:30 p.m. and then go to bed. I shut off the phone and don't let anyone in to see me. I snooze, I read, I take a shower, but I don't allow any interruptions. Then by concert time I'm fit."

Aside from his musical fame, Fiedler is celebrated as one of the world's most active fire buffs. He's been interested in the techniques and lore of firefighting ever since his childhood, when he hung around the neighborhood engine house until the firemen invited him in to play with the dalmatian dog and slide down the pole.

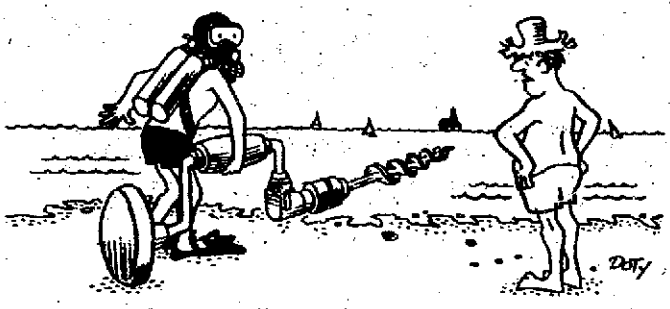

The red car is for him

His own car is radio-equipped to alert him to major fires in the Boston area; he's an honorary deputy chief of the Boston Fire Department and an honorary chief of 380 fire companies throughout the world. Wherever he goes to give a concert, he's likely to wind up with a chief's helmet clapped on his head by local officials.

"There's a bond between us fire buffs all over the world," he says, "and I've met some fine people in the departments. Sometimes they even send out a truck or a chief's car to the airport. When I come into a new city and see a red car waiting, I know it's for me."

BOSTON, MASS.

Arthur Fiedler, conductor of the Boston Pops Orchestra, likes to quote a remark of the composer Rossini: "All music is good except the boring kind."

Mr. Fiedler should know, since for the last 45 years he's been playing unboring music by everybody from Beethoven to the Beatles. No one has ever mixed together programs of the latest pop tunes and the greatest classical works so blithely and brilliantly. As a result, Fiedler has sold more than 50 million records, conducted orchestras all over the world, and garnered more honors than he can count, including the Medal of Freedom, the nation's highest civilian honor, awarded him this past Jan. 10 at a White House luncheon by President Ford.

Now a brisk and springy 82, Fiedler—known universally to his players and listeners alike as "Arthur"—says he's slowing his tempo, but just a little.

"Until recently I was conducting 194 concerts a year," he explains. "That was too much. So last year I promised myself to cut down and I did only 164."

Even though he's trimmed his schedule slightly, Fiedler is being seen by more people in more places than ever before. That's because, in addition to his cross-country travels, he and the Boston Pops are now appearing regularly on nationwide television, directly from their home base at Symphony Hall in Boston, where audiences sit around tables sipping drinks as they listen.

Fiedler takes very seriously his function as a bridge between "serious" and "light" music.

Song and dance man Ray Bolger joins Fiedler and the Boston Pops for show carried on nationwide television.

Free Esplanade concerts on Charles River in Boston were founded by Fiedler, attract huge crowds, open gateway to music for many.

A fire buff since childhood, conductor has been made an honorary deputy by 380 departments all over world. Here it's Bangor, Maine.

FIEDLER CONTINUED

"There's really no borderline in music," says the moustached, white-haired "Master of the Pops" as he sits in his Symphony Hall office. "I find that the 'classical' listeners in our audiences enjoy the pops and vice versa. I've never objected to young people listening to rock and roll—if they have any intelligence, they eventually go on to other music. I don't mean rock isn't good, but you tire of it. As a matter of fact, I find some classical nuts are more narrow-minded than young rock fans, who at least are willing to explore new things."

Fiedler, who was born in Boston and joined the Boston Symphony at the age of 19 as a violinist (he also has played the celesta, piano and organ), thinks there has been a great development of American musical taste over the years.

"Every city has its own symphony orchestra and is proud of it," he says. "I know, because I've guest-conducted so many of them—Cedar Rapids, Utica, Memphis, Omaha, Knoxville, Hartford, Springfield, Mass. Even the little cities have them. And there usually are full houses."

But it's when he's on the podium of his own orchestra, the Boston Pops, that Fiedler is really in his element. The Pops consists of 97 members of the famous Boston Symphony Orchestra—everybody except the first-desk men—and it plays at Symphony Hall after the regular orchestral season has ended.

Contrary to popular belief, Fiedler didn't found the Pops concerts; they were established before he was born. In fact, when he first applied for the job of conducting them, back in 1927, he was politely rejected because he wasn't an "international figure." But the conductor who was engaged, Alfredo Casella, failed to impress the public and attendance sagged. Three years later, Fiedler got the job. He also established a small orchestra of his own, the Fiedler Sinfonietta, devoted strictly to serious works, many of them esoteric. Fiedler still talks a bit wistfully of his interest in obscure classical music, which he seldom gets to conduct nowadays.

Vast audiences

But Fiedler is far from depicting himself as the clown who wanted to play Hamlet. He takes great pride in having brought the experience of good music to millions of people. He has played to some of the largest audiences ever gathered anywhere. The free Esplanade concerts along the Charles River in Boston, which he inaugurated in 1929, attract huge crowds every year. At a July 4th Bicentennial concert last year, 400,000 turned out. A footbridge over the river near the Esplanade has been named the Arthur Fiedler Bridge—that's the honor he prizes above all others, he says.

A typical Fiedler Pops program will, in addition to classic works, contain selections of the latest popular music—an excerpt from the sound track of a movie like Jaws, a song like "The Hustle," or Broadway show music—he's even played an arrangement called "Fiedler on the Roof." One of his greatest hits was a song called "Jalousie," a tango by an obscure Danish composer named Jakob Gade, which Fiedler had heard and liked. Recorded by RCA, it became the first record by a symphony orchestra to surpass a million sales. Years later Gade himself, whom Fiedler had never met, showed up at his door to thank the conductor for making him rich. "He also had a lot of other music he wanted to go through," remembers Fiedler, "but I never did get to it."

Unlike many other conductors who like to show off their ability to memorize by conducting without a score, Fiedler likes to have the music on the stand in front of him. When asked why, he chuckles and says: "That reminds me of a story told about Hans Knappertsbusch, an old-time German who conducted into his 90's, always with a score. Someone asked him: 'Professor, you've been conducting 70 years and you still use a score. How come?' Knappertsbusch answered: 'Well, I can read music.'"

Fiedler, who married Ellen M. Bottomley, a Boston girl, in 1942, has three children: Johanna, who works in the press department of the Metropolitan Opera; Deborah, a lawyer; and Peter, a communication arts student at Boston University. All three have learned to play an instrument; in fact, Peter had his own rock band at the age of 13.

Music and children

"When people ask me how to interest their children in music, I tell them to do what I did with my three," says Fiedler. "Give them a little record player of their own when they're young, and let them play what they like. Then start them at the piano if they show any interest in taking lessons. But they have to practice—it's essential. Most rebel against it—I know I did—but you have to keep them at it. They don't like to brush their teeth either, but they do it."

Fiedler says he has no explanation of why many conductors, like himself, continue to lead active lives at a ripe age. "I think maybe we hear only of the ones who live, and not those who die young," he says. "Still, I suppose it's healthy work—I've been told that the exercise of moving your chest muscles is conducive to avoiding a heart attack.

"I know I have my own technique of preparing for a performance. On the day of the concert I have a good meal about 1:30 p.m. and then go to bed. I shut off the phone and don't let anyone in to see me. I snooze, I read, I take a shower, but I don't allow any interruptions. Then by concert time I'm fit."

Aside from his musical fame, Fiedler is celebrated as one of the world's most active fire buffs. He's been interested in the techniques and lore of firefighting ever since his childhood, when he hung around the neighborhood engine house until the firemen invited him in to play with the dalmatian dog and slide down the pole.

The red car is for him

His own car is radio-equipped to alert him to major fires in the Boston area; he's an honorary deputy chief of the Boston Fire Department and an honorary chief of 380 fire companies throughout the world. Wherever he goes to give a concert, he's likely to wind up with a chief's helmet clapped on his head by local officials.

"There's a bond between us fire buffs all over the world," he says, "and I've met some fine people in the departments. Sometimes they even send out a truck or a chief's car to the airport. When I come into a new city and see a red car waiting, I know it's for me."

Keeping Up... With Youth

by Pamela Swift

Jobs for Youth

If there is any one proposal the American public overwhelmingly favors, it's to create projects for young people who want to learn a trade.

The Gallup Poll recently asked the following: "It is proposed that the federal government set up youth camps—such as the CCC camps of the 1930's—for young men who want to learn a trade and earn a little money by outdoor work. Do you think this is a good idea or a poor idea?"

Nationwide, 85 percent of those polled said it was a good idea, 10 percent a poor idea, and 5 percent had no opinion.

The problem of unemployed youths is one of the nation's most serious. For white teen-agers, the unemployment rate is about 20 percent. For black teen-agers, it is double that figure.

Many experts believe that the more than 2 million young people out of school and out of work constitute a prime cause of crime and a shocking waste of manpower.

The Gallup Poll reveals that the concept of youth training centers has appealed to the American public for 40 years. No New Deal measure, for example, was more consistently favored by the public than CCC camps.

Gallup polled the public in 1936, three years after the camps had begun, and found 83 percent of the respondents in favor of continuing the CCC.

Two years later, Gallup polled on the same subject, found eight in 10 favoring the establishment of camps on a permanent basis.

If President Carter wants to do something for the unemployed young, the CCC camps of the 1930's are worth emulating, adapting and improving.

SHOT-PUTTER JANIS KERR

Mashed Masher

Some moron in England recently boarded a train and tried to get fresh with Janis Kerr. Janis is not only England's champion shot-putter, but stands 6 feet tall, weighs a solid 170 pounds. As soon as the masher made his pass, Janis jumped to her feet, let go with an uppercut.

When the train stopped at a station four minutes later, Janis handed her prize to the police. "I think," she says, "I scored one for every woman who has found herself molested on a train. It happens too frequently. Something has to be done to stop it. Maybe I have."

The healing art knows no frontiers: This French doctor, treating a patient in Africa, is a member of a medical legion that goes wherever there is a need.

A New Foreign Legion—Doctors, Not Soldiers

by Arturo F. Gonzalez Jr.

PARIS.

France today is posting a new legion to world trouble spots. Like the old French Foreign Legion, it is an international group manned by many volunteers from countries other than France. And they serve their time in some of the same old hellholes: Asian jungles and Saharan sands.

But instead of military garb, the new legion's men and women wear white surgical jackets and are armed with stethoscopes, operating tables and drugs. They are a medical group, 850-strong, called Médecins Sans Frontières (MSF)—literally, doctors without borders. Their mission: to bring free medical service to a large portion of mankind.

When earthquakes shake down villages in Guatemala, when deadly hurricanes whistle through Honduras, when sick and disease-ridden Asian refugees pack into villages along the Laos/Thailand border, MSF surgical teams fly out to patch up the wounded and pump antibiotics into the ill. MSF is a free-wheeling group, ingenious at helping swiftly while larger relief groups are still trying to organize themselves.

A new doctor joining the corps is processed by a secretary at headquarters in Paris. His destination is a camp for refugees on the Thailand-Laos border.

All through the bitterly fought civil war in Lebanon, which cost the lives of more than 40,000 people, MSF surgical teams were operating in the thick of the shooting. "We never had much trouble with the soldiers," says Dr. Jacques Beres, a surgeon who has served as president of MSF. "When the gunmen see that we are saving people's lives, they decide there is no point in killing us, and they leave us alone. Snipers, however, are another matter. They don't give you a chance to tell them who you are."

"It was disgusting, heartbreaking work," says Dr. Bernard Kouchner, a surgeon who served with MSF in Beirut. "At the end in Lebanon, supplies were increasingly hard to get and our surgeons were working bare-handed. Medically, we were a success, though our hospital was so small it made M*A*S*H look like a medical center."

Under fire

Dr. Mario Duran, an Argentinian working with MSF in Beirut, recalls seeing a patient he had operated on successfully walk out of the hospital only to be cut down by machine-gun fire in the street. "A shell landed just outside our first-aid station," he recalls, "and would have killed us all had it exploded. Luckily, it was a dud. None of us has been killed yet, although things like bullets through pants legs have not been uncommon."

MSF practiced its healing art during the last brutal days of the Vietnam war. "I spent three months in refugee camps at the end," Dr. Beres recalls. "It was the worst ever; our team had 100,000 patients to care for, nothing to eat and no place to sleep or wash. We were bombed a half-dozen times. In the entire camp there was one water spout, which was only turned on two hours in the morning and two hours at night.

Blood on the floor

"During the last days of the fighting, our MSF doctors performed 545 operations—some of them involving horrendous wounds—in just 96 hours. I'll never forget operating, standing barefoot with blood squelching between my toes on the operating-room floor, completely nude under our surgical gowns due to the heat. My colleague and I used to walk through the operating rooms in the all-but-abandoned Gia-Dinh hospital, telling nurses and paramedics to 'cut there,' 'stitch there,' 'clamp there.'"

Dr. Beres was one of the founding members of MSF, most of whom had worked for the French Red Cross in Biafra. "MSF began with a typhoon which killed 100,000 people in Bangladesh," he recalls. "The French Red Cross called us as individuals to ask if we would go out there to help. We agreed, but then there was an unexplained hold-up in getting visas. After four days we called for an explanation.

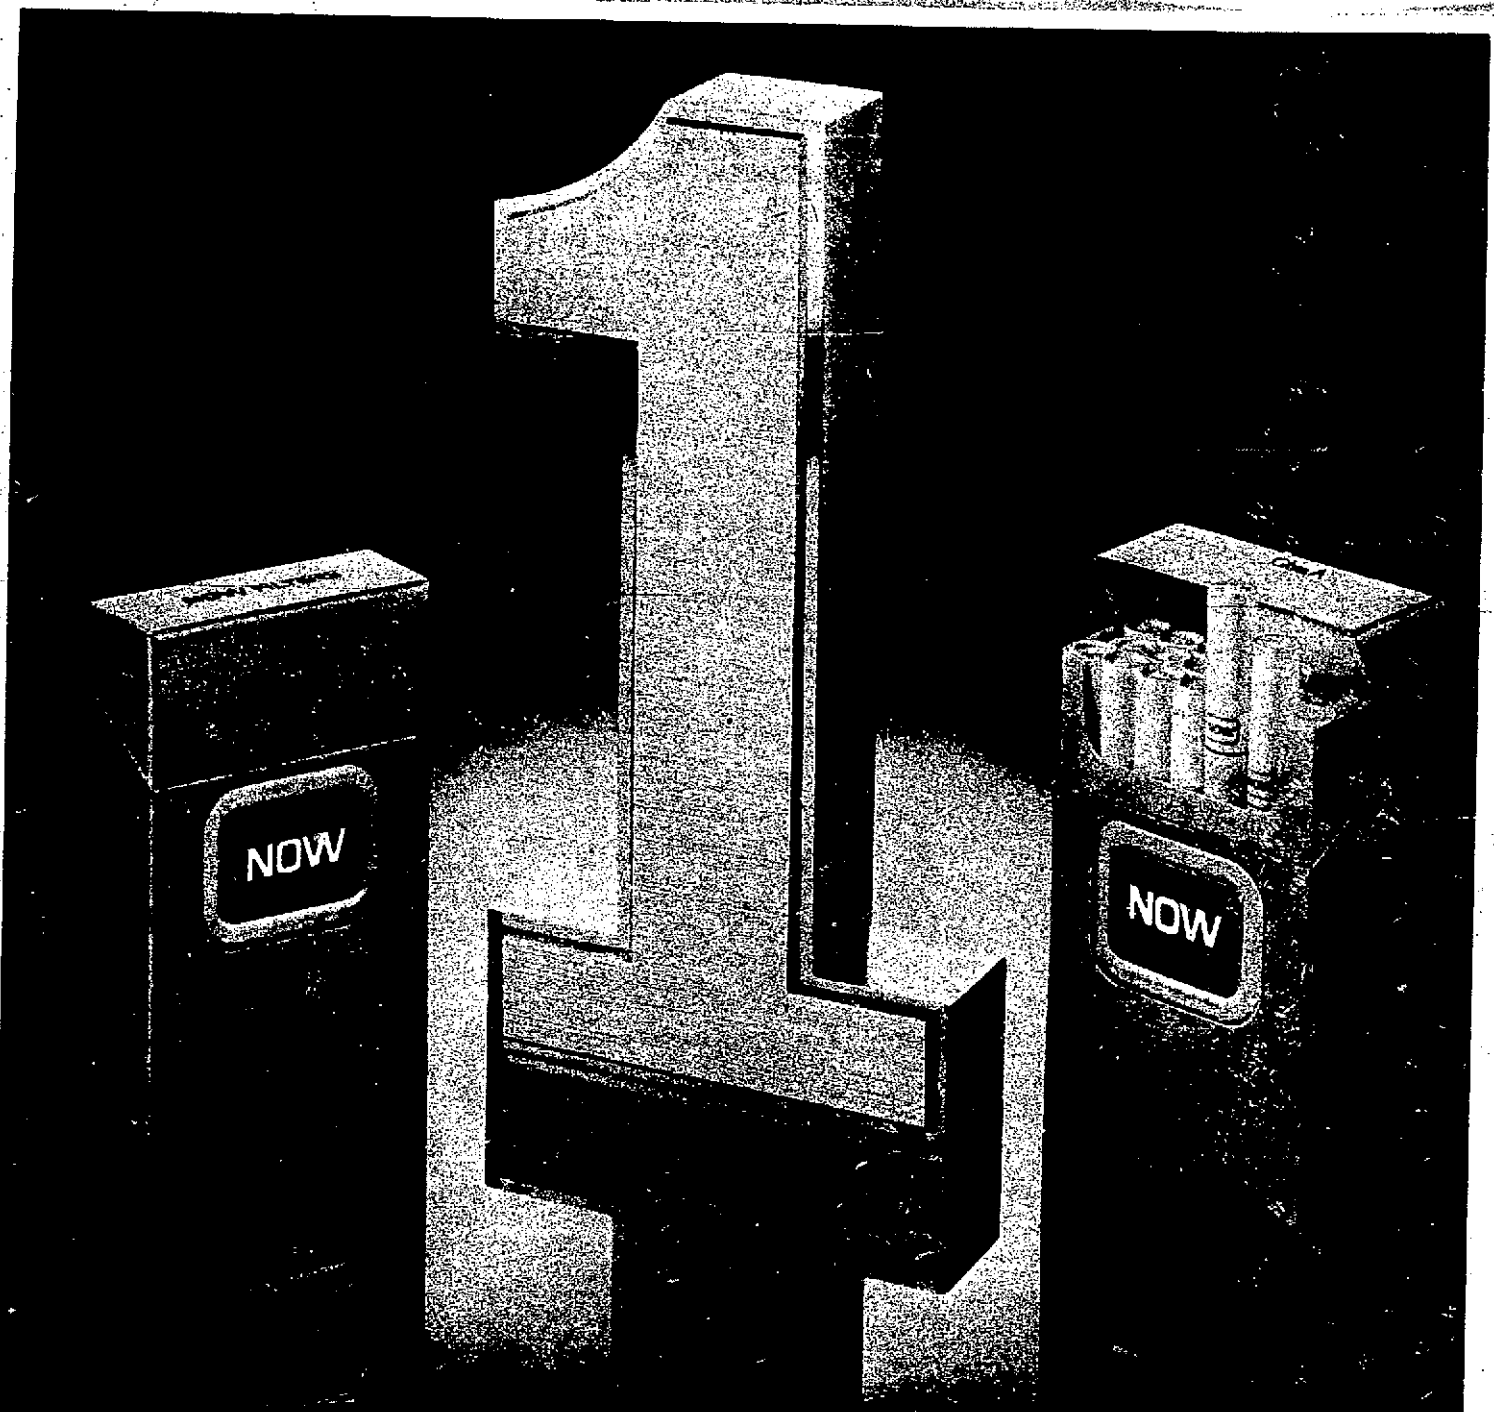

"The Red Cross was evasive. It seems that besides the typhoon there was political unrest in Bangladesh. We felt that a civil war on top of the typhoon was all the more reason why we should get to Bangladesh quickly. But the visas never came, and we never went.

Call too late

"A month later, after the end of the civil war, the French Red Cross finally called us back, asking if we were ready to go. We told them it was too late. And that's when we decided to found our own organization to try and bring help to people in countries affected by natural or man-made disasters—help that would arrive quickly, no matter what the politics involved.

"There were eight doctors at the founding meeting, all French," continues Dr. Beres. "The group has grown fantastically since then, and now our members include French, Italians, Belgians, English and Americans. Our files are filled with letters from American doctors asking to join, and young Dr. Robert Goldstein of New York is in charge of setting up an American chapter."

My Feet Were Killing Me...Until I Discovered the Miracle of Hamburg!

It was the European trip I had always dreamed about. I had the time and money to go where I wanted—see what I wanted. But I soon learned that money and time don't mean much when your feet hurt too much to walk. After a few days of sightseeing my feet were killing me.

Oh, I tried to keep going. In Paris I limped through Notre Dame and along the Champs-Elysées. And I went up in the Eiffel Tower although I can't honestly say I remember the view. My feet were so tired and sore my whole body ached. While everybody else was having a great time, I was in my hotel room. I didn't even feel like sitting in a sidewalk cafe.

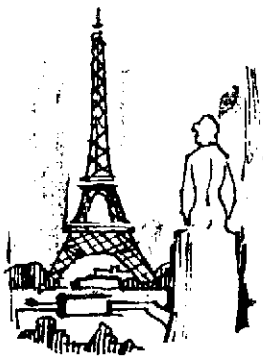

The whole trip was like that until I got to Hamburg, Germany. There, by accident, I happened to hear about an exciting breakthrough for anyone who suffers from sore, aching feet and legs.

This wonderful invention was a custom-made foot support called Flexible Featherspring. When I got a pair and slipped them into my shoes my pain disappeared almost instantly. The flexible shock absorbing support they gave my feet was like cradling them on a cushion of air. I could walk, stand, even run. The relief was truly a miracle.

And just one pair was all I needed. I learned that women also can wear them—even with sandals and open backed shoes. They're completely invisible.

Imagine how dumbfounded I was to discover that these miraculous devices were sold only in Europe. Right then I determined that I would share the miracle I discovered in Hamburg with my own countrymen.

Today thousands of Americans of all ages—many with foot problems far more severe than mine—have experienced this blessed relief for themselves.

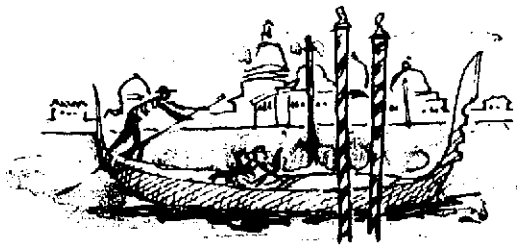

Here's why Featherspring work for them and why they can work for you. These supports are like nothing you've ever seen before. They are custom fitted and made for your feet alone! Unlike conventional devices, they actually imitate the youthful elastic support that Nature originally intended your feet to have.

Whatever your problem—corns, calluses, burning nerve ends, pain in the balls of your feet, painful ankles, old injuries, backaches or just generally sore, aching feet. Flexible Featherspring will bring you guaranteed relief with every step you take.

Don't suffer pain and discomfort needlessly. If your feet hurt, the miracle of Hamburg can help you. Write for more detailed information. There is no obligation whatsoever. Just fill out the coupon below and mail it today.

Two years later, Gallup polled on the same subject, found eight in 10 favoring the establishment of camps on a permanent basis.

If President Carter wants to do something for the unemployed young, the CCC camps of the 1930's are worth emulating, adapting and improving.

SHOT-PUTTER JANIS KERR

Mashed Masher

Some moron in England recently boarded a train and tried to get fresh with Janis Kerr. Janis is not only England's champion shot-putter, but stands 6 feet tall, weighs a solid 170 pounds. As soon as the masher made his pass, Janis jumped to her feet, let go with an uppercut.

When the train stopped at a station four minutes later, Janis handed her prize to the police. "I think," she says, "I scored one for every woman who has found herself molested on a train. It happens too frequently. Something has to be done to stop it. Maybe I have."

LEGION CONTINUED

"We are the only organization that looks at a disaster solely from the point of view of medical aid," explains Dr. Michel Meignan, a French GP. "Our board of directors is made up entirely of doctors and nurses. Whether we go or don't go is decided entirely on medical grounds. Sometimes we arrive without visas, and other times we practice medicine in countries where the French government wishes we would not go. In civil war situations we offer our services to both sides."

"When MSF was taking care of refugees in South Vietnam," explains Dr. Beres, "we also indicated our willingness to the North Vietnamese government to handle their medical cases.

"The point is that we never want to be considered the medical arm of any army on just one side of a conflict. We make an effort to distribute our resources evenly.

The terrorist question

"Critics of our organization constantly ask us if it is right to cure a terrorist who will then go back into the field to kill again. MSF's answer is that it believes first of all in medical neutrality; all requests for medical aid are of equal value, even if you don't agree with the politics of those making the request."

MSF swings into action the moment news of a disaster reaches Paris. Press agencies and embassies are phoned while MSF's officers try to determine the medical needs of the disaster area, and the organization's switchboard lights up with doctors and nurses calling in to volunteer their services. All the members have filled out extensive questionnaires indicating their medical specialties, languages, marital status, driver's and pilot's licenses, and whether they are qualified to use a parachute. "The only way we could get into Biafra was by parachute," Dr. Beres explains.

Happily, MSF no longer has to pay for transportation, and this has changed its policy on taking along nurses, lots of whom are volunteering. Air France and UTA now provide tickets to disaster areas plus an unlimited cargo allowance for our supplies.

"We don't go out loaded with drugs," declares Dr. Meignan. "Our experience is that usually plenty of drugs are available when we arrive. It is important to find 'the man with the key.' In just about every country we've visited, there's one individual who can get his hands on virtually all the medical supplies, surgical tools and generating equipment we need. We do have some prepacked emergency boxes and also a complete anesthetist's kit. We never bring antibiotics because we found that these usually pour into a disaster area. Bandages, on the other hand, are never around in sufficient supply, so we often bring our own."

MSF doctors shake their heads sadly at the suggestion that relief work should best be left to international organizations like the Red Cross or to individual nations. "It just doesn't work out in practice," says Dr. Beres. "Take France, for instance. It has a complete flying hospital called EMMIR, Elément Militaire Médicale Internationale Rapide, in existence for seven years now. To date, it has been deployed three times. It can fly out only after the ministry has made a decision to send it. The ministry meets only on Wednesday and would never send it to a country with which France was at odds politically. So, if a country is going to have a disaster,

The healing art knows no frontiers: This French doctor, treating a patient in Africa, is a member of a medical legion that goes wherever there is a need.

A New Foreign Legion—Doctors, Not Soldiers

By Arturo F. Gonzalez Jr.

PARIS.

France today is posting a new legion to world trouble spots. Like the old French Foreign Legion, it is an international group manned by many volunteers from countries other than France. And they serve their time in some of the same old hellholes: Asian jungles and Saharan sands.

But instead of military garb, the new legion's men and women wear white surgical jackets and are armed with stethoscopes, operating tables and drugs. They are a medical group, 850-strong, called Médecins Sans Frontières (MSF)—literally, doctors without borders. Their mission: to bring free medical service to a large portion of mankind.

When earthquakes shake down villages in Guatemala, when deadly hurricanes whistle through Honduras, when sick and disease-ridden Asian refugees pack into villages along the Laos/Thailand border, MSF surgical teams fly out to patch up the wounded and pump antibiotics into the ill. MSF is a free-wheeling group, ingenious at helping swiftly while larger relief groups are still trying to organize themselves.

All through the bitterly fought civil war in Lebanon, which cost the lives of more than 40,000 people, MSF surgical teams were operating in the thick of the shooting. "We never had much trouble with the soldiers," says Dr. Jacques Beres, a surgeon who has served as president of MSF. "When the gunmen see that we are saving people's lives, they decide there is no point in killing us, and they leave us alone. Snipers, however, are another matter. They don't give you a chance to tell them who you are."

"It was disgusting, heartbreaking work," says Dr. Bernard Kouchner, a surgeon who served with MSF in Beirut. "At the end in Lebanon, supplies were increasingly hard to get and our surgeons were working bare-handed. Medically, we were a success, though our hospital was so small it made M*A*S*H look like a medical center."

Under fire

Dr. Mario Duran, an Argentinian working with MSF in Beirut, recalls seeing a patient he had operated on successfully walk out of the hospital only to be cut down by machine-gun fire in the street. "A shell landed just outside our first-aid station," he recalls, "and would have killed us all had it exploded. Luckily, it was a dud. None of us has been killed yet, although things like bullets through pants legs have not been uncommon."

MSF practiced its healing art during the last brutal days of the Vietnam war. "I spent three months in refugee camps at the end," Dr. Beres recalls. "It was the worst ever; our team had 100,000 patients to care for, nothing to eat and no place to sleep or wash. We were bombed a half-dozen times. In the entire camp there was one water spout, which was only turned on two hours in the morning and two hours at night.

Blood on the floor

"During the last days of the fighting, our MSF doctors performed 545 operations—some of them involving horrendous wounds—in just 96 hours. I'll never forget operating, standing barefoot with blood squelching between my toes on the operating-room floor, completely nude under our surgical gowns due to the heat. My colleague and I used to walk through the operating rooms in the all-but-abandoned Gia-Dinh hospital, telling nurses and paramedics to 'cut there,' 'stitch there,' 'clamp there.'"

Dr. Beres was one of the founding members of MSF, most of whom had worked for the French Red Cross in Biafra. "MSF began with a typhoon which killed 100,000 people in Bangladesh," he recalls. "The French Red Cross called us as individuals to ask if we would go out there to help. We agreed, but then there was an unexplained hold-up in getting visas. After four days we called for an explanation.

"The Red Cross was evasive. It seems that besides the typhoon there was political unrest in Bangladesh. We felt that a civil war on top of the typhoon was all the more reason why we should get to Bangladesh quickly. But the visas never came, and we never went.

Call too late

"A month later, after the end of the civil war, the French Red Cross finally called us back, asking if we were ready to go. We told them it was too late. And that's when we decided to found our own organization to try and bring help to people in countries affected by natural or man-made disasters—help that would arrive quickly, no matter what the politics involved.

"There were eight doctors at the founding meeting, all French," continues Dr. Beres. "The group has grown fantastically since then, and now our members include French, Italians, Belgians, English and Americans. Our files are filled with letters from American doctors asking to join, and young Dr. Robert Goldstein of New York is in charge of setting up an American chapter."

A new doctor joining the corps is processed by a secretary at headquarters in Paris. His destination is a camp for refugees on the Thailand-Laos border.

continued

it should have it only on Tuesday afternoon and be on good terms with France at the time if it wants EMMIR to help it out. MSF, on the other hand, moves fast and doesn't ask any political questions."

The organization's funding comes mainly from the doctors themselves and the medical profession. Each member pays approximately $25 per year in dues. MSF also sends out one fund-raising letter a year to every doctor in France. Drug companies and other firms also contribute. The rate of contributions skyrocketed following a dramatic national public-relations campaign last December, a gift to the group from the French communications industry.

Limited budget

The dues and donations give the organization a little less than $100,000 a year on which to operate. It all goes to maintaining a run-down former dentist's office in Paris, paying the salary of a secretary and operating the two telephone lines and office equipment.

MSF has recently taken on a new role as a medical peace corps, with clinics in remote Third World areas such as Haiti, Honduras, Gabon and Upper Volta. "It is not as dramatic as ducking bombs in South Vietnam," Dr. Beres remarks, "but we are badly needed in many of these countries."

To find the right kind of medical volunteers for these peace corps missions, MSF has been testing its medics by sending them for three-week training stints to a leper colony not far from Paris. Explains Dr. Beres: "We feel that if we send a doctor there, we will be able to tell if he is capable of an extended assignment in the Third World. In other words, we have the lepers writing reports on the doctors."

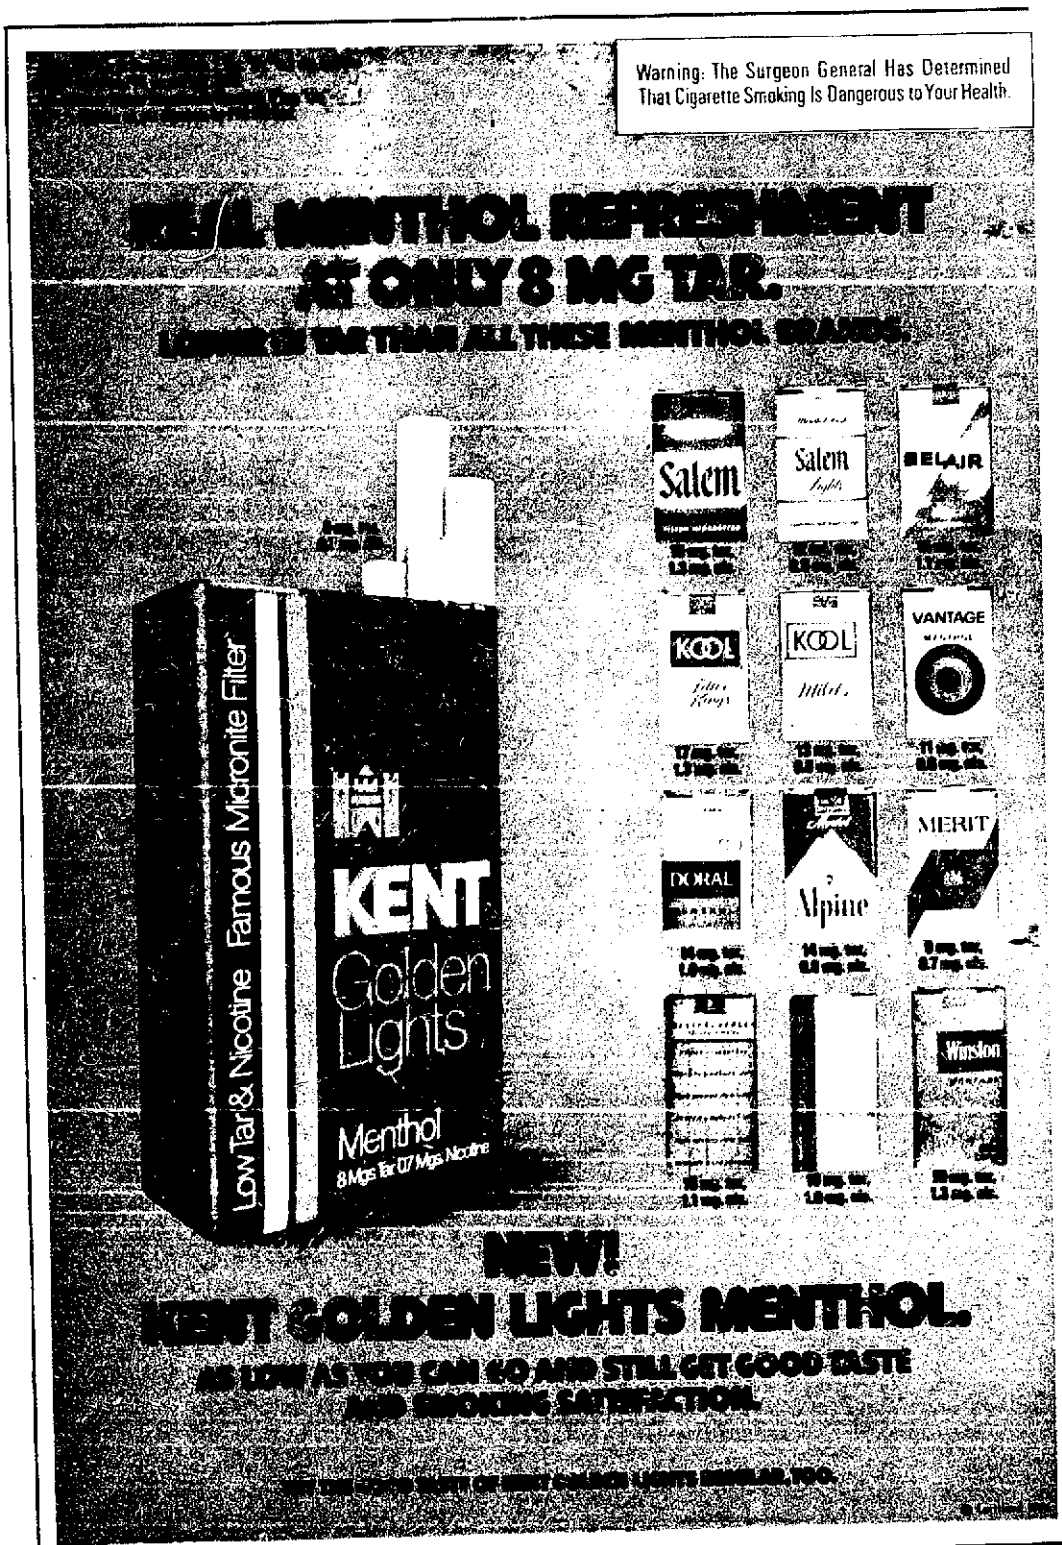

Another result of MSF's pioneering work abroad is that medical hospitals in Paris are now offering degree courses in emergency medicine and surgery. Young student doctors are learning to do mass vaccinations and set bones without splints. It's the first course of its kind anywhere in the world, and MSF has even authored a text for the class, due to be published shortly.

Local resistance

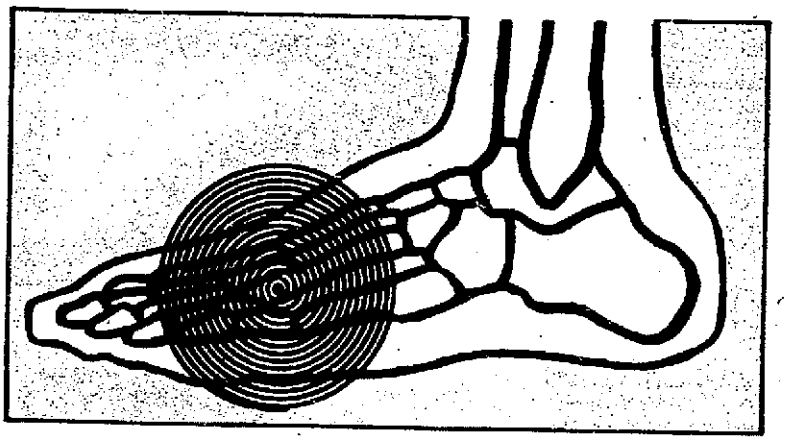

MSF does have its critics. "Because we offer our medical help for free," Dr. Beres says, "in some countries the local doctors resent us. But we seldom go into an area where there is enough medical help already on the scene. In Tripoli in Lebanon, for instance, there used to be 450 doctors practicing, but when we arrived only 27 were still there. The rest had all fled. And many of those doctors who remained were busy trying to stay alive and looking after their families' safety. I don't think we ever really stole anyone's practice. But if the medical establishment does object to our presence, we make sure there is plenty of help available and then leave."

Dr. Beres looks back more than 100 years when he recalls the original Red Cross: "It was really a fantastic organization, going between the two sides in combat to care for the wounded. We are trying to retain that same spirit of dedication. Today's Red Cross is interested in so many projects that it has lost some of its purely medical thrust. The World Health Organization is more interested in disease control and long-term projects."

Dr. Kouchner adds, "We can't characterize the doctors who join us by their age—some are young medical students, some are retired physicians—or their reasons for joining. They may be with us because MSF expresses the ideals they learned in medical school. Or to escape personal problems, just like the men in the old Foreign Legion. The French medical establishment thinks we are nuts. Maybe we are—like some hangover from the 19th century, some vague and batty utopian organization. Maybe we are just doctors, doing what doctors should do."

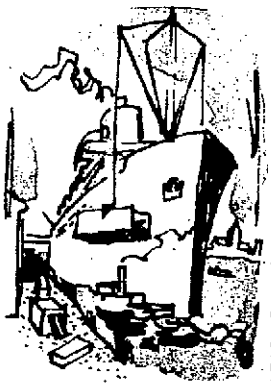

My Feet Were Killing Me...Until I Discovered the Miracle of Hamburg!

It was the European trip I had always dreamed about. I had the time and money to go where I wanted—see what I wanted. But I soon learned that money and time don't mean much when your feet hurt too much to walk. After a few days of sightseeing my feet were killing me.

Oh, I tried to keep going. In Paris I limped through Notre Dame and along the Champs-Elysées. And I went up in the Eiffel Tower although I can't honestly say I remember the view. My feet were so tired and sore my whole body ached. While everybody else was having a great time, I was in my hotel room. I didn't even feel like sitting in a sidewalk cafe.

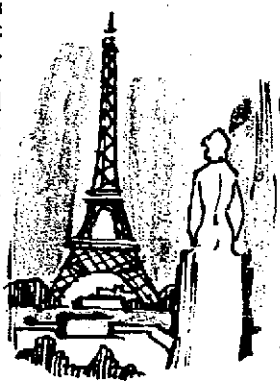

The whole trip was like that until I got to Hamburg, Germany. There, by accident, I happened to hear about an exciting breakthrough for anyone who suffers from sore, aching feet and legs.

This wonderful invention was a custom-made foot support called Flexible Featherspring. When I got a pair and slipped them into my shoes my pain disappeared almost instantly. The flexible shock absorbing support they gave my feet was like cradling them on a cushion of air. I could walk, stand, even run. The relief was truly a miracle.

And just one pair was all I needed. I learned that women also can wear them—even with sandals and open backed shoes. They're completely invisible.

Imagine how dumbfounded I was to discover that these miraculous devices were sold only in Europe. Right then I determined that I would share the miracle I discovered in Hamburg with my own countrymen.

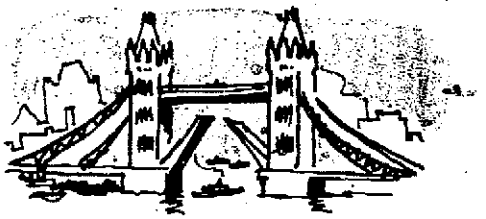

Today thousands of Americans of all ages—many with foot problems far more severe than mine—have experienced this blessed relief for themselves.

Here's why Featherspring work for them and why they can work for you. These supports are like nothing you've ever seen before. They are custom fitted and made for your feet alone! Unlike conventional devices, they actually imitate the youthful elastic support that Nature originally intended your feet to have.

Whatever your problem—corns, calluses, burning nerve ends, pain in the balls of your feet, painful ankles, old injuries, backaches or just generally sore, aching feet. Flexible Featherspring will bring you guaranteed relief with every step you take.

Don't suffer pain and discomfort needlessly. If your feet hurt, the miracle of Hamburg can help you. Write for more detailed information. There is no obligation whatsoever. Just fill out the coupon below and mail it today.

flavorful smoked pork

by BETH MERRIMAN
PARADE FOOD EDITOR

Savory is the word for these zesty steaks. Cut from a smoked pork shoulder butt, marinated overnight in a spicy orange sauce, then broiled to golden perfection—the resulting flavor is sheer delight. Served with rice, garnished with orange slices and accompanied by an unusual slaw, the meal is complete. Perhaps add a simple dessert.

ZESTY ORANGE PORK STEAKS

2 pounds smoked pork shoulder butt
1½ cups orange juice
1 teaspoon grated orange peel
⅓ cup firmly packed brown sugar
¼ cup spicy brown mustard
1 tablespoon vinegar
½ teaspoon ground ginger
Dash ground cloves

Cut pork shoulder in ¾-inch slices; place in shallow baking dish. Combine remaining ingredients; bring to boil; stir until well blended; pour over slices. Cover; marinate in refrigerator overnight.

Remove meat from marinade; pour liquid into small saucepan. Boil 5-10 minutes, until mixture is reduced and sauce is a good consistency for basting. Broil pork slices about four inches from source of heat 15-20 minutes, turning frequently and basting with sauce. To serve, pour any extra sauce over pork; garnish with orange slices and parsley. Makes four to six servings.

RED CABBAGE-FRUIT SLAW

2 winter pears, peeled, cored and diced
1 cup drained pineapple tidbits
½ cup French dressing
3 cups shredded red cabbage

Combine all ingredients; toss to mix thoroughly. Makes six servings.

We are trying to retain that same spirit of dedication. Today's Red Cross is interested in so many projects that it has lost some of its purely medical thrust. The World Health Organization is more interested in disease control and long-term projects."

Dr. Kouchner adds, "We can't characterize the doctors who join us by their age—some are young medical students, some are retired physicians—or their reasons for joining. They may be with us because MSF expresses the ideals they learned in medical school. Or to escape personal problems, just like the men in the old Foreign Legion. The French medical establishment thinks we are nuts. Maybe we are—like some hangover from the 19th century, some vague and batty utopian organization. Maybe we are just doctors, doing what doctors should do."

What's Happening to Your Privacy?

by Phil Stanford

The federal government has on file a great deal of data about U.S. citizens—and the number of files is increasing. To examine the handling of all this information, the Privacy Protection Study Commission was established in 1975 under chairman David F. Linowes. This June, the commission is scheduled to make its recommendations to Congress and President Carter.

Linowes, who has had a long career as a certified public accountant, management consultant and director of several corporations, is not a man likely to be carried away by every new idea that comes along. He is, as he describes himself, "a cautious type of person"—one reason, no doubt, why he was chosen to be chairman of the Privacy Commission.

But Linowes is worried. "I don't want to overstate the problem," he said recently, "but I seriously believe that at some point in the not-so-distant future, data collection, maintenance and dissemination may no longer be merely a tool of society, but will instead become an end in itself—a force with awesome powers of surveillance and control over the lives of individuals."

One reason for Linowes' concern can be found in a little-known report entitled "Federal Personal Data Systems." Under the Privacy Act, passed by Congress in 1974, federal agencies are now required to publish a list of all their record systems and, with the exception of some law enforcement and intelligence agencies, the number of names in each one.

Billions of files

According to the report, which tabulates all the agencies' lists, the federal government today maintains 6723 different record systems containing a total of 3.9 billion individual files. That's 18 files for every man, woman and child in the United States.

Some of the most interesting lists belong to the intelligence agencies. According to its own report, the FBI has a fingerprint file on 62 million people and records of wiretaps on 480,000. Army counterintelligence maintains files on 106,468 citizens who have "come to their attention." The Drug Enforcement Administration has a file with the names of 1.6 million "known and suspected drug traffickers."

It isn't necessary, however, to be a known or suspected lawbreaker to be in a government file. In fact, as the report shows, every contact a person has with government is routinely recorded and filed away.

David F. Linowes, head of the Privacy Protection Study Commission, believes the amassing and computerization of data on U.S. citizens by the government and by commercial institutions is an increasing threat to individual rights.

There are extensive files on current and former federal employees. The Army, for example, has a file on 100,401 "military, retired military, military dependents and civilian employees with drug or alcohol problems." The Department of Health, Education and Welfare (HEW) has a similar file with 135,000 entries.

One of the surest ways of getting into a government filing system is to accept government assistance. Another is to participate in a government study. The report has pages of entries for records kept on HEW projects, such as the Massachusetts Sample Survey of Developmentally Disabled Persons, Seattle-Denver Income Maintenance Experiments, or a Boston study on the Impact of the Women's Movement on Educational and Occupational Behavior and Attitudes of Married Women.

In all, 85 federal agencies keep files on U.S. citizens. By department, the biggest record-keeper in the federal government is HEW, with 1.2 billion individual files. The Treasury Department, which includes the Internal Revenue Service, is next with 965 million. The Commerce Department has 440 million; the Defense Department, 317 million; Veterans Administration, 216 million, and the Justice Department, 133 million.

As Linowes points out, many of the records listed in the report have a legitimate purpose. "The danger," he says, "is that they will be used for purposes for which they weren't intended—for harassment or political purposes. We already know how confidential records have been abused at the highest levels of government—by the Nixon White House, for example."

Abuse via computers

The possibilities for abusing personal information are only increased by the computerization of government files, says Linowes. With computers, it is possible not only to store much more information than before, but also for one agency to hook up electronically with another agency's computers. As the report shows, more than 80 percent of the individual files maintained by the government are either wholly or partly computerized.

Yet, according to Linowes, records kept by federal agencies are only half of the problem—perhaps the lesser half. "There are substantially more records kept by the private, or commercial, sector than by the federal government," he says. It is safe to assume, he adds, that billions of personal records are kept by commercial institutions, such as credit card companies, airlines, banks, the telephone company and large retail chains.

One of the primary tasks of the Privacy Commission has been to determine the extent of commercial records on citizens. According to a preliminary staff estimate, three of the largest credit agencies in the country have a total of more than 100 million names on file. The Medical Information Bureau, which supplies information to insurance companies, has the medical records of approximately 12.5 million people. "One mailing-list company," says Linowes, "boasted that it has 70 million names.

"Once you get an accumulation of data of this magnitude—especially once it is on computers—it is possible to put together a precise analysis of the type of person you are—the magazines you subscribe to, the books you read, where you travel, the political and religious organizations you support, and so on."

According to Linowes, federal investigative agencies make regular use of the information collected by commercial organizations. Sometimes the information is requested under subpoena, sometimes informally. Last year, for example, the Bell System furnished to federal agencies the billing records of 20,565 customers.

Chief users

A study now being completed by the Privacy Commission staff shows that the principal government users of commercial data are the FBI and IRS. Frequent requests are also made by the CIA, the Securities and Exchange Commission, the Federal Energy Administration and the Drug Enforcement Agency.

The use of commercial data by federal investigative agencies is of particular concern, says Linowes, because it is virtually unregulated. When the Privacy Act was passed—largely in response to the abuses of the Watergate era—it laid down rules for the use of personal data collected by the federal government.

Besides requiring federal agencies to publish lists of the records they keep on U.S. citizens, the Privacy Act places restrictions on how data can be passed from one agency to another. Under it and the Freedom of Information Act, citizens can also demand to see their files and make sure that the information in them is accurate, up-to-date and relevant.

However, the Privacy Act failed to regulate the collection or use of commercial records. Instead, it set up the Privacy Commission to study the problem.

No easy answers

The answers do not come easily, says Linowes. On the one hand, both government and business need vast amounts of information in order to operate efficiently. On the other, the citizen, who is the subject of the information, needs protection against its misuse.

"What we must do," says Linowes, "is balance the needs of the collector against the individual's rights. Unfortunately, what has happened is that the balance has tipped too much in favor of the collector and too little in favor of the individual, who has been largely neglected."

Flavorful smoked pork

by BETH MERRIMAN
PARADE FOOD EDITOR

Savory is the word for these zesty steaks. Cut from a smoked pork shoulder butt, marinated overnight in a spicy orange sauce, then broiled to golden perfection—the resulting flavor is sheer delight. Served with rice, garnished with orange slices and accompanied by an unusual slaw, the meal is complete. Perhaps add a simple dessert.

ZESTY ORANGE PORK STEAKS

2 pounds smoked pork shoulder butt
1½ cups orange juice
1 teaspoon grated orange peel
⅓ cup firmly packed brown sugar
¼ cup spicy brown mustard
1 tablespoon vinegar
½ teaspoon ground ginger
Dash ground cloves

Cut pork shoulder in ¾-inch slices; place in shallow baking dish. Combine remaining ingredients; bring to boil; stir until well blended; pour over slices. Cover; marinate in refrigerator overnight.

Remove meat from marinade; pour liquid into small saucepan. Boil 5-10 minutes, until mixture is reduced and sauce is a good consistency for basting. Broil pork slices about four inches from source of heat 15-20 minutes, turning frequently and basting with sauce. To serve, pour any extra sauce over pork; garnish with orange slices and parsley. Makes four to six servings.

RED CABBAGE-FRUIT SLAW

2 winter pears, peeled, cored and diced
1 cup drained pineapple tidbits
½ cup French dressing
3 cups shredded red cabbage

Combine all ingredients; toss to mix thoroughly. Makes six servings.

Gas. It could change your brand to Fact.

You might not know it, but cigarette smoke is mostly gas—many different kinds. Not just 'tar' and nicotine.

And despite what we tobacco people think, some critics of smoking say it's just as important to cut down on some of the gases as it is to lower 'tar' and nicotine.

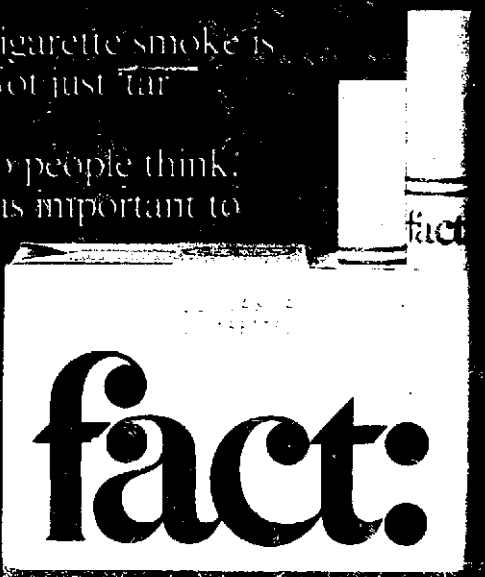

No ordinary cigarette does both. But Fact does.

Fact is the first cigarette with the revolutionary Purite filter. And Fact reduces gas concentrations while it reduces 'tar' and nicotine.

Read the pack. It tells how you get the first low gas, low 'tar' smoke with good, rich taste.

Taste as good as the leading king-size brand.

And that's not fiction. That's a Fact.

Fact is the first cigarette with Purite granules.
The selective filtering agent.
Selective.
That means it reduces specific gases in smoke that taste bad.
Without removing the elements that taste good.
So, for the first time, you get low gas, low "tar," and satisfying taste in one cigarette.
Fact: The low gas, low "tar."

Available in regular and menthol.

Fact: The low gas, low 'tar.'

my favorite jokes

by MORTY GUNTY

EDITOR'S NOTE: Things are going along as usual at Morty Gunty's house. He reports: "My wife's such a bad cook that the way she prepares a nice dinner is to put a large roast beef and a small roast beef in the oven at the same time. When the small one is burnt, she knows the large one is ready."

Morty has starred in musical comedy, played clubs from Caesars Palace in Las Vegas to the Fontainebleau in Miami Beach, and been on the top TV shows.

Here he is talking about his wife, mother, cousins, and telling some favorite jokes:

My wife is on a health food kick. Whatever she gets her hands on, she throws into the blender. Last week I drank a chicken.

Now I'm on carrot juice. My wife said: "Drink carrot juice. It'll make your eyes very strong." So I've been drinking it till it's coming out of my ears. But it works. My eyes are very strong, except I can't sleep at night—I see through my eyelids.

Recently my folks moved to Florida. My mother called me and said, "Come to visit." Of course, when my mother says to visit, I go because she is the exclusive Southeast distributor for guilt. She has an 800 toll-free number. Just call her up and you get an earful.

When I traveled on the road, she would always say, "As soon as you land, I want you to call on the phone and ask for yourself, just so I know you got there safely." So one day I called her and said, "Hello, is Morty Gunty there?" And she said, "No, he's not, and tell him to wear a sweater."

My wife is a city girl—she's lived in apartment houses all her life. And it shows. We were looking for a house in the country, and she asked the builder for a 17-room custom ranch house with a fire escape.

At the end of a family reunion, there's always one cousin who acts as the travel agent. It's his job to put the 75 relatives into five cars. And he goes to work: "All right, Larry, you take Harry and Bob. George, you take Sam and Phil. Jack, you go with Sid and Phyllis, Jerry with Bill . . . hold it, hold it! We have all the drivers in one car!"

Gas. It could change your brand to Fact.

You might not know it, but cigarette smoke is mostly gas – many different kinds. Not just "tar" and nicotine.

And despite what we tobacco people think, some critics of smoking say it's just as important to cut down on some of the gases as it is to lower "tar" and nicotine.

No ordinary cigarette does both. But Fact does.

Fact is the first cigarette with the revolutionary Purite filter. And Fact reduces gas concentrations while it reduces "tar" and nicotine.

Read the pack. It tells how you get the first low gas, low "tar" smoke with good, rich taste.

Taste as good as the leading king-size brand.

And that's not fiction. That's a Fact.

Fact is the first cigarette with Purite granules.

The selective filtering agent.

Selective.

That means it reduces specific gases in smoke that taste bad.

Without removing the elements that taste good.

So, for the first time, you get low gas, low "tar," and satisfying taste in one cigarette.

Fact: The low gas, low "tar."

Available in regular and menthol.

Fact: The low gas, low 'tar.'

Warning: The Surgeon General Has Determined That Cigarette Smoking Is Dangerous to Your Health.

IMPORTANT

HERE'S HOW YOU CAN TELL YOUR GEMFIRE DIAMONDS ARE NOT CHEAP COSTUME JEWELRY.

A. Count the facets. Gemfire stones all have 58 facets – just like expensive diamonds prepared by diamond cutters.

B. Examine your stone in a dimly lighted room. It should sparkle like in daylight. Gemfire stones sparkle even in the moonlight.

C. Study your ring under a powerful magnifying glass to look for flaws. Gemfire stones have clarity – are flawlessly perfect. No specks! No blemishes! No cracks!

D. Gemfire stones are so hard you can actually scratch your initial in glass with them! Prove it to yourself.

My favorite jokes

by Morty Gunty

EDITOR'S NOTE: Things are going along as usual at Morty Gunty's house. He reports: "My wife's such a bad cook that the way she prepares a nice dinner is to put a large roast beef and a small roast beef in the oven at the same time. When the small one is burnt, she knows the large one is ready."

Morty has starred in musical comedy, played clubs from Caesars Palace in Las Vegas to the Fontainebleau in Miami Beach, and been on the top TV shows.

Here he is talking about his wife, mother, cousins, and telling some favorite jokes:

My wife is on a health food kick. Whatever she gets her hands on, she throws into the blender. Last week I drank a chicken.

Now I'm on carrot juice. My wife said: "Drink carrot juice. It'll make your eyes very strong." So I've been drinking it till it's coming out of my ears. But it works. My eyes are very strong, except I can't sleep at night—I see through my eyelids.

Recently my folks moved to Florida. My mother called me and said, "Come to visit." Of course, when my mother says to visit, I go because she is the exclusive Southeast distributor for guilt. She has an 800 toll-free number. Just call her up and you get an earful.

When I traveled on the road, she would always say, "As soon as you land, I want you to call on the phone and ask for yourself, just so I know you got there safely." So one day I called her and said, "Hello, is Morty Gunty there?" And she said, "No, he's not, and tell him to wear a sweater."

My wife is a city girl—she's lived in apartment houses all her life. And it shows. We were looking for a house in the country, and she asked the builder for a 17-room custom ranch house with a fire escape.

At the end of a family reunion, there's always one cousin who acts as the travel agent. It's his job to put the 75 relatives into five cars. And he goes to work: "All right, Larry, you take Harry and Bob. George, you take Sam and Phil. Jack, you go with Sid and Phyllis, Jerry with Bill . . . hold it, hold it! We have all the drivers in one car!"
